SAUCHIE AND FISHCROSS.

SAUCHIE (New and Old) are populous villages immediately contiguous to each other, in the parishes of Alloa and Clackmannan, nearly 2 miles north of Alloa, on the road to Alva, with a station on the Stirling and Kinross branch of the North British railway. There is an Established church here, which was built in the year 1844, and the district is now formed into a quoad sacra parish. A great number of colliers, employed by the Alloa Company, reside in these villages, and there is a Sunday school for their children, maintained by an endowment known as Lady Charlotte Erskine's.

Fishcross is a village adjoining Sauchie to the east, in which is situated the Sauchie railway station.

Holton is a hamlet at the other end of the district.

In the three villages of Sauchie, New Sauchie and Fishcross, the population in 1891 was 2,373, and in the quoad sacra parish of Sauchie, 3,370.

TILLICOULTRY,

WITH COALSNAUGHTON.

TILLICOULTRY is a parish and police burgh, in Stirling poor combination and in the small debt court district of Alloa, on the road from Stirling to Kinross, south-east of the Ochill hills, 5 miles north-east of Alloa, 2 east of Alva, 9 north-east from Stirling and 13 south-west from Kinross, with a station on the Stirling and Kinross branch of the North British railway, half a mile distant from the town. Ben Cleuch, the loftiest of the Ochill range, rises to 2,300 feet above the sea level, a few miles to the north of the town, and the view from the summit of this mountain is very grand and extensive. The Devon river winds along the north border of and through the parish. The inhabitants adopted the Police and Improvement Act (1862) in 1871, and the town is governed by a provost, two bailies and six commissioners; it is well supplied with water from a stream which comes from the hills to the north of the village. The name of the parish is supposed to be derived from the Gaelic word "Tullich-Cut-Tiz," signifying the hill at the back of the country. The town is rapidly rising into a place of considerable importance from the woollen manufactures established here, and likewise at Devonside, chiefly for making shawls, fancy plaids, clan tartans, tweeds &c.; in these branches the town and its neighbourhood furnish employment to a large number of the inhabitants. The parish abounds in coal, and the hills to the northward are said to contain various kinds of minerals, and about a century ago a copper mine here was wrought by a London company; the metal sold at £50 per ton, but from the thinness of the seams the works were abandoned as unprofitable. Branches of the Clydesdale Bank Limited and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited are established in the town. In 1878 the late James Archibald esq. presented to the Commissioners the sum of £1,500 for the erection of a tower and spire to the Popular Institute, which is situate on the north side of the town, to which have now been added an illuminated clock and bell. An orphanage was founded by the liberality of the late James Paton esq. who bequeathed £5,000 towards the endowment of such an institution. The building, which is situated at the north side of the town, was opened on the 21st March, 1879, and is capable of accommodating 30 inmates. The principal antiquities are the ruins of a circular building on a steep and rugged basaltic eminence which rises to the north of the town, and the remains of a Druidical circle on the south end of a rising ground lying to the east of it, called Cuninghar. In 1862 two urns, each about 18 inches in diameter and the same in height, containing human bones, were found in making excavations within this circle; and again in 1894 another urn was discovered, as well as a very complete grave of the Stone period containing a food urn. The places of worship are a church of the Establishment, a Free church, a United Presbyterian church, an belonging to a congregation of the Evangelical Union and one for the Congregationalists. The parish church is almost a square building, situated on rising ground at the east end of the town: it is in the Gothic style of architecture, the buttresses terminating in lofty and tastefully carved finials. Board schools were erected in the centre of the High street, in 1875, at a cost of about £3,000. The principal landowners in the parish are Robert G. Wardlaw Ramsay esq. J.P. of Tillicoultry House; James Orr esq. of Harviestoun, and Charles Blair esq. of Glenfoot.

Coalsnaughton is a small hamlet in the parish of and about a mile from Tillicoultry, where there are Board schools (erected in 1873), and a church for the United Presbyterians. The population in 1891 was 888.

Devonside is a hamlet in the parish. Population in 1891, 687.

The parish of Tillicoultry is in the presbytery of Dunblane, and comprises an area of 6,946 acres; rateable value, £16,449; in 1891 it had a population of 5,695, the burgh containing 3,939, and 927 inhabited houses.

[VILLAGE TRANSFERRED FROM STIRLINGSHIRE TO CLACKMANNANSHIRE.]

MENSTRIE is a village, situated at the base of the Ochil hills, on the road from Stirling to Dollar, 5 miles north-east from the former, 5 east from Bridge of Allan and 2 west from Alva, in the small debt court district of Alloa, and having a station on the Alloa and Alva branch of the North British railway; it was originally in the parish of Logie (Stirlingshire), but on the transfer of Alva parish from Stirling to Clackmannanshire, this village was, by Boundary Order No. 124, transferred into Alva parish, where it still continues for civil purposes though its church is under that of Logie. The manufacture of woollen fabrics gives employment to many of the inhabitants, and there is a large distillery. An old house in the village is pointed out as having been the birth-place of Sir William Alexander, statesman and poet during the reign of James VI. Having become an especial favourite with that monarch, he conferred on him an order of knighthood, besides various offices of high trust; he was afterwards created Viscount Canada, and first Earl of Stirling, at the coronation of Charles I. at Holyrood, in consideration of his services and of having been the founder of the colony of Nova Scotia: the estates at a subsequent period passed into the possession of the Abercrombie family, and it was in the same house that in the year 1734 was born Sir Ralph Abercromby, who died of wounds received at Alexandria, Egypt, 1801, his widow subsequently being raised to the peerage as Baroness Abercromby of Aboukir. Lord Abercromby D.L., J.P. is the principal landowner. The population in 1891 was 1,006, and in 1881, 918; rateable value, £5,908.

DUMBARTONSHIRE,

ANCIENTLY designated Lennox, and subsequently Dun-bartonshire (which latter, though not the most popular, is the proper appellation), is a small county in the west of Scotland, and considered as within the boundary of the Highlands. From Inverannan Hotel, Perthshire, in the north, it runs trending eastwards from near Dumbarton to Maryhill, a little north of Glasgow, being a length of 39 miles, by a breadth varying from 2 miles at Arrochar, between Lochs Long and Lomond, to 9 between Dumbarton and Kilmarnock; its boundaries are, north, Argyllshire and Perthshire, west Loch Long, south the Clyde, east and north-east Stirlingshire and Loch Lomond; the parishes of Cumbernauld and Kirkintilloch, however, are not included in this measurement, being detached from the main portion on the south-east, and lying between the counties of Lanark and Stirling. This severed portion of the county is twelve miles long by from two to four and a half broad, and was annexed to the district in the reign of Robert I. The entire shire embraces an area of 241 square miles, or 154,542 acres. The population of the county in 1891 consisted of 46,930 males and 47,565 females; total, 94,495, and in 1881 of 75,333; the number of inhabited houses in 1891 was 18,309. In point of size this county stands as the twenty-eighth, and in population as the tenth.

Name and Early History.—In ancient times the name of the shire was "Levanach," signifying "the county of Leven," which was corrupted in the course of years to "Levenax," and more latterly to "Lennox." Originally this district was the residence of a British tribe designated the "Attacottie" or "Eithacacti," a word importing "dwellers along the extremity of the wood." The descendants of this people were not enslaved or expelled from their hunting grounds by the Romans, who erected a wall or dyke from near Dunglass Point in this county, to the Firth of Forth, some remains of which can be traced at Cumbernauld and in the town of Kirkintilloch; they became known as the Britons of Strath-Clyde, and, though almost perpetually at variance with their neighbours, they remained a distinct race till the reign of Malcolm IV. From these people the name of Dumbartonshire is said to be derived, and taken from the appellation of the castle, signifying "the hill of the Britons." This region, until the early part of last century, continued to be the ready prey of certain lawless Highland clans, who lurked in the recesses of its interior, and were finally extirpated or reduced to quiescence and subordination only by the most vigorous measures that could be adopted by the civil government of the country. It was at one period the property of a powerful family of Saxon origin, one of whom, called Alwyn, the son of Arkil, was elevated to be Earl of Lennox in the reign of William the Lion, and his descendants for several centuries were at once heritable sheriffs of the county and chief possessors of its lands. The Earldom of Lennox was raised to a Dukedom in 1581; but Charles, the sixth Duke, dying without issue in 1672, the honours of the family, including the Earldom of Darnley, developed upon Charles II. as nearest male heir, who bestowed them on his natural son, Charles Lennox, after whose demise the estates were sold.

Soil, Produce &c.—The soil is various, consisting in the north and west of mountain and moor, and south and east of Loch Lomond of deep black loam, clay, gravel and bog and peat. The climate generally is good, along the vale of the Leven and the Clyde it is mild, but on the Kilpatrick Braes and among the mountains of Arrochar and Luss the cold is rather severe, and stormy weather is experienced. A large part of the county is planted with wood, the soil and climate having been found favourable to the growth of timber. The chief crops are oats, 7,602 acres; potatoes, 2,149; turnips, 1,535; wheat, 797; hay, 8,683; the total corn crop being 8,774 acres and green crops, 3,997 acres; land under hay, 14,760; permanent pasture, 23,024; total area of land and water, 170,762 acres. The live stock in 1894 comprised 2,019 horses; 14,807 cattle; 77,800 sheep and 1,622 pigs. The cattle of the shire are chiefly of the West Highland breed, some of which are reared in the county. The roads throughout have been greatly extended and improved of late years. A century has elapsed since the manufacturing industry was introduced into this part of Scotland—bleachfields about that period making their appearance on the banks of Loch Lomond and the Leven. About 1768 the first printworks were established on the Leven, but now calico printing and Turkey-red dyeing are very extensively pursued at several places. Ship building, both iron and wood, is a branch of some importance, as is also the manufacture of chemicals. Until 1831, the glass works of this county were in high repute, Dumbarton being their chief seat, but they have now ceased to exist. Dumbartonshire does not contain numerous minerals, but it has an abundance of freestone, and some coal and ironstone. The production in 1895 was fire-clay, 26,708 tons, value £4,563; coal, 400,339 tons, value £136,782; iron ore, 42,859 tons, value £17,144 and limestone, 8,394 tons.

Mountains, Lakes, Railways &c.—Of hills, most of which lie in the northern part of the county, between Loch Lomond and Loch Long, the chief are those of Arrochar, Luss, Row, and Roseneath, which are inaccessible to the plough, and abound with moors, mosses and woods; the hills of Kilpatrick, on the south, are of much less height, Ben Voirlich, adjoining Perthshire, having the greatest altitude, rising 3,300 feet above the level of the sea. The other principal elevations are Ben Vane, 3,004 feet; Ben Eich, 2,302 feet; Ben Breach, 2,233 feet; Ben Reoch, 2,168 feet; and Tullich, 2,075 feet. The precipitous and rugged summits of these mountains, constituting the Highland district, are frequently capped with snow, and in the finest weather hid amidst the clouds; some of these eminences are apparently volcanic, particularly the rock on which Dumbarton Castle stands. There are about ten lakes or lochs, among which are Loch Long and Loch Gare, projecting into the Highland territory from the Firth of Clyde; but the most extensive is that of Loch Lomond. It lies at the foot of the Grampian mountains, which terminate here, but seem to rise in many islands that appear a continuation of them. These islands, thirty-two in number, are lofty and picturesque. On Inch Cailoch (or the island of Nuns) are the remains of a conventual church, and on Inch Murrins (or the island of St. Murrinus, two miles long, and converted into a deer park) are the ruins of a house once belonging to the Lennox family. This Loch is thirty miles long, in some places eight broad, and covers a surface of 20,000 acres; the depth varies from twenty to one hundred fathoms. It abounds with delicious trout, and the southern part has salmon. The lake discharges its waters into the Clyde by the river Leven, which is the only stream of any note in the district. The Forth and Clyde Canal, about 35 miles in length, extends from Bowling on the Clyde to Grangemouth on the Forth. The North British railway enters the county from Glasgow, a little west of Maryhill, throwing off a branch to Bearsden and Milngavie, and continuing on to Dumbarton, where it divides, one branch going north to Balloch on Loch Lomond and north-east to Drymen, the other passing on to Helensburgh, where it joins the West Highland line; this latter runs by Garelochhead, Arrochar and Ardlui (head of Loch Lomond) to Fort William; the two detached parishes of Kirkintilloch and Cumbernauld, lying north-east of Glasgow, are traversed by the North British and the Caledonian railways, and the last named have also commenced to make a new line by the north of the Clyde to Dumbarton &c.

Divisions, Representation &c.—Dumbartonshire is divided into 12 parishes, 10 of which are in the presbytery of Dumbarton and 2 in that of Glasgow; it contains but one royal burgh—Dumbarton—and four burghs of barony. The only contributory burgh belonging to the county is Dumbarton, which unites with Renfrew, Rutherglen, Kilmarnock and Port Glasgow, styled the Kilmarnock Burghs, in returning one member to the Imperial Parliament The parliamentary constituency for 1891-92 was 12,292. The valuation of the county for 1894-5 was, exclusive of churches, railways, and canals, £418,224; of churches (landward) £2,676; railways (landward), £89,218; total, exclusive of the burgh of Dumbarton, £510,118.

ALEXANDRIA is a town and quoad sacra parish in the parish of Bonhill and in Dumbarton small debts court district and poor combination, on the west side of the river Leven, here crossed by a bridge, and opposite to Bonhill. The town consists of several well-built streets, and has a station on the North British railway. The trade consists largely in the printing of fabrics, and there are several extensive print works on the banks of the river. The Public Hall is centrally situated at the bridge end. The Ewing Gilmour Institute, presented to the town by W. Ewing Gilmour esq. at a cost of about £12,000, consists of library, reading and recreation rooms. The Scottish Girls' Friendly Society occupies premises erected, with an endowment, at a cost of upwards of £20,000, entirely defrayed by W. E. Gilmour esq. of Woodbank; and opened 21st May, 1891. The public drinking fountain in Main street was erected in 1870, in honour of the late Alexander Smollett esq. of Bonhill, by his friends and tenants. BALLOCH is a village in the parish of Bonhill, at the south end of Loch Lomond, and about a mile north-west from Bonhill, and has a terminal station on the North British railway. In 1842, Sir James Colquhoun bart. of Luss, erected an elegant suspension bridge across the Leven water, in place of the ferry previously in use. The old bridge has been superseded by a substantial iron girder bridge, supported from the bed of the river by stone pillars, and opened for traffic in 1888. The bridge toll ceased on May 15. 1895. There are two hotels: the Balloch hotel at the foot of Loch Lomond, and the Tullichewan temperance hotel, both adjoining the station. A fair is held at Balloch on the Tuesday before the last Wednesday in April for cattle, and on the 15th of September for horses—the latter being the largest fair in Scotland.

CLYDEBANK, a rapidly increasing district in the parish of Old Kilpatrick, was constituted a burgh 21st Dec. 1886, and includes Dalmuir, Kilbowie and Yoker; a small portion of the town is in Renfrewshire. A branch line of the North British railway from Clydebank to Partick was opened in Dec. 1882, and continued on to Yokill, Feb. 1885; at Stobcross junction this line joins the underground railway for Glasgow (Queen st.). The large ship building yard and engineering works of Messrs. J. & G. Thomson Lim. covering 30 acres of land, are situated here, and give employment to 4,000 men. The municipal government is vested in a provost, 3 bailies, and 9 commissioners. There is an Established church, the Hamilton Free church, erected in 1884, the Clydebank United Presbyterian church, built in 1887, and places of worship for Roman Catholics and Wesleyans, the last erected in 1886. The public hall, opened in Sept. 1884, will hold 1,000 persons, and has an attached public library and reading room.

Dalmuir is about 7 miles east from Dumbarton, in the parish of Old Kilpatrick and partly in the burgh of Clydebank, with a station on the North British railway; the village occupies an elevated site commanding fine views of the Clyde and the surrounding country. There are engineering and calico printing works here. Population in 1891, 2,047.

Radnor Park is a village about three quarters of a mile from Dalmuir and Kilbowie stations, both on the North British railway. Population in 1891, with Dalmuir Hill, 1,581, and rappidly increasing.

At Kilbowie are the extensive works of the Singer Manufacturing Company, which cover 46 acres of ground, and employ about 8,000 persons. The population of Kilbowie in 1881 was 1,593, and in 1891, 3,593.

Yoker is a village about 4 miles south-east from Old Kilpatrick, and 6 north-west from Glasgow, with a station on the North British railway; the eastern portion of the village is in the county and burgh of Renfrew. Here is a distillery. Population in 1891, 1,823.

The population of the police burgh in 1891 was 9,998, while the town contained 10,589; in 1881 Clydebank was returned as having only 1,634.

CUMBERNAULD.

CUMBERNAULD is a parish and ancient village on the main road between Glasgow and Edinburgh, in a detached portion of the county and in the small debt court district of Dumbarton, 33 miles west from Edinburgh, 29 east from Dumbarton, 14 north-east from Glasgow, 13 south from Stirling, 9 west from Falkirk, 7 east from Kirkintilloch and 7 north from Airdrie, with a station on the Caledonian railway, and from 2 to 3 miles from Croy, Dullater and Castle Cary stations on the North British railway. The weaving of checks and other striped fabrics by hand-loom for the Glasgow manufacturers is carried on here; but the staple business of the district is mining, there being several coal and lime works and many quarries of good freestone in the neighbourhood as well as two fire-clay works. The parish church stands on an eminence embosomed in trees, and at the west end of the village: there is also a Free church, erected in 1826, a good public library and a subscription news room. Cumbernauld House, the property of John W. Burns esq. D.L., J.P. is at present (1896) occupied by Henry Harris esq. The annual fair is held on the second Thursday in May, for cattle, horses &c. John W. Burns esq. Alexander Whitelaw esq. The Carron Company, John Motherwell esq. Walter Stewart esq. Matthew Rankin esq. John Duncan esq. Thomas Duncan esq. George Campbell esq. Hamilton Brown esq. and Alexander B. Cleland esq. are the principal landowners. The population in 1891 was 4,283, including 960 in the village, and in 1881 was 4,270, with 1,064 in the village. The parish has an area of 11,635 statute acres; rateable value, £19,820.

Condorrat is a small village in this parish, and about 3 miles west from Cumbernauld. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the coal and ironstone mines and quarries here, but hand-loom weaving is also carried on. The population in 1881 was 715, and in 1891, 606.

Dullatur is a hamlet in this parish, on the borders of Stirlingshire, with a railway station.

Castlecary is a small hamlet in this parish, about 2 miles north-east of Cumbernauld, but in the county of Stirling. Croy is a small village in this parish, and distant from Cumbernauld about 3 miles; each of these two places has a station on the North British railway.

DUMBARTON.

DUMBARTON ("dun Bretann," the Welshmen's fortress) is a town and royal burgh, the capital of the county, head of a poor combination and a parish, 59 miles west from Edinburgh, 15 north-west from Glasgow, 8 south-east from Helensburgh, and 3 south from Alexandria, with a station on the North British railway; it is principally on a low piece of ground, nearly encompassed on its western quarter by the river Leven, about half a mile from its junction with the Clyde, and almost secluded from the view of persons on the latter river by the intervening of Dumbarton rock, a huge rocky eminence on the edge of the Frith, and about half a mile from the town. From 1675, Dumbarton gave the title of Earl to a branch of the Douglas family, but it became extinct on the death of George 2nd Earl, some time after 1716. The present town, which stands at a short distance up the river Leven, is chiefly composed of one main street, disposed in a semicircular form around the head or north end of the peninsula; there are, however, some beautiful avenues lined with detached houses, and an extensive suburb on the west side of the Leven leading to Renton, which is connected with the town by a good stone bridge of five arches, 300 feet in length. The waters of the Leven form a commodious harbour, and an excellent quay and public dock have been constructed. The pier, which belongs to the corporation, was erected at a cost of £12,000, and opened in May, 1875. It extends 765 feet from the base of the castle rock, southwards, towards the channel of the river Clyde; the gangway is 640 feet in length and 15 feet broad, and the pier head is 90 feet long and 25 feet wide. The depth of water at the extremity of the pier head is ten feet at low tide, so that steamers can lie alongside at all times. The Clyde Navigation is controlled by a body of trustees. The principal trade, and that on which the prosperity of the town now chiefly depends, is comprised in shipbuilding and engineering, both of which are carried on extensively, and in ordinary times about 3,000 men are employed at the different works. Brewing, tanning, ironfounding, and sail and rope making are also pursued to a limited extent, but the manufacture of crown glass, once an important craft here, ceased in 1848. The town is lighted with gas, from works in the hands of the corporation. A plentiful supply of water is obtained from the Long Craigs and Loch Humphrey, and the drainage of the town is being gradually completed. Dumbarton was erected into a royal burgh by Alexander II. in the year 1222, and its privileges (including the right of fishing in the Leven) were confirmed by a charter of James VI. The municipal government is vested in a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer and eight councillors. The sheriff ordinary court and the commissary court are held every Tuesday and Friday during session, the sheriff small debt court every Tuesday during the session, and on vacation court days. Quarter sessions are held on the first Tuesday in March, May and August, and last Tuesday in October. Dumbarton, together with Kilmarnock, Renfrew, Rutherglen and Port Glasgow, forms the Kilmarnock parliamentary district, returning one member; the boundaries of the district were extended under the "Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885" (48 & 49 Vict. c. 23.). Kilmarnock is the returning burgh. The County and Burgh buildings, completed in 1825, at an expense exceeding £5,000, were reconstructed, and two spacious wings added in 1863, at a cost of £5,170. They contain court rooms, various offices, and at the rear of the Court house is a gaol, not now used, prisoners being sent on to Glasgow. The Sheriff and Commissary Courts, and the meetings of the Commissioners of Supply are held here; and here also is the Justice of the Peace office. The County Police offices are in Church street, and those of the borough in Quay street. The William Denny Institute, in Church street, a fine edifice of stone, was opened on the 26th January, 1892, at a cost of upwards of £7,600, raised by public subscription, and was built as a memorial to William Denny esq. who died at Buenos Ayres, 17th March, 1887. The institute contains a Free Public library and reading room, established under the "Public Libraries Act, 1855," adopted here in 1881; the library comprises about 5,000 volumes. The Mechanics' Institute is also in Church street; the School of Art is carried on in the County buildings, and there is also a Literary and Philosophical Society. In High street are branches of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. The British Linen Co. has a branch in Strathleven place. The principal hotels are the Elephant and the Lennox Temperance hotel. Three weekly newspapers are published here—the "Dumbarton Herald," the "Lennox Herald" and the "Dumbarton Observer." There is a Cottage Hospital at Braehead; the combination poor house, at Tow end, was completed in 1865, at a cost of about £7,000, and is situated on the outskirts of the town, in a healthy and pleasant locality. The C company, 1st Dumbartonshire Rifle Corps has its head quarters at the Drill hall, in McLean place, Church street, and the 5th and 6th Garrison Companies, Renfrew and Dumbarton Volunteer Artillery, have a Drill hall in Risk street. The parish church, at the east end of High street, erected in 1811 at a cost of £6,000, is a handsome edifice, with a fine spire and clock. There are also two Free churches, two United Presbyterian churches; the Episcopal church, in High street and Church street, is an edifice of stone, and was erected in 1873. The mission hall in Church street, was built at a cost of £1,500, and there are also Wesleyan Methodist, Evangelical Union and Baptist chapels and a Roman Catholic church. Of the ancient collegiate church, founded in 1450, by Isabella, Duchess of Albany and Countess of Lennox, and dedicated to St. Mary, all that now remains is one of the tower arches, which has been removed and placed at the entrance of the late Burgh school, in Church street; the Dumbartonshire railway now passes over the site of the church. The Burgh Academy, an institution of long standing, has been rebuilt in the French Gothic of the 13th century, and has a frontage of 132 feet, with a central tower, 140 feet high. The upper floor is in part assigned to the Dumbarton School of Art, inaugurated Nov. 25th, 1884, and in the rear is a large public hall, capable of holding about 750 persons. The interior of the school building was entirely destroyed by fire in 1882, but has since been refitted and furnished. The cost of both buildings was about £6,000. There are also 3 Board schools, a Roman Catholic school and a stone building, in Risk street, formerly used as an Episcopalian school; the cost, including the grounds, was £5,000, which was defrayed by Richard D. Buchanan esq. of Auchentorlie, Bowling. Levengrove Park, covering about 35 acres, was presented to the town by Peter Denny esq. of Helenslee, and John Macmillan esq. of College Park, as a public park, and opened 30 May, 1885. It is pleasantly situated, and bounded by the Clyde and Leven, and the grounds have been tastefully laid out at a cost of about £20,000. A cattle market is held on Wednesday, and is well attended; a large cattle fair is also held on Carman Moor on the first Wednesday in June. The rock of Dumbarton, its most striking and most famous feature, is an isolated mass of basaltic rock, on the margin of the river Clyde, a mile in circumference at its base, but diminishing in breadth near the top, which is cloven into two summits, one higher than the other; these are almost perpendicular, and rise to a height of more than 300 feet above the level of the stream. It has been occupied by defensive works of varied character for many centuries, but of the ancient castle no remains now exist. In Bede's time it was deemed almost impregnable; but it was reduced by famine in 756, and in 1291 was surrendered to Edw. I.; John Balliol regained it in 1292, and Bruce held it in 1309; in 1481 it was besieged by the English, and having been taken, was annexed to the Crown in 1485; in 1540 it was visited by James V. and in 1547-8 served as a place of refuge for Queen Mary; in 1571, May 2, it was invested and captured by the troops of the Regent Lennox; from 1639 to 1640, it was alternately held by the Covenanters and the king, but in 1652 fell into the hands of Cromwell. On the union of the kingdoms in 1707, it was named as one of the four fortresses agreed to be kept in repair. The buildings now forming what is called the Castle comprise a guardhouse and lodging for the officers, from whence there is an ascent by some flights of steps to the part where the rock divides; here is a strong battery, barracks for the garrison, other necessary buildings, and two large tanks always kept filled with water; above these are several batteries which command a most extensive range, especially up and down the Clyde; these defences are kept in constant repair, and there is a small garrison. The governor's house, a modern structure, is placed in the cleft of the rock, some parts of which are magnetic.

Overtoun is the seat of Lord Overtoun J.P., F.R.G.S.; Dalmoak Castle is the seat of James Aiken esq. and Strathleven is the seat of Mrs. Ewing. Mrs. Denny, of Helenslee, Lord Overtoun, of Overtoun and Col. Alexander Crum-Ewing J.P., V.D. of Strathleven are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 8,291 acres; rateable value, £48,004; the population in 1891 was 14,065, including 13,157 in the town and 699 in Burnside, and in 1881 was 10,902, with 10,304 in the town and 396 in Burnside. The population of the town (part of which is in Cardross parish) was 17,626 in 1891 and 14,172 in 1881.

Dalreoch is a quoad sacra parish, formed from that of Cardross, within the burgh of Dumbarton, but separated from it for ecclesiastical purposes, and has a station on the North British railway. The parish church was erected in 1873 at a cost of £2,000, and there is a public hall, built at a cost of £1,400. Population in 1891 was 3,979.

Knoxland is a quoad sacra parish within the burgh of Dumbarton, but separated from it for ecclesiastical purposes. The parish church, erected in 1883-4 at a cost of £4,500, is an edifice in the Gothic style and will seat 800 persons. The Rev. John Smith has been minister since 1886. Population in 1891 was 3,870.

DUNTOCHER is a considerable village and quoad sacra parish in the civil parish of Old Kilpatrick, 2 miles north from Kilpatrick, 52 west from Edinburgh and 9 from Glasgow. The principal part of the village is lighted with gas supplied by the corporation of Glasgow and is governed by a landward committee of parish council of Kilpatrick. The Established church here was erected in 1836, at an expense of £1,700. Here is an ancient bridge over the Dalmuir Burn, a small river issuing from Loch Humphrey, said to have been built under the auspices of the Emperor Hadrian by Quintus Lollius Urbicus, his lieutenant, and restored by Lord Blantyre in 1772 and near it is a stone with a Latin inscription recording these things. The population of the town in 1891 was 2,154, and in 1881, 1,572; that of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891 was 3,233.

The interesting and beautiful Glenfruin is approached from here. There are Established and Free churches. HARDGATE, see KILPATRICK.

HELENSBURGH is a modern town, burgh of barony, police burgh and seaport in the civil parish of Row, 22 miles west-north-west from Glasgow, 9 south from Luss, 5 from Greenock and 8 north-west from Dumbarton, with a station on the West Highland section of the North British railway. The town, which lies on the Firth of Clyde, and is a perpetual feu from Sir James Colquhoun bart. of Luss, was commenced in 1777, and since that date has come to be regarded as the most agreeable watering place on the Clyde; it consists of a number of streets, well and conveniently laid out, and affords good accommodation for visitors, numerous private houses being open for the reception of families or individuals resorting hither in the summer. Helensburgh was elevated to the rank of a burgh of barony in 1802; its municipal government is vested in 12 police commissioners, being three for each of the four wards into which the town is divided. A Police Court is held every Monday, and at other times when required. The town is lighted with gas and supplied with water from works. The original pier is now called the Old pier, a new pier having been erected by the North British Railway Co. in 1882, at Craigendoran, about 1½ miles east of the town, in connection with the station there, which is the starting point of the West Highland railway, opened in 1893, and providing an entirely new route to Fort William and the Western Highlands. The quay, erected in 1817, and greatly enlarged in 1872, extends from the centre of the town into the river for a considerable distance. The Municipal Buildings, in East Princes street, form a handsome modern edifice, embracing a court hall, council chamber, and general public offices, with police station and cells in the rear. There is also a Fire Brigade. The Public Hall is in East King street. The Victoria Hall, in Sinclair street, was built at a cost of £6,000 and there are Town Mission, Masonic and Oddfellows' halls, reading rooms and circulating libraries. Helensburgh was created a quoad sacra parish in 1862, and a west quoad sacra parish was formed in 1872. In the vicinity and near the banks of the Clyde are several elegant seats and residences. The Infirmary and Hospital are both in North King street; the latter, built at a cost of £3,000, contains under one roof a hospital for infectious diseases and one for non-infectious cases, each having a separate entrance and distinct airing grounds. There is also a Children's Convalescent Home in Glasgow street. No. 4 Garrison Company, 1st Renfrew and Dumbartonshire Volunteer Artillery, is stationed here, and has a Drill hall in Lomond street; Helensburgh is also the head quarters of the 1st Dumbartonshire Rifle Corps, whose Drill hall is in East Princes street. The Bank of Scotland, in West Clyde street, is a fine stone building in the baronial style, and was erected at a cost of £3,000; the Union Bank Limited, in Colquhoun square, and the Clydesdale Bank Limited, in James street, are also both substantial buildings of stone. The Imperial Hotel is opposite the old pier, and some distance east of the town is the Queen's Hotel. On the Esplanade stands an obelisk, erected as a memorial to Henry Bell, the engineer, mentioned subsequently. The Public park, presented to the town by William Kidston esq. and the late Sir James Colquhoun bart. is situated at the foot of the Gare Loch, and commands an excellent view of the surrounding scenery. In the neighbourhood of Helensburgh resided for 25 years the celebrated Henry Bell, millwright and engineer, to whose fertile and persevering genius Europe is indebted for the first successful application of steam to the propelling of vessels. The first trip made by steamboat in this neighbourhood was made by the Comet from Port Glasgow to Helensburgh, in the year 1812. Mr. Bell was born in the parish of Torphichen, county of Linlithgow, April 7th, 1767, and died at his house (now the Queen's Hotel), in Helensburgh, Nov. 14th, 1830, and was interred in the parish churchyard of Row, where there is a memorial to him. Rateable value, £81,012 11s.; the population of the ecclesiastical parish of Helensburgh in 1891 was 5,213, and that of West Church (Helensburgh) 3,196; the population of the town was in 1891, 8,409, and in 1881, 7,693, that of the police burgh being the same.

KILPATRICK.

KILPATRICK (Old, or West) is a parish and village in Dumbarton poor combination, 53 miles west from Edinburgh, 10 north-west from Glasgow, and 5 east-south-east from Dumbarton, with a station on the North British railway. The water works at Cochna, constructed in 1874, supply Duntocher, Dalmuir and Clydebank, the area of the water district being 2,560 acres. The parish church, a neat edifice of stone, erected in 1812, has a square tower with a clock. Auchintorlie is the seat of George J. Ferguson-Buchanan esq. J.P.

Bowling is a small village about three-quarters of a mile west from Kilpatrick, with a station on the North British railway, and a landing stage for passengers and goods on the Clyde. The Forth and Clyde canal (now owned by the Caledonian Railway Co.) begins at Bowling Bay, and after a course of 35 miles empties itself into the Forth at Grangemouth. The canal, begun in 1768, and opened throughout on the 28th July, 1790, is available for vessels drawing 8 feet of water, having a 19 feet beam and a 73 feet keel. An outer basin, admitting vessels drawing 19 feet of water has been constructed for the discharge and shipment of cargoes for transit by the canal or rail. The Trustees of the Clyde Navigation have also a harbour here, for vessels laid up during the winter, or for sale. A new line is being constructed by the Caledonian Railway Co. from Glasgow through Dumbartonshire, and when complete there will be stations at each place, same as the N. B. Ry. Co. The Free church in Bowling was erected in 1869. The Buchanan Institute, presented to the village by the late Andrew Buchanan esq. of Auchintorlie, at a cost of about £1,000, and opened December 13th, 1884, comprises a library and reading and recreation rooms.

At Little Mill is a distillery and shipbuilding yard.

At Dunglass, half a mile west of Little Mill, are the ruins of some defensive works known as "Dunglass Castle," and in the grounds stands a memorial column, erected to Henry Bell, the eminent engineer, who ran the first steamboat on the Clyde in 1812.

Hardgate is about a quarter of a mile east from Duntocher, and Faifley about the same distance north.

Milton and Dumbuck are places on the road to Dumbarton. Milton House, the residence of Henry M. Napier esq. is pleasantly situated on a declivity, commanding an extensive and beautiful view of the Clyde. Population of Bowling, Little Mill and Dunglass in 1891, 829, and of Dumbuck and Milton, 640.

Lord Blantyre and G. J. Ferguson-Buchanan esq. J.P. of Auchintorlie, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 12,554 acres; rateable value, £96,000; the population of the parish in 1891 was 17,775; this included 10,264 in Clydebank and Dalmuir and 2,198 in Duntocher; in 1881 it was 8,862, including 3,521 in Clydebank and 1,572 in Duntocher.

NEW (or EAST) KILPATRICK is a parish and town in Dumbarton poor combination, formerly partly included in Stirlingshire, but in 1891 wholly transferred to the county of Dumbarton; it is upwards of 6 miles in extent from north to south, with a breadth of from 2 to 4 miles, and has a station, called Bearsden, on the Glasgow and Milngavie section of the North British railway. The Forth and Clyde canal intersects the northern part of the parish, entering it on crossing the Kelvin by a stupendous aqueduct. The district was separated from Old Kilpatrick, which bounds the parish on the west, in the year 1649. The parish church was erected in 1807. The village of New Kilpatrick adjoins that of Bearsden, and sometimes is called by that name. The Reformatory for Girls at East Chapelton is a fine building of stone, and was erected in 1882. Garscube House, the seat of Margaret, Lady Campbell, is pleasantly situated on the west side of the Kelvin. Canniesburn is about a quarter of a mile south from Bearsden station. Garscadden is a district about 2 miles north-west from New Kilpatrick. Garscadden House, the residence of Mr. Collings, is a fine old mansion, standing in a well-timbered park. The area comprises 12,050 acres, of which 9,303 were in Dumbartonshire and 2,747 in Stirlingshire; rateable value, £12,760; the population of the parish in 1891 was 8,309, including 416 in the burgh of Milngavie, and in 1881 was 7,414, with 213 in Milngavie.

KIRKINTILLOCH is a burgh of barony, a parish and an ancient town, situated in a detached portion of the county 40 miles west from Edinburgh, 20 south-south-west from Stirling, 16 east from Dumbarton, 16 west from Falkirk, 7 north from Glasgow, 7 west from Cumbernauld, 5 south-west from Kilsyth, 4 south-east from Campsie and 5 south-east from Campsie Glen, with two stations on the North British railway. The town is situated on the verge of a ridge by the water of Luggie, near to its junction with the Kelvin, and is lighted with gas from works originally erected by a private company, but acquired by the town under the Burgh Gas Supply Act, 1876. The Forth and Clyde canal, which passes through the town, affords a speedy and certain transit to the east or west coast of Scotland. The Monkland and Kirkintilloch Railway, which extends to Airdrie and joins the Ballochnie Railway about a mile from that town and also unites with the Garnkirk and Glasgow Railway, has a terminal station here. The Edinburgh and Glasgow line passes over the Monkland and Kirkintilloch, a mile south of the town, and near this is Lenzie Junction station. The weaving of lappet muslin is still carried on here, but is gradually dying out, the inhabitants being now chiefly employed at the different chemical and iron works on the canal bank. The iron foundries are now the principal industry of the district, and are steadily being enlarged. There are also nickel works, where the ore brought from New Caledonia is melted, and in the vicinity are coal and ironstone mines. Kirkintilloch is a free burgh of barony, its first charter, dated from Forres, having been conferred by William the Lion (1165-1214), when it was granted to William Cumyn, of Cumbernauld and Kirkintilloch, and this charter was subsequently confirmed and its privileges enlarged. The town was formerly governed by a senior and a junior magistrate, otherwise bailies, ten councillors, treasurer, and town clerk, but in 1871 the inhabitants adopted the General Police and Improvement (Scotland) Act, 1862, and their affairs are now administered by a body of 12 police commissioners. Burgh police courts are held fortnightly, or more frequently if occasion requires. The magistrates act also as dean of guild, in the erection of new buildings, &c.; justice of the peace courts are held only as may be required, and the sheriff's small debt circuit court on the fourth Mondays of January, April, July and October. The Court House and Gaol, which form a substantial building at the cross, is ornamented with a tower and spire, containing a clock with four dials. The police office is in Cowgate street, and there is a Fire Brigade station in Broadcroft. There are branches here of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, and a local Savings Bank. The K Company, 1st Dumbartonshire Rifle Corps is stationed here, and has a Drill hall in Cowgate street. The Broomhill Home, for the relief of incurables in Glasgow and the West of Scotland, besides maintaining about 100 patients in the home, affords relief to many others at their own residences; the original building, formerly the residence of the late R. J. Bartholomew esq. has been enlarged from time to time, and will now hold 100 patients, and a nurses' wing has recently been added, and was opened in May, 1895, by Her Grace the Duchess of Montrose. At Westermains is also a private asylum, with every necessary requisite for those mentally afflicted; Mr. James Lawrie, proprietor. On the bank of the Luggie, and near the bridge, stands a monument of red Aberdeen granite, erected by public subscription, to Mr. Hazleton Robson, of Glasgow, who, in endeavouring to save the life of a child who had fallen into the river, failed in the attempt and lost his own life; on the monument is a suitable inscription. About a mile to the east of the town, on the Inchbelly road, is the martyrs' stone, erected as a memorial to John Wharry and James Smith, two covenanters, who having been captured at Stevenson Wood, Inchbelly, and taken to Glasgow, were there tortured and then executed and their remains afterwards carried to Inchbelly Wood and buried in the moss. The parish church, built in 1644, is a cruciform structure, and stands near the centre of the town. St. David's is the church of a quoad sacra parish and there are also two Free churches, United Presbyterian and Original Secession churches, and Methodist, Baptist, and Roman Catholic chapels. The Vallum Antonini, or wall of Antoninus, a rampart of earth and turf, now called Graham's or Grime's dyke, was constructed about A.D. 140 by the Propraetor Lollius Urbicus, in the reign of Antoninus Pius, 138-161, on the line of an earlier series of defences raised by Agricola; it passed through this town, and one of the principal forts stood on the summit of a hill, a little west of the parish church; the site of this fort, now commonly called the "Peel," is still traceable by the deep moat which surrounded it. In 1893 (Aug. 28), a workman at the Lion foundry, which stands near the line of the wall, while engaged in digging sand, at a depth of about 16 feet from the surface, came upon a number of over 50 Roman coins of the Emperors Augustus (B.C. 31 to A.D. 14), Vespasian (A.D. 69-79) and Hadrian (A.D. 117-138), the whole being in a remarkable state of preservation; on further search more were discovered and also the steel head and part of the shaft of a spear. Alexander Whitelaw esq. D.L., J.P. of Gartshore; James Dalrymple esq.; the trustees of the late Capt. William McFarlane; Alexander Falconer Wallace esq. 20 Hyde Park gardens, London W.; Jas. Wallace esq.; Chas. G. H. Kinnear esq. of Edinburgh; James Duncan esq. and the trustees of the late William Burt Wright esq. are the principal landowners. The boundaries of the burgh were a few years ago extended. The entire parish of Kirkintilloch comprises an area of 7,146 statute acres; rateable value, £49,415; the population in 1891 was 12,427, including 9,390 in the burgh and in 1881 was 10,591, with 7,456 in the burgh.

KNOXLAND, see DUMBARTON.

LENZIE is a residential district and quoad sacra parish, 6 miles north-east from Glasgow, and about 1 mile south of Kirkintilloch, with a junction station on the main line of the North British Railway, which divides it into two parts—North and South, the northern portion being in the parish of Kirkintilloch and county of Dumbarton, and the southern portion in the parish of Cadder and county of Lanark. The northern portion of Lenzie forms part of the police burgh of Kirkintilloch. The Episcopal church of St. Cyprian, built in 1873 at a cost of £4,000, is an edifice of stone in the Early English style, from designs by Dr. Alexander Ross, architect, of Inverness, and consists of chancel and nave, under a single roof, south porch and a tower on the south side, with pyramidal broach spire, and an octagonal turret at one angle surmounted by a spirelet; the stone altar was presented by the Rev. Francis Patrick Fleming LL.D. rector 1872-4, and the font, of Caen stone by Lady Edmonstone, of Duntreath Castle, Stirlingshire; several of the windows have been filled with stained glass by members of the congregation; the church affords 200 sittings. The value of the living is £200, with a house, situated at a short distance from the church: the Rev. Henry Williams Kirby, the present rector, was appointed by the vestry in 1876. The Barony Parish Lunatic Asylum, at Woodilee, Lenzie, in connection with the Barony Parish, Glasgow, erected in 1874-5 at a cost of £150,000, and opened 22 Oct. 1875, is a structure in the Elizabethan style, from designs by Messrs. James Salmon & Son, architects, of Glasgow. The buildings include a recreation hall, about 90 feet square, with a ceiling panelled in Kauri wood, and a stage for musical and dramatic performances, a dining hall, recently enlarged, 120 single rooms, dormitories for 730 patients, and administrative department, and a chapel with a stained window, and an elegant flèche on the roof, and seating 400 persons. The estate, comprising 382 acres, was purchased in 1852 by the Barony Parochial board, for a sum of over £30,000, and the various additions and improvements made to the buildings have brought their total cost up to £250,000. The Glasgow Convalescent Home, situated here, about half-a-mile to the south-east of the railway station, is available for 85 patients, 30 of whom are received from the Glasgow Royal Infirmary, 45 from among residents in Glasgow and neighbourhood and 10 from the Western Infirmary of Glasgow: the board of management consists of members selected by the subscribers and various public and charitable bodies in the city of Glasgow. Lenzie Academy is under the management of a combination board, the members of which represent the two parishes of Kirkintilloch and Cadder. The population of the portion of Lenzie within the police burgh of Kirkintilloch in 1891 was 918, and of that without the burgh 76 in this county and 922 in Lanarkshire; total of the village, 1,916 and in 1881 the figures were 648, 95 and 573; total, 1,316. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891 was 1,645 in Kirkintilloch parish and 1,160 in Cadder parish (Lanarkshire); total, 2,805.

LITTLE MILL, see KILPATRICK.

LUSS is a parish and small village, in the Dumbarton small debts court district, 69 miles west-north-west from Edinburgh, 28 north-west from Glasgow, 13 north-north-west from Dumbarton, 10 north-north-west from Bonhill, 9 north-north-east from Helensburgh and 8 from Tarbet (the nearest) station on the North British railway. The village is delightfully situated on the western margin of Loch Lomond, and during the summer is much visited by tourists and pleasure parties. A fine view of the loch, with its numerous islands, is obtained from Strone hill, a considerable elevation about half a mile north of the inn. Steamboats sail every day (Sunday excepted), from the south end of the loch, calling at Balmala, Luss, Tarbet, Rowardennan, for Ben Lomond, Inversnaid &c. and returning the same afternoon. The only business of any importance carried on here is the quarrying of slate at Camstraddan and Luss slate quarries, from which considerable quantities of both blue and green slate are obtained, and conveyed to distant parts of the country by means of steam lighters on Loch Lomond to Balloch, and thence by rail. The parish church was dedicated to Saint Mackessog, a native of Lennox and a bishop and confessor, who suffered martyrdom about the year 520, at a place below Luss, on the side of the lake, where a large cairn of stone was raised to his memory. He is said to have been buried in the church. Here resided the learned Alexander Stewart D.D. Gaelic scholar, who translated the Bible into the Gaelic language; and died in May, 1821. Rossdhu House, about 2½ miles south of Luss, the seat of Sir James Colquhoun bart. J.P. of Luss, is a beautiful building, with a fine portico, seated on a low point of land, surrounded on three sides by Loch Lomond. Sir J. Colquhoun bart. Lord Lieutenant of Dumbartonshire, is the principal landowner. The area comprises 24,206 acres; rateable value, £5,976; the population in 1891 was 633 and in 1881, 719.

Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office & Savings Bank, Luss (Sub-Office. Letters should have S.O. Dumbartonshire added to them); Archibald Wilson, postmaster. Deliveries, 7 & 9.30 a.m. to callers; dispatches, 3.10 & 5.25 p.m

RENTON is a large village and quoad sacra parish in the civil parish of Cardross, one mile south-south-west from Bonhill, the like distance south from Alexandria and 2 north from Dumbarton, with a station on the North British Railway. The village is on the west bank of the Leven, on the banks of which are the extensive print works of Messrs. William Stirling & Sons. The Victoria Institute, built in 1887, at a cost, including the library, of about £2,000, as a memorial of Her Majesty's Jubilee, and opened on the day of that commemoration, consists of a library of from 3,000 to 4,000 volumes, reading and recreation rooms, and also comprises a working men's club. The public hall, in Main street, was erected in 1882. In the village stands an ornamental stone column, 60 feet in height, on a square base and erected as a memorial to Tobias Smollett M.D. the famous author of "Roderick Random," "Peregrine Pickle" and other productions. He was born here in 1721 and died near Leghorn, 21 Oct. 1771. The population of the town of Renton in 1891 was 5,256 and in 1881, 4,319, and the ecclesiastical parish in 1891 had a population of 5,293.

ROSENEATH is a village and parish, in Dumbarton poor combination, occupying the peninsula of Roseneath, and extending for about 7 miles from east to west, and from one to four broad. The parish church, a small modern edifice, stands within a quarter of a mile of the ferry and pier. There is also a Free church in the neighbourhood, and a United Presbyterian church at Clynder, which latter place and Rahane are districts in this parish, the former one mile and the latter 3 miles north from Roseneath village. The mansion of Roseneath, a seat of the Duke of Argyll K.G. is the principal object of interest. Kilcreggan is a village about 2 miles distant from Roseneath, over the hills. Cove is a village a mile further west, at the entrance to Loch Long; both are resorted to for sea bathing, and consist of a series of villas and mansions extending for 4½ miles along the shore; at each is a pier for the convenience of passing steamers. These two villages were formed into a police burgh in 1865, and are ecclesiastically in the quoad sacra parish of Craigrownie, which is separated from Roseneath and includes the whole burgh of Kilcreggan and Cove; the parish extends about 3 miles beyond Cove. There is an Established church. The area of Roseneath parish comprises 8,461 acres; rateable value, £21,385; the population in 1891 was 2,064, and in 1881, 1,994; the population of the ecclesiastical parish of Craigrownie in 1891 was 1,164. ROW is a parish and small village, in Dumbarton poor combination and small debts court district, about 2 miles west from Helensburgh, with a station on the West Highland railway. The parish of Row is chiefly of a hilly and pastoral character, and the low grounds are fertile and beautiful. Ardencaple Castle, on the north-west bank of the loch, was the birthplace (30 April, 1823) of the present Duke of Argyll K.G., K.T., P.C. A portion of the castle is of ancient date, but the greater part is comparatively modern; it commands a good view of the Clyde and the Gare Loch, to a distance of 7 miles into the mainland, and is now the residence of Sir William Orr Ewing bart. J.P. The parish, exclusive of a narrow strip on Loch Long, is about 6 miles in length by 4 in breadth, bounded by Luss on the east, Helensburgh on the south-east, on the west by Gare Loch, and its south end is washed by the Firth of Clyde. The parish church stands in the village, near the ferry across the Gare Loch to the peninsula of Roseneath. Acreage of the parish, 20,126; population of the parish in 1881, 9,972, and in 1891, 11,172.

DUMFRIES-SHIRE.

This is a large and important county in the south of Scotland, bounded on the east by the counties of Roxburgh and Selkirk, on the north-west by Ayrshire, on the south-west by the stewartry (or county) of Kirkcudbright, and on the north by the counties of Lanark, Peebles, and part of Selkirk; its south and south-eastern boundary is washed by the Solway Firth, and its south-eastern base is skirted by Roxburghshire and the English county of Cumberland. The length of the county, from north-west to south-east, is nearly 55 miles, and its extreme breadth, from the south to where it touches Peebles-shire on the north, is nearly 30 miles. According to the latest and best surveys, it embraces an area of 1,062 square miles, or 680,217 acres of land. The population in 1891 consisted of 34,885 males and 39,336 females; total, 74,221, and in 1881 of a total of 76,140; there were 15,626 inhabited houses in 1891 and 15,635 in 1881. In size Dumfries is classed as the eighth and in population as the fourteenth of the Scotch counties.

Early History.—At the epoch of the Roman invasion under Agricola, in the year 80, this part of Scotland was inhabited by a race called the "Selgovce," who spread themselves as far as the banks of the river Dee, in Galloway. These people continued independent till the year 875, when they were overpowered by the Northumbrian Saxons, who retained the ascendency for two centuries. During the lapse of this time, however, numbers of adventurers from Ireland and Cantyre effected a settlement, and from these intermixtures sprung the Picts, who progressively acquired the paramount sway. At this period Dumfries-shire is understood to have formed part of Cumbria, which district Edgar bequeathed to his youngest brother, David, who encouraged many opulent Anglo-Norman barons, and the county was then divided into extensive baronies. The almost interminable border warfare was a frightful calamity to the inhabitants of Dumfries-shire, who for centuries were subjected to all the horrors attendant upon barbarous incursions and feudal hostility. When the civil war broke out in the reign of Charles I. the common people entered heartily into the covenant, and the shire was disturbed by the exertions made by loyal noblemen and gentlemen in quelling the insurrection, and attachment to the house of Stuart ruined several of the great families. The Maxwells were completely ruined by the attainder of the Earl of Nithsdale, in 1715. The Douglases of Queensberry and the Johnstons of Annandale have merged in other families, and out of the general wreck the noble house of Scott, Dukes of Buccleuch, has risen to great influence. From being thus so frequently subjected to early invasion and predatory warfare, the shire exhibits, to this day, the remains of some important castles and places of security. It gives the title of Marquess to the family of Scott.

Soil and Surface, Produce, Manufactures &c.—The lower parts of Dumfries-shire are based with brown, red, yellow or white sandstone, with dips generally to the Solway; a considerable body of limestone also lies in this quarter, and beds of ironstone are occasionally found to accompany the other strata. Coal prevails in great plenty in the upper portions of Nithsdale and lower parts of Eskdale, the two extreme points of the county. The limestone of the shire has been of great value in improving the land; marl likewise abounds in various tracts, and of freestone and whinstone there is a sufficiency in all directions; marble is also procured for different useful and ornamental purposes, and near the northern confines of the county, at Wanlockhead, there are inexhaustible mines of lead. As in most districts in the south of Scotland, there is a general mixture of arable and pasture land. The soil is of great variety, that in the south being a light covering over a rocky and gravelly subsoil, producing thin crops; but in the north, where the subsoil is peaty, vegetation is rank. This county is famed for agriculture, its capacities in this respect being highly developed. The land is well tilled and drained, strongly fenced, and produces good crops of oats, potatoes, turnips and hay. About 216,130 acres are under cultivation. Though changeable and moist, the climate is upon the whole mild and salubrious. The principal hills are Hartfell (near Moffat), 2,629 feet; Etterick, or Phawhope Penn, 2,220; Cair-Kennow (near Drumlanrig), 2,080; Queensberry hill, 2,250; Black Larg (border of Ayrshire), 2,890 and Lowthers (near Wanlockhead), 3,150. The chief crops are oats, 47,553 acres; turnips, 20,515; potatoes, 3,723; barley, 502 and hay of all kinds, 36,518; the total corn crops being 48,197 acres and green crops, 25,040 acres; land under grass, 83,055 acres: permanent pasture, 103,271 acres; total area of land and water, 688,057 acres, 368,993 acres being mountain and heath land; the live stock in 1894 comprised 7,965 horses; 57,183 cattle; 524,304 sheep and 11,908 pigs. In Annandale the improvement in the breed of cattle has been most apparent; at the Highland Society's meeting some of the choicest specimens of the pure breed of Galloway cows, heifers and bullocks are exhibited. The minerals raised in the county in 1894 were, lead ore, 2,152 tons, producing 1,697 tons of lead and 11,836 ozs. of silver; limestone, 1,383 tons; zinc ore, 160 tons, value £560. The number of fishing boats registered in the county in 1894 was 73, aggregate tonnage, 288, and employing 110 persons. Of other classes of vessels there were 17, with a tonnage of 868. As regards trade the number of oxen, sheep and pigs reared in this county is usually more than adequate to the demands of its population; and exportation, therefore, of the excess product, takes place; and the same may be observed of corn, wool, hides and skins. Dumfries-shire cannot be ranked as a manufacturing county; the principal branches under this head are the production of hosiery goods and tweeds, the chief seat of these being its capital. There are also distilleries, agricultural implement works, dyeworks, tanneries &c. This county is also noted for bacon curing, a large number of carcases of pork being cured annually.

Rivers &c.—The chief, indeed the only, rivers of consequence are the Nith, the Annan, and the Esk. From these streams the principal divisions of the county obtain their names; from each of these greater divisions diverge vales, which likewise have denominations taken from the waters that are poured through them, such as Moffatdale, Dryfesdale and Ewesdale. The Nith 60 miles in length, rises in the eastern hills of Ayrshire, enters Nithsdale by the foot of Carsoncone hill, in the parish of Kirkconnel, and descends into the valley of Sanquhar; having forced its way through the hills which surround this valley, it receives the Crawick water from the north, and the Euchan from the south. The river Cairn, which forms the western boundary of the county, unites its stream with the Nith a little above Dumfries, a short distance southward from which the latter river empties itself into the Solway Firth. Near to Jarborough Castle, on the banks of the river Cairn, are to be seen those earthen mounds called "Bowbutts," where the barons of Glencairn, with their vassals, used to practise archery. The river Annan, the length of which is 40 miles, takes its rise in the mountains above Moffat, and runs through the flat part of Annandale for upwards of 23 miles; in its course it receives the Evan and the Moffat waters and the Wamphrey stream, which irrigates a pleasant valley of that name. Passing Johnstone, some other tributary rivulets increase its volume; at Lochmaben it is enlarged by the Ae, and a little lower by the Dryfe, which courses through the vale of Dryfesdale, considered the termination of the vale of Annan. The higher part of Eskdale, for nearly twenty miles, is mountainous. The Esk, in its progress through the district, is joined by the Black Esk, the Maggot, the Ewes, and the Wauchope. After reaching Broomholm the river traverses a flat country, and a part of Cumberland, before it reaches the Solway Firth; during this portion of its course it receives the Liddal from Roxburghshire, and the Line water from the county of Cumberland; its entire length is about 43 miles, thirty of which are in the shire of Dumfries. The Solway differs very materially from other estuaries receiving in Scotland the appellation of "Firths;" its waters are shallow, and have long, sandy reaches at the ebbing of the tide. The ebbs and flows of the Solway are proverbial for the rapidity of their action, and that is particularly the case during the spring tides and the prevalence of gales from the south-west, and borderers have, in numerous instances, been overwhelmed and drowned when returning from the Cumberland fairs, in crossing the bed of this estuary—the most experienced persons being liable to be overtaken by the tides even when they have the best expectation of fording it in safety. The navigation of the Solway Firth is closed above Bowness and Annan by the Solway Viaduct. Railways from the south enter the county at three points from Bowness, across the Solway Firth to Annan (Caledonian line), with a branch to Kirtlebridge, from Carlisle to Gretna Junction (Caledonian line), whence it runs through the county northward, via Lockerbie and Beattock, where there is a branch to Moffat, one from Lockerbie, going to Dumfries, and thirdly a short line on the North British system from Riddings via Canonbie to Langholm. From Gretna Junction a line leaves the Caledonian system and runs on the Glasgow and South Western line via Annan to Dumfries and on to Thornhill and Sanquhar to Ayrshire, the line of the same railway to Castle Douglas, Wigtown, Stranraer and Port Patrick leaving the county at Dumfries.

Divisions, Representation &c. The whole county is now popularly apportioned into three districts, namely—Eskdale on the east, almost the whole of which belongs to the Duke of Buccleuch; Annandale in the middle, and Nithsdale on the west. It is ascertained that Dumfries-shire was placed under the government of a sheriff in the 13th century, at which period it included the stewartry of Kirkcudbright. The district of Annandale, however, continued to be a stewartry from the period when it merged in the Crown by the accession of Bruce, till the abolition of the heritable jurisdiction. Up to the era of the Reformation, Dumfries-shire formed part of the extensive diocese of Glasgow, and was divided into the two deaneries of Nithsdale and Annandale; it now possesses 47 entire parishes and parts of two others, the whole being included in the five presbyteries which form the synod of Dumfries. There are four royal burghs in the county—Dumfries, Annan, Sanquhar, and Lochmaben: and six burghs of barony—Moffat, Lockerbie, Langholm, Ecclefechan, Thornhill, and Moniaive. The county is formed of 41 entire civil parishes and parts of two others. The shire at large sends one member to Parliament, and the royal burghs before named join with Kirkcudbright in returning another representative. The parliamentary constituency for 1894-5 numbered 9,133. The valuation of the shire was in 1894-5, including royal and parliamentary burghs but exclusive of railways, £538,629, and of railways, £64,980.

ANNAN is an ancient royal burgh, a parish and town and the seat of a presbytery, 79 miles south of Edinburgh, 87 south-east of Glasgow, 43 north-east of Kirkcudbright, 27 south of Moffat, 16 south-east of Dumfries, and 6 from Ecclefechan, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, and another about ½ mile from the town on the Caledonian system, situated on the east bank of the river Annan. The old bridge, consisting of five arches, was removed in 1826 and a new and substantial one erected on the same site, towards which a grant of £3,000 was obtained from Government, and the remainder supplied by the county. Annan was a Roman station, and is supposed by some to have been identical with the northern station, Veromum. After the departure of the Romans, it seems to have been held by the Britons, till they were subdued by the Saxons of the Northumbrian kingdom. It afterwards became a principal port, and was granted with the territory of Annandale and the port of Lochmaben to the ancestors of Robt. Bruce, by some of whom a castle was erected, and in part used as a church, but this fortress afterwards went to ruin, some fragments of its walls being incorporated with the gaol and the old town hall. Upon the death of David II. 22 Feb. 1371, the castle of Lochmaben and the lordship of Annandale came to Agnes, sister of John (Randolph), 3rd Earl of Moray, whom she succeeded as Countess of Moray, and having married Patrick (Dunbar), 10th Earl of Dunbar and March, carried it into that family; after their forfeiture it was bestowed upon the Douglases, Archibald Douglas, 3rd son of the 7th Earl of Douglas, being created Earl of Moray: he fell at Arkinholm, 1st May, 1455, and was attainted, and his possessions thereupon reverted to the Crown: this lordship was subsequently granted to Alexander, Duke of Albany, 2nd son of James II. who, for rebellion against his brother King James III. and for plundering the fair of Lochmaben in 1484, also forfeited it; the castle thereupon again reverted to the Crown, and became the great key to the western border. In September, 1547, the town was attacked and partially destroyed by Thomas, 1st Baron Wharton, who with Lord Dacre, had marched a force into Scotland to effect reprisals. The port, or harbour of Annan is free, and vessels of 250 tons can come within half a mile of the town, but vessels of much larger burthen can enter the river at its confluence with the Solway, rather more than a mile from the town; at this place are wooden wharves, or jetties. The local industries comprise stone quarrying, nursery work and corn milling, which furnish employment to a large number of hands; there is also a distillery situated about a mile north of the town. Limestone and freestone are abundant in many parts of the parish, and are worked at the Corsehill Quarries by Messrs. J. and A. Murray, and at Millbee by Messrs. J. and G McIldowie. Palmer's Nurseries, situated just outside the town, cover a very extensive area. The town was constituted a royal burgh on the accession of Robert Bruce to the throne at the beginning of the 14th century. The existing charter, dated July 10th, 1612, was granted by James VI. of Scotland, and confirms previous charters, particularly reciting one conferred by James V. dated 1st March, 1538, which stated that Annan had with other towns been burned and destroyed by sieges and the inroads of the English, especially in 1298, when they entered Annandale and burned the town with its churches. The burgh is governed by a provost, three bailies and nine councillors, a treasurer, a dean of guild and town clerk. Together with Dumfries, Sanquhar, Lochmaben and Kirkcudbright it forms the Dumfries parliamentary district, constituted in 1708, and returning one member to Parliament. A small debts court is held four times in the year. The town is lighted with gas, and supplied with water from a reservoir on the farm of Purdomstown, in the parish of Middlebie, about 7½ miles from Annan, with a capacity of 27,000,000 gallons. The filter bed and supply tank are behind Landheads toll bar, 2 miles from the town, and are capable of passing 150,000 gallons per day. The waterworks, built and laid out at a cost of about £12,000, were opened by Lady Augusta Noel, wife of Ernest Noel esq. then M.P. for the Dumfries district, July 21st, 1881. The Town Hall, in High street, erected at a cost of upwards of £4,000, occupies the site of the former hall. The Victoria Hall, Bank st. is licensed for dramatic performances. The Masonic Hall, in Church street, is the meeting place of the Caledonian Lodge, No. 238. The parish church is a fine building of stone with a tower and spire. There are branches here of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the British Linen Company's Bank, and the Bank of Scotland; there is also a bank for savings. An excellent newspaper, the "Annandale Observer," is published every Friday by Messrs. William Cuthbertson and Son. The Rev. Edward Irving M.A. the founder, in 1832, of the Catholic Apostolic church, was born here, 15th August, 1792, and a marble statue has recently been erected to his memory in front of the Town Hall; he died at Glasgow, 6th December, 1834. Hugh Clapperton, the African traveller, was also born here in 1788; he died on his second expedition at Sacatoo, 11th April, 1827. Mount Annan is the seat of Mrs. Pasley-Dirom. W. D. Mackenzie, of Newbie, is the chief landowner. The market is held on Friday, and at the two cattle marts large quantities of stock are sold. Fairs are held on the first Friday in May, the first Friday in August, and the third Friday in October. The area comprises 10,915 acres; rateable value, £20,262; the population of the parish in 1891 was 5,941, including 4,864 in the town, and in 1881, 5,516, of whom 4,530 were in the town.

Greenknowe is a quoad sacra parish, formed from Annan; population in 1891 was 1,430.

The remains of the old parish church are still extant, but a new church was built in 1835 by the late Mrs. Magdalen Dirom, wife of Lieut.-Gen. Alexander Dirom: she died 23 Oct. 1853. At Corsehill is a quarry, originally opened by Mrs. General Dirom, and now giving employment to over 200 men. Mrs. Madeline Pasley-Dirom, of Mount Annan, is the principal landowner. CAERLAVEROCK is a parish, occupying a kind of peninsula formed by the Solway Firth, the river Nith and Lochar water, and is 7 miles south-east of Dumfries, the nearest railway station. The magnificent ruins of Caerlaverock Castle, which stand on a level plain, between 8 and 9 miles from Dumfries, form a massive and picturesque triangular structure, including the gate-house, flanked on either side by drum towers with machicolated battlements; in Murdoch's tower, a principal feature of the ruins, Murdoch Stewart, 2nd Duke of Albany and Earl of Lennox, was confined in 1425; a wet ditch still encompasses the site. The castle anciently belonged to the Maxwells, once a powerful family in this part of Scotland, Earls of Nithsdale and wardens of the western Marches. It was besieged and captured by Edward I. in July, 1300; a metrical and contemporary account of the siege was written in Norman-French by Walter, of Exeter, a Franciscan friar who accompanied the English army, and contains, inter alia, the blazonry of the arms of about 100 of the knights engaged in this expedition, forming the earliest roll of arms at present known. The poem was edited and published by Sir Harris Nicholas in 1828. Sir Roger Kirkpatrick, of Closeburn, was murdered in his bed in the castle in 1357 by Sir James Lindsay; Cromwell took it in 1651, after which it was allowed to fall into decay. Lord Herries is the owner of nearly the whole parish.

Bankend is a pleasant village about 7 miles south-south-east from Dumfries.

Glencaple Quay is a small village on the banks of the Nith, and about 5½ miles south from Dumfries, where in former times numbers of coasting traders discharged and took in their cargoes, and passengers from Liverpool usually landed here. It is now chiefly frequented as a bathing place, and for its salmon fishery.

Kelton is a small seaside village on the Nith, and about 4 miles south from Dumfries.

The area comprises 5,664 acres; rateable value, £7,500; the population in 1891 was 921, and in 1881, 1,051.

CLOSEBURN is a parish and village, about 2 miles south-south-east from Thornhill, in the district of Nithsdale, and in Upper Nithsdale poor combination, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway; it includes the parish of Dalgarno, and is about 10 miles in length by about 11½ in breadth. The ancient church, an edifice of the Norman and later periods, is still standing within its churchyard, though now ruinous, and includes a tower in which hangs a 16th century bell: near the church is the mortuary of the Kirkpatricks, of Closeburn, over the entrance to which is their crest, a hand holding a dagger dripping with blood, and the motto "I mak sicear;" here is buried Sir Roger Kirkpatrick, whose murder of John (the "Red") Comyn, at Dumfries in 1305, gave rise both to the motto and crest: his 2nd son, of the same name, was murdered in his bed in Caerlaverock Castle by Sir James Lindsay in 1357. The present church, which adjoins the old churchyard, was erected by the heritors in 1878, at a cost of nearly £5,000, and is a building in the Gothic style. Closeburn Hall is a large and splendid mansion in the Classic style. The ancient Castle of Closeburn, the property of the late George Baird esq. and now in the hands of the trustees, forms an interesting object in the scenery here, which derives additional beauty from some romantic waterfalls. Near Closeburn Castle is a strong sulphurous spring, of the same character as that of Moffat Well, and there is another called "Townscleugh Well," which is chalybeate. Crichope Linn, in this parish, is a very singular ravine worn out of the soft sandstone by a small rivulet. In the writings of Sir Walter Scott it is described as the hiding place of Balfour of Burleigh. This spot, as well as almost every glen in the district, has associations connected with the times of the persecuted Covenanters.

Auldgirth is a small hamlet in the parish of Closeburn distant 8 miles north-north-west from Dumfries, and 6 south from Thornhill, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway.

The Closeburn Estates Trustees, viz. the trustees of Mrs. Villiers and the Countess of Enniskillen, the Duke of Buccleuch K.T. and Miss Copeland, of Collieston, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 29,102 acres; rateable value, £16,842 15s. 2d.; the population in 1891 was 1,333, and in 1881, 1,505.

DALSWINTON, see KIRKMAHOE.

DALTON is a parish and small village about 6 miles south south-west from Lockerbie, and 4 north-east from Ruthwell station on the Glasgow and South-Western railway. The parish, which now includes the ancient parishes of Meikle Dalton and Little Dalton, is 4 miles in length by 3 in breadth; its general appearance is that of high cultivation, which has been extended over once unprofitable moors and commons. The parish church, erected in 1895, in part by a grant from the Baird Trust, is an edifice in the Norman style, from designs by Mr. J. M. Dick Peddie, architect, of Edinburgh, and consists of chancel, nave, north porch, and a low square tower on the north side, with an octagonal spire; the lower stage of the tower also forms an entrance; the site was the gift of Mr. Arthur J. Steel, of Kirkwood. In the churchyard are several ancient tombstones to the Ross family, descendants of the ennobled house of Ross barons, of Halkhead, in Renfrewshire, who were long residents in this parish, but the title became extinct on the death of William, 14th baron, 19 Aug. 1754. Dormont House, beautifully situated within a deer park on the banks of the Annan, and about a mile from the village, is the seat of W. F. Carruthers esq. but now (1896) occupied by John J. J. Keswick esq. Carrutherstown is a small village in this parish about 2 miles south-west from Dalton, and the same distance north-east from Ruthwell station. Area, 6,886 acres; rateable value, £ ; the population in 1891 was 563, and in 1881, 579.

DUMFRIES WITH MAXWELLTOWN.

DUMFRIES (Gaelic, "dún Fris," the Frisians' fortress) is a town and royal burgh, the capital of the county and the seat of the synod and presbytery of Dumfries, also a parish, 338 miles from London (via Manchester), 71 south of Edinburgh, 72 south-east of Glasgow, 180 south-by-west of Aberdeen, 60 south-east of Ayr, 32 north-west of Carlisle, 15 north-north-west of Annan, and 8 south-west of Lochmaben, with a station on the Glasgow and South-Western Railway, forming an important junction as connecting the Midland system from Glasgow to London, the Caledonian main line at Lockerbie for Glasgow, Edinburgh and the north of Scotland, and the London and North-Western for London. It is also a junction for the Castle Douglas, Newton Stewart, and Stranraer Railways, worked in connection with the mail steamers from Stranraer to Larne, on the east coast of co. Antrim, which is the shortest sea passage between Scotland and Ireland, and at the goods station of the G. & S. W. Railway is a bonded store for spirits &c. supervised by the excise officers. This port is seated on the left bank of the river Nith, about 9 miles above its confluence with the Solway Firth, and is navigable for vessels of light tonnage, the tide flowing as high as the old bridge. It was undoubtedly a place of considerable size long before the days of William the Lion, and in his reign (1165-1214) it was erected into a royal burgh.

Three bridges connect the town with Maxwelltown, the New bridge, built in 1795, a foot suspension bridge opened in 1875 and the "Old Bridge": this last was built towards the end of the 13th century by Devorgilla, daughter of the Lord of Galloway and wife of John Baliol, who also about the same time founded a Franciscan monastery in the town and New (or Sweetheart) Abbey, at the base of Criffel on the Kirkcudbright side of the Nith; this old bridge is a narrow steep structure of stone, suitable for pack-horses, and consists now of 6 arches, though formerly, when it spanned part of either shore, it is said to have had 13. It is now only used by foot passengers.

Along the river Nith are quays at which vessels trading here load and discharge; those at the town have a depth of water of 8 to 9 feet at high water, while New Quay, 1½ miles lower down, has 10 feet and Glencaple Quay, 4½ miles below the town and 7½ from the mouth of the river, has 15 feet.

Under the provisions of the "Customs Act, 1846" (9 and 10 Vict. c. 102) the port of Dumfries was limited in Sept. 1847 so as to extend from Kirkandrews Burn to Southerners Point, and then to the river Sark. The Customs District was constituted a Court of Survey District in October, 1876, and a Wreck Receivers' District was defined in October, 1876, under the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1854" (17 and 18 Vict. c. 104). Fishing boats and their implements are distinguished by the letters D.S. During the year 1894 73 fishing boats equal to 288 tons, and employing 110 hands, were registered as belonging to the port, besides 17 other vessels, with an aggregate of 868 tons.

The principal imports are timber, coal, slate, iron and wine; the exports consist of wheat, barley, oats, potatoes, wool and freestone, the latter being worked at Locharbriggs, three miles distant from the town. The manufacture of woollen tweed is very extensively carried on here, and considerable business is also done in hosiery. Dumfries was for many years the leading market for hareskins in Scotland, and even regulated the price of home fur in England; and it is still regarded as the arbiter of prices in this respect. The numerous nursery grounds lying near the town also afford employment to the working classes. The town is lighted with gas from works now belonging to the Corporation and purchased by them in 1878 from the Dumfries Gas Light Co. for £21,000. Various additions have since been made, and the total cost up to 1895 amounted to £41,866. A copious supply of pure water is obtained from ample sources about five miles from the town. The offices are in Loreburn street.

The municipal government of the burgh is vested in a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, a town clerk, and nineteen councillors. Dumfries, together with Annan, Lochmaben, Sanquhar and Kirkcudbright, comprise the Dumfries Parliamentary District, formed in 1708, and returning one member to Parliament. Circuit courts of justiciary are held in April and September for Dumfries-shire and the stewartry of Kirkcudbright and Wigtownshire; there are also ordinary and small debt, sheriff's and justiciary burgh courts. There is a Burgh police force, with offices in Buccleuch street, and a Fire Brigade. The Court house and County buildings are large, elegant erections, in Buccleuch street. There is also a Court house and Bridewell in Tereggles street; H. M. Prison is in Maxwelltown.

The Dumfries and Maxwelltown Observatory, on Corberry Hill, on the Maxwelltown side of the river, was erected by a local scientific society, at a cost of about £1,050, from the designs of Mr. Newall, architect, and is a building of four stories—the lower for the keeper, three others furnished with globes, mathematical instruments, newspapers and periodicals; and an upper storey containing a camera-obscura and prism. The grounds, extending over more than half an acre, are laid out with much taste, and planted with flowers and shrubs.

The County Club, in Assembly street, formerly the old Assembly rooms, is now in the possession of the Dumfries and Galloway Club.

The Mechanics' Institution is in Nith place.

Dumfries and Galloway Infirmary was founded in 1776, and is still the only one in the south of Scotland. Medical advice and medicine are gratuitously afforded to every applicant who is an object of charity. It is supported by annual subscriptions, legacies, donations, benefactions &c. and is under the management of governors.

The Crichton Royal Institution, Hospital and Southern Counties Lunatic Asylum was endowed by the late James Crichton esq. of Friar's Carse, and incorporated by Act of Parliament, dated 3rd July, 1840, as a hospital for the insane and a home for mental and nervous invalids of the higher and middle classes. The grounds, about 750 acres in extent, are pleasantly situated on an elevation overlooking the valley of the Nith, and have a south-western aspect and an extensive and varied prospect. The first or old house of the institution is devoted to the reception of patients of the wealthier classes; the second house, another large building within the grounds, is appropriated chiefly to the care and treatment of patients at lower rates of board and of pauper lunatics belonging to the district; the total number of patients is about 1,000.

Moorhead's Hospital in St. Michael's street, founded in 1753, by Messrs. J. & W. Moorhead, merchants, is intended for the support of the aged and indigent poor. It is governed by a body of directors elected from the magistrates and town council, and is supported by benefactions, donations and annual subscriptions.

Carruthers' Almshouses in Brooms road, founded by Mrs. Carruthers. The Johnstone Almshouses, in Johnstone park, were erected by the trustees of the late David Johnstone, solicitor, for ladies in reduced circumstances, are among the finest and best endowed institutions of the kind in Scotland.

St. George's hall, Buccleuch street, on the site of the old prison, is a fine building, holding 700 persons, and was erected by the congregation of Free St. George's church. There is also a Freemasons' hall, in George street, and in Irish street are Greyfriars' hall, the Mechanics' hall and Hume's hall; Dickson's hall is in High street, St. Mary's hall in English street and Shakspere hall in the street of that name.

There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the British Linen Co. Bank, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited.

The Theatre in Shakspere street, erected in 1790, is a neat building of stone. It was here that Edmund Kean first emerged from obscurity to fame, and he never forgot the early patronage of the people of Dumfries.

The Post office, in Buccleuch street, is an edifice of Dumfries-shire red stone, and was opened in 1889.

St. Michael's, the mother church of Dumfries, was rebuilt in 1745 on the site of a pre-Reformation church, and is a rectangular structure with a massive and lofty tower and spire: the interior has stone arcades dividing it into nave and aisles, and many of the windows are filled with stained glass: under the entrance and on the walls there are numerous marble monuments, including one to Allan Cunningham, author, biographer and poet, who died 29 Oct. 1842: the pew in which Burns sat is distinguished by a brass tablet. The cemetery attached to the church contains numerous elegant and curious monuments, and particularly the fine mausoleum raised to the memory of Robert Burns, who died at Dumfries on the 21st July, 1796, aged 37 years; the design for the mausoleum was by F. Hunt esq. of London, and the sculptured work by Turnerelli; here is also the ruined monument of Provost Corsane, and tomb of Francis Irving, M.P. for the burgh in 1617. Near the gate is buried Bailie Paterson, to whom the Dumfries Academy is indebted for its endowments: within an inclosure surrounded by iron rails, lie the remains of more than 420 inhabitants of Dumfries, who died of Asiatic cholera, from 15 Sept. to 27 Nov. 1832: in the churchyard are also inscribed stones to William Grierson, William Welsh and James Kirk, three martyrs who suffered death on the Whitesands—the two former on Jan. 2nd, 1667, and the latter June, 1685—and there is a lofty pyramid of granite, erected in 1834, to these and other Nithsdale martyrs.

Greyfriars is a parish formed from that of Dumfries. The church, originally erected on the site of the old castle during the period 1722-7, and then called "the New Church," was built from the Burgh funds, and is the property of the town: in 1866-8 it was rebuilt, at a total cost of over £7,161, in the Perpendicular style, and renamed "Greyfriars' Church;" it has a tower with spire, 164 feet in height, and a fine entrance doorway, copied in part from a doorway in Melrose abbey; there are memorial windows to Robert Scott and Jane Lindsay, his wife, placed in 1867; William H. Cairns M.A. late rector of Dumfries Academy, erected in 1872; William Gordon, c. 1890; and to Mr. Bankes, erected by his wife: the colours of the 2nd Batt. 21st Royal Scots Fusiliers, carried during the period 1858-78, were deposited here 10 Sept. 1878, and are now suspended in the church: there is also an inscribed brass erected by Col. John Talbot Coke, commanding 2nd Batt. the King's Own Scottish Borderers (25th foot), to his comrades who died in Egypt during 1888-9: the church will seat 1,100 persons. Population of the parish, 3,746.

The church of St. Mary, on the north side of English street, has an attached cemetery containing several well executed monuments. St. John's Episcopal church, erected in 1867-8, is a fine building in the Gothic style, from designs by Mr. W. Slater and Mr. R. H. Carpenter, architects, of London, with tower and spire 120 feet high.

This town is the head of the Roman Catholic diocese of Galloway, comprising the counties of Dumfries, Kirkcudbright and Wigtown, and most of Ayr. The Roman Catholic Pro-Cathedral, in Shakspere street, is a large and handsome edifice, and has schools in connection.

The Militia Barracks are occupied by the 3rd Batt. King's Own Scottish Borderers; the 3rd Volunteer Batt. K.O.S.B. has its head quarters at the Drill hall, Newhall terrace, erected from designs by Mr. A. B. Crombie, architect, of Dumfries, and seating 3,000 persons. F and G Companies of the Galloway Rifle Corps (attached to the Royal Scots Fusiliers) have an armoury and orderly room at Maxwelltown.

The Dumfries Academy, established under its present designation in 1802, superseded the Grammar school and the Commercial school, which till then existed separately in the town. The date of the foundation of these schools is unknown, but mention is made of the Grammar school in the sessions clerk's records for 1688. In 1722 the masters in both schools were endowed by Bailie Paterson, of Dumfries, who bequeathed 15,000 merks to the magistrates and ministers of Dumfries for the benefit of the teachers; and in the following year by John Raining, of Norwich, to the extent of £500. The Bell bequest of £100, left in 1789, is given to the English master. The present structure was built in 1803, mainly by private subscription, and for some years the subscribers took a share in the management of the academy, but in 1814 it was handed over to the town council, and in August, 1872, by the operation of the Education Act, it was transferred, as a high class public school, to the management of the Dumfries Burgh School Board. A new building is now (1896) being erected at an estimated cost of £14,000.

The Industrial school is available for 120 boys, from many different parts of Scotland; it is under efficient management, and the boys are taught shoe making, tailoring, net making, wood turning &c. Attached to the school is a band of pipers, known throughout Scotland, and often engaged to play in the large centres, by which a considerable addition is often made to the revenue.

The Queensberry memorial consists of a fine Doric column raised by the county of Dumfries to the memory of Charles, 3rd Duke of Queensberry, who died 22 Oct. 1778. In Church place, close to Greyfriars church, is the fine statue of the poet Burns, unveiled by Lord Rosebery 6th April, 1882; the figure, of Sicilian marble, was executed at Carrara, from a model designed and prepared by Mrs. D. O. Hill, and is placed on a plain pedestal of dark grey granite, at a height of about nine feet from the ground.

The ancient monastery of Greyfriars, in this town, was the scene of a remarkable tragedy about the middle of the 14th century, when John Comyn, known as the "Red Comyn" (a powerful chieftain who formerly held the regency of Scotland) was assassinated by Robert the Bruce and Sir Roger Kirkpatrick, of Closeburne and Lindsay, two of his adherents.

Two newspapers are issued weekly, viz.:—the "Dumfries and Galloway Courier and Herald," and the "Dumfries and Galloway Standard," both of which have a large circulation.

The principal hotels are the King's Arms, the Commercial, the Station, the Queensberry, and the Globe, commonly known as Burns' Houff; here Burns spent many of his leisure hours and where numerous relics of the poet are still preserved.

The Market hall is in Irish street; the butter and egg market in Loreburn street. Wednesday is the market day. The two principal half-yearly markets take the name of the Candlemas and Road fairs. Besides the usual commodities that change hands at these periods, many thousand head of cattle are bought and sold, and vast quantities of pork also find purchasers in Dumfries from the beginning of December to the end of February. The principal fairs are held on the 12th and 13th of February if Tuesday and Wednesday; if not, Tuesday and Wednesday following; hiring, 13th if Wednesday, if not, Wednesday after; in March, hiring, last Wednesday; April, hiring, last Wednesday; May, horse, Wednesday before 26th; hiring, Wednesday 26th or first Wednesday after; June, horse, Wednesday after 17th (O.S.); September, horse, 24th if Tuesday, if not, Tuesday after; horse and hiring, 25th if Wednesday, if not, Wednesday after; October, hiring, third Wednesday; November, horses, Wednesday before 22nd; hiring, 22nd if Wednesday, if not, first Wednesday after; pork every Wednesday in months of January, February, March, November and December.

There are two auction marts for the sale of cattle, sheep, &c., through which pass very large quantities of stock every week, and are frequented by dealers from all parts of England and Scotland; Dumfries being the centre of a large agricultural district.

The parish of Dumfries comprises an area of 10,032 acres; rateable value, burgh, £65,000; parish, £78,923; the population in 1891 was 17,878, and in 1881 16,841; in 1891 the town had a population of 13,076, and Maxwelltown had 4,975, while the royal burgh showed 16,675, and the parliamentary, 17,821.

Maxwelltown is a burgh of barony in the parish of Troqueer, in the stewartry of Kirkcudbright, and is connected with Dumfries by three bridges across the Nith, one of these (erected in 1795) in continuation of Buccleuch street, Dumfries, was widened and greatly improved in 1892-3 at a cost of over £4,000, defrayed by an anonymous benefactor. The charter for the creation of the burgh was obtained from the Crown in 1810, and since that time it has considerably improved both in character and population; it is governed by a provost, two bailies, and councillors, distinct from Dumfries, of which it is virtually an extension and is comprised within that parliamentary burgh. Among the trading establishments are saw mills, tweed factories and dye works. The Dumfries and Maxwelltown Observatory, which stands on Corberry hill, in this burgh, was erected by a local scientific society, and is a building of three storeys, the upper of which has a camera-obscura. About a mile along the Maxwelltown bank of the Nith, are situated the ruins of Lincluden abbey, locally in the parish of Tereggles, and county of Kirkcudbright (which see). Her Majesty's prison for Dumfries and Galloway, situated here, is a large and handsome building, opened August 15th, 1883. Rateable value of the burgh, £19,500.

DUNCOW, see KIRKMAHOE.

DUNSCORE is a parish and village, in the district of Nithsdale and in Upper Nithsdale poor combination, and is 4 miles south-west of Auldgirth (the nearest) station on the Glasgow and South-Western railway, 9 north-west from Dumfries and 7 south-east from Moniaive, is bounded by Glencairn and Keir on the north, and Holywood and Kirkcudbrightshire on the south, and is 12 miles in length, and from 1 to 4 miles wide. The land is arable on the banks of the Nith, which irrigates its eastern part; it is also intersected by the Cairn. Sheep and cattle are reared off these lands for the southern markets; and oats, barley, wheat, potatoes and turnips are produced in great quantities. Thomas Welsh, an eminent person, and son-in-law of John Knox, was a native of Dunscore and Robert Burns at one time held a farm here called Ellisland, and also took charge of the village library, instituted by his landlord, Robert Riddel esq. The area comprises 14,815 acres and rateable value £11,218. The population in 1891 was 1,260 and in 1881, 1,405.

DURISDEER is a parish and village, in Upper Nithsdale poor combination, and in the Dumfries small debt court district; the parish is bounded on the south and south-east by Morton, on the north and north-east by the parish of Crawford, on the south and south-west by Penpont, and on the north-west by Sanquhar; it is 8 miles in length and 6 in breadth. The village is about 6 miles north of Thornhill and 2 from Carronbridge (the nearest) station on the Glasgow and South Western railway. Drumlanrig Castle, the noble mansion of the Duke of Buccleuch and Queensberry K.T. who is the principal landowner, is beautifully situated about 4 miles from Thornhill, on the right bank of the river, and occupies an elevated site overlooking the whole district. The castle was rebuilt by William, first Duke of Queensberry, between the years 1679 and 1689. Within the last half century the woods around the castle have been greatly extended, and now cover a large portion of country. The beautiful gardens and pleasure grounds of the castle are kept with great care, and are free to the inspection of visitors on Tuesdays and Fridays. In 1776, when Mr. Pennant visited Drumlanrig, there existed in the woods a breed of wild cattle described as being of a milk-white colour, with black ears and finely curved horns. They were removed, it is said, to Chillingham Castle in Northumberland, the seat of the Earl of Tankerville, where the breed still exists, and is also found at Hamilton. Adjoining the parish church is the burial place of the Douglas family, Marquesses of Queensberry and Viscounts Drumlanrig; above it rises a splendid marble monument, with effigies, executed in Rome, representing James, second Duke of Queensberry K.G. d. 1711, and Mary, his Duchess; about a mile from the church are traces of a camp. The area comprises 19,717 acres; rateable value, £8,519 17s.; the population in 1891 was 1,076, and in 1881, 1,107.

ECCLEFECHAN WITH HODDAM.

ECCLEFECHAN is a considerable village and principal place in the parish of Hoddam and in the small debts court district of Dumfries and Annan, 71 miles south of Edinburgh, 75 south-east of Glasgow, 20 north-west by rail from Carlisle, 12 east of Dumfries, 6 north of Annan, and 14 west-south-west from Langholm, lying in a fine situation near the foot of Annandale, and on the road from Glasgow to Carlisle, with a station 1 mile distant on the Caledonian railway. A few of the inhabitants find employment in weaving woollen skirting goods for the Glasgow manufacturers. There is a branch here of the Royal Bank of Scotland. Fairs are held for cattle &c. on the Tuesday after the 11th of June, and the Tuesday after the 20th October. Hoddam Castle, finely situated on the river Annan, about 2½ miles west from Ecclefechan, is the seat of Edwd. Brook esq. who, as principal landowner and superior, claims certain customs for all standings and for all cattle exposed for sale. Here was born, 4 Dec. 1795, Thomas Carlyle, now world renowned as a moral philosopher and historian. His father, James Carlyle, was by trade a mason, and sent him first, in 1805, to the Grammar school at Annan, and afterwards, in Nov. 1809, when only 14 years of age, to the University of Edinburgh. Carlyle subsequently became mathematical tutor at Annan school, and in 1816 was appointed master of the school at Kirkaldy, on leaving which in 1818 he went to Edinburgh, and in 1822 was tutor there to the sons of a Mr. Buller; in 1825 he took a farm at Hoddam hill, and in 1826 married Jane Baillie Welsh, daughter of the laird of Craigenputtock, to which place he removed in 1828, but in the summer of 1834 he established himself at the now famous house, 5 Cheyne row, Chelsea, where he resided until his death, 4 Feb. 1881, and here several of his works, including his "Life of Frederick the Great," completed in 1865, were written; in 1866 he was chosen Lord Rector of Edinburgh University, but in the same year lost his wife, a blow from which he never rallied. The remains of the great philosopher were brought from London, and interred in the parish churchyard here, and both the cottage in which he was born and his house in Chelsea are now religiously preserved, and are open to the inspection of visitors. Within a short distance of the village are the remains of two camps, one of which is said to be one of the most complete in Scotland. The land in Hoddam parish is of the best quality, and is under a superior system of cultivation. The area of the parish of Hoddam comprises 7,514 acres; rateable value being £12,000; the population in 1891 was 1,533, including 746 in the village of Ecclefechan, and in 1881, 1,548, with 768 in the village.

GLENCAIRN is a parish, in Upper Nithsdale poor combination, and in the Dumfries small debt court district, and is 11 miles in length, by from 3 to 5 in breadth, and distant 9 miles from Thornhill station on the Glasgow and South Western railway. The western and northern divisions are mountainous and pastoral. Several small rivulets meander through the parish; on the south-west verge of which is Loch Urr, whence issues the river of that name.

Moniaive, a considerable and pleasant village in this parish, 16 miles north-west from Dumfries, and 8 south-west from Thornhill, is a place of some antiquity, and was created a burgh of barony by charter in the reign of Charles I. On an eminence near the village stands a monument erected by subscription in 1828, and inscribed to the Rev. James Renwick, the last person who suffered death in Scotland as a Covenanter; he was born at Moniaive, 15th February, 1662, and executed at the Grass Market, Edinburgh, 17th February, 1688. The Union Bank of Scotland Limited has a branch in the village. There are also two respectable inns, the Craigdarroch Arms and the George.

Dunreggan, now a suburb of Moniaive, is situated on the north bank of the Dalwhat water, here crossed by a bridge. Thornhill, the nearest railway station, is 9 miles distant.

Colonel Sir George Gustavus Walker K.C.B. of Crawfordton, the Rev. Sir J. R. L. Emilius Laurie bart. B.D. of Maxweltown, Captain Robert Cutlar Fergusson J.P. of Craigdarroch, James McCall esq. of Caitloch and James Walter Ferrier Connel, of Auchencheyne, are the principal land owners. The area of the parish comprises 30,083 acres; rateable value, £15,217 18s. 3d.; the population in 1891 was 1,647, including 650 in Moniaive and Dunreggan, and in 1881 was 1,737, with 699 in the villages.

GRAITNEY (or Gretna) is a parish and village in the south part of the county, mall debt court district of Dumfries and Annan, and poor combination of Kirkpatrick-Fleming, and on the west side of the small river Sark. The present parish comprehends the old parishes of Graitney and Redkirk, which were united in 1609. The village of Graitney, or Gretna Green, is on the road from Annan to Carlisle, 8 miles east from the former and 9½ from the latter town, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western Railway. The Caledonian railway passes through the parish. The river Esk, which flows to the south, discharging itself into the Solway Frith, is now spanned by an iron bridge erected from the designs of Thomas Telford, the eminent engineer; previously the Solway was crossed by a ferry boat. An extensive salmon fishery is carried on in the Solway. This place was long noted for the celebration of clandestine or runaway marriages. Any person could perform the ceremony, which merely amounted to a declaration before witnesses, that the parties were man and wife, such an acknowledgment being sufficient to constitute a valid marriage in Scotland, and on a certificate being subscribed by the person officiating and by the witnesses the union became quite indissoluble. The fee charged varied according to circumstances and the social position of the parties—from half a guinea to £40, or even £50. The first person who celebrated these marriages is said to have been one Coulthard, a fisherman, who also conveniently owned the ferry-boat; another was John Paisley, a tobacconist, though termed a blacksmith; he officiated from 1760 at Megg's Hill, but in 1782 removed to Springfield, and died in 1814; later, the officiating principal was a man named Elliott. During the period 1850-55, the average of marriages here amounted to 747 yearly, but under the provisions of an Act of Parliament passed 29th July, 1856 (19 & 20 Vict. c. 96), these marriages were declared illegal, unless one of the persons married had been resident in Scotland for 21 days previous to the marriage. The following was the form of the marriage certificate, which, if required, was furnished:—

"KINGDOM OF SCOTLAND, COUNTY OF DUMFRIES, PARISH OF GRETNA.

"These are to certify to all whom these presents may come, that A. B. from the parish of ——, in the county of ——, and C. D. from the parish of ——, in the county of ——, being now here present, and having declared themselves single persons, were this day married after the manner of the laws of the Church of England, and agreeable to the laws of Scotland.

"As witness our hands at Gretna Hall, &c. &c."

Rigg is a small village in this parish, 2 miles from Gretna station.

Springfield is a village ½ mile from Gretna Green, and near it at Sarkfoot is a good bathing ground.

The Earl of Mansfield is the principal landowner. The area comprises 7,863 acres; rateable value, £13,714; the population in 1891 was 1,141, and in 1881, 1,212.

HOLYWOOD is a parish and village, on the road from Dumfries to Glasgow, with a station on the Glasgow and South-Western railway, about 3½ miles north from Dumfries. The parish, which is bounded by Dunscore on the north and west, extends for 10 miles along the right bank of the Nith, its breadth being from 2 to 3 miles. The district derives its name from a sacred grove, to which, it is said, the Druids resorted to perform their rights. Here was once a monastery of the Premonstratensian order, founded at the beginning of the 12th century, by an Irish recluse, named Congal, and the ruins still standing in the churchyard are supposed to be the remains of the buildings. The church, a much admired edifice, stands in a delightful part of the country. The area comprises 8,805 acres; rateable value, £ ; the population in 1891 was 1,011, and in 1881, 1,078.

KIRKPATRICK-JUXTA is a parish, formerly partly in Lanarkshire, and village, in the upper district of Annandale, bounded on the north by Moffat, on the east by Wamphray. At Beattock in this parish is a station on the Caledonian railway. The parish church is a plain building of stone with a tower. In the parish is the celebrated Garpel Linn; likewise the castle of Auchencastle, the ruins of which cover a considerable extent of ground. It was erected by Randolph, Earl of Murray, during the minority of David Bruce, and was subsequently held by Douglas of Morton. The old tower of Loch-house is supposed to have been rebuilt by James Johnstone, of Corehead, chamberlain to Walter Whiteford, bishop of Brechin (1635-43), whose daughter he married, and thus obtained possession of extensive lands in Kirkpatrick-Juxta and Moffat. Loch-house is now inhabited by a cottier or herd. Queensberry, 2,270 feet in height, lies to the west of the parish. A little to the north-west of Moffat is an ancient chapel said to have belonged to the Knights Templars and the knights of St. John of Jerusalem, and Craigielands, with a fine lake, the residence of James Smith esq. and Beattock House, on the Evan, are modern manisons. The modern castle of Auchencastle, the residence of William Younger esq. is a large mansion situated on rising ground, near the Evan water. John James Hope-Johnstone esq. J.P., D.L. of Raehills, is the principal landowner. About one-third of the land is under tillage; the larger portion is unimproved and pasture, though it is being rapidly subdued to the plough. Craigielands and Hoppertootie are hamlets in Kirkpatrick-Juxta. The area comprises 22,335 acres; rateable value, £12,628, and the population in 1891 was 976. The small portion in Lanarkshire was transferred to Dumfries since 1889 by Local Government Board Order No. 2.

KIRTLEBRIDGE, see MIDDLEBIE.

KIRKTON, see KIRKMAHOE.

LANGHOLM is a town and police burgh and parish in Hawick poor combination and the seat of a presbytery, 73 miles from Edinburgh, 80 south-west from Glasgow, 30 east-by-north from Dumfries, 21 north from Carlisle, 18 north-north-east from Annan, and 12 north from Longtown, Cumberland, with a station on the North British railway; the town is delightfully situated on both sides of the Esk, over which there is a suspension bridge, and also a stone bridge of three arches, affording a view of the confluence of the Ewes and the Wauchope with the Esk. The local industries comprise the making of shepherds' plaids and blankets, tweeds and other fabrics, both for home markets and for exportation, and there are now six factories, giving employment to many hands, besides which the town contains distilleries, dyehouses and a tannery. The town is supplied with water from a copious spring known as "White Wells," and lighted with gas from works the property of a company. The government of the town is vested in a provost, two bailies and 6 commissioners. Sheriff small debt courts and justice of peace courts are held as required. The Town Hall, in the Market place, has a tower with spire and a well-lighted clock. The Public Library, richly endowed by Thomas Telford esq. the eelebrated engineer, a native of the district (d. 1834), occupies a substantial building in High street, erected at a cost of about £2,600, of which sum £1,000 was a bequest of the late Alexander Reid esq. The Langholm Cottage Hospital, now (1896) in course of erection, from a bequest of the late Mr. Thomas Hope, of New York, a native of Langholm, who left the residue of his estate amounting to over £100,000 for this purpose, has been designed by Messrs. Wood & Ainslie, of London, architects. On the hill behind the town stands a monument to General Sir John Malcolm G.C.B. erected at a cost of £1,300; he died in 1833; near the Post office stands a monument to his brother, Admiral Sir Pulteney Malcolm G.C.B., G.C.M.G. a distinguished naval officer, d. 20 July, 1838. The H Company, 3rd Vol. Batt. K.O.S.B. has its head quarters here, and a drill room in the Temperance Hotel buildings. There is a Masonic hall, at which the meetings of the Eskdale Kilwinning lodge, No. 107, are held. There are branches here of the National Bank of Scotland Lim. and the British Linen Company. A newspaper, the "Eskdale and Liddesdale Advertiser," is published in the town. The market day is Wednesday; fairs are held on the 1st Wednesday in March (for the lambing season), 16th April (for seeds), the last Tuesday in May (old style), 26th July (for lambs and wool), 18th September (for sheep), and 5th November (for cattle); there are also two hiring days—one in May and the other in November. There has been established a fortnightly sale of cattle, sheep &c. and the Eskdale and Liddesdale Agricultural Society hold their show of stock generally in October, at which premiums are awarded. The parish church, a modern structure, contains a splendid organ, provided at a cost of £1,200. The border house or tower of Langholm, formerly the property of the Armstrongs, is now in a state of ruin. Wauchope Castle, the earliest seat of the Lindsay family, which stood in the immediate neighbourhood, was another example. The tower of Gilnockie, still standing about four miles below Langholm, on the right bank of the Esk, was renovated by the late Duke of Buccleuch, and is now open for the inspection of visitors. Eskdale derives more than common charm from the memory of Johnnie Armstrong, a border chieftain, whose name was associated with many incidents belonging to this locality. He was eventually executed at Carlenrig, a place not far distant from Moss Paul, on the road between Langholm and Hawick, together with some of his companions, by order of James V. and the graves of the whole band are to be seen in a deserted churchyard at Carlenrig, Roxburgh. Alexander Peden, one of the most famous of Scottish worthies, is also associated with this neighbourhood, and a "knowe," or small hill, commanding a delightful view of the valley, is still named "Peden's View," and at its foot is "Peden's Well." Langholm was the birthplace 29 Sept. 1734, of William Julius Meikle, or Mickle, translator of the "Lusiad" of Camoens (1775), and author of the song "There's nae luck about the hoose;" he died at Forest Hill, Oxon, 28 Oct. 1788. In the neighbourhood of Langholm is a copious mineral spring, called "Bloch Well," which is efficacious in the cure of cutaneous diseases, but owing to the limited accommodation which exists in its immediate neighbourhood, it is less known than it should be. Langholm Lodge, the residence of the Duke of Buccleuch K.T. stands just outside the town, in a beautiful park, and in the grounds is a private Episcopal chapel, to which the public are admitted. The area comprises 16,971 acres; rateable value, £ ; the population in 1891 was 3,970, including 3,643 in the town of Langholm, and in 1881 was 4,612, with 4,209 in the town.

LOCHMABEN is a town, royal burgh, parish and the seat of a presbytery, with a station on a branch from Lockerbie of the Caledonian railway, 65 miles south from Edinburgh, 70 south-east from Glasgow, 33 south-east from Sanquhar, 30 north-west from Carlisle, 31 south-east from Thornhill, 15 south from Moffat, 13 north-west from Annan, 10 west-north-west from Ecclefechan, 8½ north-by-east from Dumfries and 4 west from Lockerbie; it is rural in character, and in the summer months is a popular place of resort for tourists and other visitors, and it is lighted with gas by a company. Lochmaben was constituted a royal burgh at a very early period; its present charter was granted by James VI. and dated 16th of July, 1612; it states that it is a renewal of charters granted by his predecessors; from this charter it also appears that the town was more than once destroyed during the civil wars, its public edifices plundered, and its ancient records, &c., totally lost. The municipal government is vested in a provost, one bailie, a dean of guild, a treasurer and five councillors. Lochmaben, together with Dumfries, Kirkcudbright, Annan and Sanquhar, form the Dumfries parliamentary district, returning one member to Parliament. The Town Hall, which stands in the middle of the principal street, has a tower with a clock, and opposite there is a statue of Robert Bruce. There is a Freemasons' lodge, meeting at the Masonic Hall and Club, in High street; a curling club, a bowling green, and various associations. There is a branch here of the National Bank of Scotland Limited and a Savings Bank for the town and neighbourhood. The parish church, erected at a cost of £3,000, is a building in the Pointed style, with a bold square tower, containing 2 bells: the foundation stone was laid April 10th, 1818, and opened for divine worship in July, 1820: the church seats about 1,400 persons. The Free church, built in 1844 at a cost of about £800, has 700 sittings. There is also a United Presbyterian chapel and a Free church at Hightae, about three miles from Lochmaben. Fairs used to be held, but they have long since been discontinued. Lochmaben Castle, a fortress of great strength, was the chief residence of the Bruces, Lords of Annandale, till the end of the 13th century; it was built on a peninsula on the south-east side of the same loch, and this edifice, with its outworks, covered about 16 acres. After different grants had been made to various relations of the Bruces, the Castle, in 1487, was annexed by Parliament, to the Crown, and is now the property, or in the keeping of Capt. J. J. Hope Johnstone J.P., D.L. of Raehills. Some of the existing walls are of great thickness, and the whole presents a gloomy yet interesting mass of ruins overshadowed with fir trees. The Castle Loch, which flows very near the south side of the town, is about three miles in circumference; the Mill Loch, of somewhat less dimensions, lies on the north side of the town, and at times extends up to the doors of the houses. Both these lochs contain a fish called the vendace, or vendise, which is peculiar to these waters, and is said not to be met with anywhere else in Britain, although not uncommon in Sweden. It is of the salmon family, is delicately formed and about six inches long. How it came here is not exactly known, but some suppose it to have been brought from La Vendee, in France, when Bruce's castle was a royal residence, and hence they derive the name "vendace." Each loch has its vendace club, composed of gentlemen of the county, who meet once a year, about the end of July, to have a day's fishing and recreation. These lochs, as well as four others of considerable extent, are much resorted to by boating and fishing parties, and they afford agreeable recreation both to the inhabitants and to many tourists and visitors.

Within the parish of Lochmaben are four villages known as the "Four towns," viz.: Smallholm, Greenhill, Heck and Hightae, and remarkable as holding their lands by a peculiar tenure. The proprietors of lands in these baronies are called "the King's Kindly Tenants," and by successive Royal warrants and protections granted in 1592, 1602 and 1664, have the right to continue in undisturbed possession of their respective holdings at the old rent, so long as they continue to pay the same. These baronies are said to have been conferred on the retainers of the Bruce, and many of the present holders can trace back their ancestry for centuries. Son succeeds father, and the title is completed by the entry of the name in Lord Mansfield's rental book, and the usual solemnities of service and infiefment, otherwise common to the law of Scotland, are here unknown.

The area of the parish comprises 10,813 acres; rateable value, £ ; the population in 1891 was 2,522, including 1,038 in the burgh of Lochmaben, and in 1881 was 1,051, with 1,539 in the burgh.

LOCKERBIE WITH DRYFESDALE.

LOCKERBIE is a small market town and police burgh in the parish of Dryfesdale, 67 miles south of Edinburgh, 12 east of Dumfries, 11 north-west of Annan, 6 north-west of Ecclefechan, 4 east of Lochmaben, 72 south-east from Glasgow and 26½ north-west from Carlisle, with a station on the Caledonian railway, which is also the junction of a branch to Lochmaben and Dumfries. There is an active trade in articles of general and domestic consumption. The town is well lighted with gas from works at Townfoot. The municipal body consists of a provost, two bailies, town clerk, treasurer, procurator fiscal and 9 commissioners. A new Town Hall, erected at a cost (inclusive of site, £1,500) of £8,650, is an edifice in the conventional Scottish style, containing committee rooms and a lesser hall, and in the basement is a large market hall for the use of farmers and others attending the markets. The Mechanics' Hall, High street, erected with a considerable sum of money left by Mr. George Easton, of Chester, for this purpose, is a building of stone. There is a subscription library at the Town Hall buildings. Connected with the town is Masonic lodge, and there is a female society for the relief of the occasional poor. The parish church stands near the High street, and is centrally placed in relation to the parish generally. The Free church is a good building in Bridge street and there are United Presbyterian, Episcopalian and Roman Catholic churches. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the Clydesdale Bank Limited and also a bank for savings, opened in 1824. The "Annandale Herald and Moffat News" is published here every Thursday, and in Moffat every Friday. The following fairs are held here: January, every Thursday, pork market; February, pork market on each Thursday and Candlemas horse fair; March, pork market 1 and 2 Thursday, last pork and seed market 3 Thursday; April, fair for hoggits on 2 Thursday and for hiring on 3 Thursday; May, Fast day, 1 Friday and cattle market Thursday; June, merchants' holiday 2 Tuesday, cattle 4 Thursday; July, merchants' holiday 2 Tuesday, cattle 4 Thursday; August, annual holiday 2 Friday, lamb fair and hiring 2 Thursday; September, cattle and sheep 4 Thursday, merchants' holiday 3 Friday; October, cattle and sheep 3 Thursday counting from the September market, hiring 4 Thursday; November, Fast day 1 Friday, Martinmas fair and the first pork market of season on 4 Thursday; December, pork market every Thursday during the month.

Dryfesdale is a parish in the district of Annandale, and includes the town of Lockerbie. The extreme length from north-east to south-west is about 7 miles, the average breadth of the upper part is about 3 miles, and of the lower half about one and a half: about two-thirds of the parish is lowland and the rest is hilly. There is also a considerable extent of holm land towards the junction of the Annan and the Dryfe. Of the whole extent of the land in this parish, about 8,000 acres are either cultivated or have occasionally been in tillage, the remainder being in moor and pasturage. The point which assumes the greatest height is Quhytewoollen hill, an old beacon, the elevation of which is 650 feet above the level of the sea.

The area of the parish comprises 10,231 acres; rateable value, £21,000; the population in 1891 was 3,233, and in 1881, 2,971; these figures include the population of the town of Lockerbie, in 1891, 2,391, and in 1881, 2,029.

MAXWELLTOWN, see DUMFRIES,

MIDDLEBIE is a parish and small village in the small debts court district of Dumfries and Annan, and poor combination of Kirkpatrick-Fleming, on the road between Langholm and Ecclefechan; the village is about 2 miles east from Ecclefechan, 12 south-west from Langholm, and 2 from Kirtlebridge station on the Caledonian railway; the parish is about 7 miles in length by 4 in breadth, and abounds in red freestone; it is also valuable for its lime quarries, but much of the land is of rather poor quality. In October, 1895, a Roman altar, erected by the 2nd Cohort of Tungrians, was found at the Roman camp of Birrens, in this parish, at the bottom of a well 16 feet deep; it weighs 17 cwt. and bears an inscription and various carvings; another altar, erected by the same cohort, to the goddess Minerva, and discovered here many years since, is preserved at Burnfoot House. The 2nd Tungrian Cohort was also stationed at Castlesteads, in Cumberland. Sir Frederick John William Johnstone bart. D.L. of Westerhall, is the principal landowner. The area comprises 17,545 acres; rateable value, £14,000; the population in 1891 was 1,806, and in 1881, 1,927.

Kirtlebridge and Eaglesfield are small villages in this parish, the former 3 miles south-east, and the latter 2½ south from Ecclefechan. In the immediate vicinity are the famous salmon and trout fishings of the Annan, the Esk and the Kirtle. At Kirtlebridge is a station on the Caledonian railway.

Waterbeck is a village in this parish, about 4 miles north-east from Ecclefechan, on the road to Langholm, and sends large supplies of wool, cured bacon and cheese to the different markets. Kirtlebridge, 3 miles distant, on the Caledonian line, is the nearest railway station.

MOFFAT is an inland spa, town and police burgh, and a large parish in the district of Annandale, 51 miles south of Edinburgh, 57 south-east of Glasgow, 14½ north of Lockerbie, 41 north-west of Carlisle and 21 north of Dumfries, with a terminal station on a branch of about one mile and a half in length, constructed in 1882, from Beattock station on the Caledonian railway. A small part of the parish is in Lanarkshire. Moffat is an ancient town, being named in documents of the 13th century, when it was a manor held by the Bruce, Lord of Annandale, and ancestor of King Robert I. The town commands a fine and extensive prospect of a delightful valley, stretching towards the south, and interspersed with hedge-rows, meadows and corn fields, and pleasingly diversified by the windings of the river Annan. High Street, the principal street of the town, is a wide and spacious thoroughfare, laid down upon the principle recommended by the late J. M'Adam, and is lined with excellent shops. It is lighted with gas by a local company. Moffat was instituted a burgh on the adoption, in 1864, of the Police Act, and now possesses a commission invested with powers for sanitary improvements, the holding of monthly courts and other matters. The Moffat Baths Co.'s baths, in High street, include a hall, used for concerts and lectures, and during the summer a band plays here; attached to the premises is a small but well-kept tennis lawn and a billiard room. Near the town is a large hydropathic establishment; the building, of red sandstone, was erected in 1875-6, and contains nearly 200 apartments, including dining, billiard, smoking and sitting rooms, and is available for over 300 visitors. The Proudfoot Working Men's Institute, founded by the late William Proudfoot esq. of Craigieburn, is an elegant structure in the Scottish style, with reading and recreation rooms, baths and an excellent library; over the entrance is placed a bust of the founder. There is also a town subscription library, containing upwards of 4,000 volumes, and a Freemasons' Hall, erected on the site of Morison's school. An ornamental drinking fountain, consisting of a pedestal of rough sandstone surmounted by the figure of a ram cast in bronze, was erected in the centre of the town in November, 1875, at the cost of the late William Colvin esq. of Craigielands. The Established church was built and presented to the parishioners in 1796 by James, 3rd Earl of Hopetoun, inheritor of the Annandale estates, on the site of one of the churches of Annandale transferred to the Bishop of Glasgow, and was constituted one of the prebends of that see, but the present structure, the foundation stone of which was laid in August, 1885, was opened for public worship in September, 1887; it is a cruciform building, Gothic in style, and consisting of chancel, nave, transepts and a tower 107 feet in height. The pulpit, of carved pitch pine, is set on seven pillars of polished red sandstone, and some of the principal windows are filled with stained glass. At the west end of the church is a hall, with a vestry on the south and a session house on the north. The church and hall, together with an adjoining manse, cost between £12,000 and £13,000, £4,000 of which was subscribed by the congregation, and the remainder provided by the heritors of the parish. The church will seat 1,150 persons. The Free church, erected at an expense of £6,000, is a building of red sandstone and blue whinstone, in the Decorated Gothic style, and has a fine barrel roof. A hall has since been added. The Episcopal church is an iron structure erected in 1872. The United Presbyterian church, erected at a cost of about £3,000, was opened for worship in July, 1864. The Roman Catholic church, open for worship only during the summer season, is of wood. Moffat has long been justly celebrated as a fashionable summer resort for invalids and pleasure seekers, for the medicinal virtues of its mineral waters. The springs are three in number, one sulphureous and two chalybeate. The sulphureous spring, distinguished by the name of "Moffat Well," is about a mile from the town, and during the summer is reached by omnibuses. The "Fons Moffetensis" was described by Matthew Mackalle in 1659 as a spring possessing great healing virtues; it is said to have been first made known by Rachel, daughter of Walter Whiteford, bishop of Brechin, who married the Laird of Corehead (1633), and it was first analysed by her descendant Dr. Milligan Johnstone, in the last century. During the period which has elapsed since the discovery of the valuable qualities of this spring, it has been much frequented from all parts of Scotland, as well as by visitors from England and Ireland; in all scrofulous and scorbutic cases it is a powerful remedy, being seldom known to prove ineffectual when the lungs are not diseased; it is also eminently successful in the removal of bilious complaints, as well as in creating an appetite and promoting digestion, and is an excellent specific for gravel and rheumatism, but is so volatile that it can only be drunk in perfection at the fountain. Hartfell spa was first discovered in the year 1748, by a man named John Williamson. The spring issues from a rock of alum slate, in the side of Hartfell mountain, near Moffat, and is bottled and sold by local chemists. It is a potent restorative, and highly beneficial in all complaints peculiar to the female sex. The other chalybeate is obtained in a very curious manner—namely, by pouring water upon a rock in the side of a dell, near the town, called "Garpel Linn." The surface of this rock being strongly impregnated with sulphate of alumina and iron, the water is much more powerful than that of Hartfell, and is consequently taken in smaller quantities. The Linn, or valley, has been laid out in walks by the Hon. Butler Johnstone, and is freely open to the public. Loch Skene, on the mountain range, north-east of the town, at an elevation of upwards of 1,500 feet above the level of the sea, contains the finest trout in the south of Scotland. The waters of this lake are discharged over precipitous rocks in a lofty and magnificent cascade called the "Grey Mare's Tail," computed to be about 300 feet above the level of the vale, and which appears from the opposite side of the glen to be one unbroken fall; the stream is thence known as Moffat water, and flowing on through a narrow pass, sweeps through the domains of Dumcrieff, the property of Lord Rollo, and falls into the Annan. About four miles north-west is a petrifying chalybeate spring, and there are others attracting less attention. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited and the British Linen Co.'s Bank Limited. The principal inns are the Annandale Arms, the Buccleuch Arms, and the Star. The "Annandale Herald and Moffat News" is published here on Friday, and contains a visitors' list. During the season omnibuses ply from the Annandale and Buccleuch Arms hotels to St. Mary's loch on the Selkirk road, and are met at St. Mary's Cottage (Tibbie Shiel's) by conveyances from Innerleithen and Selkirk, where there are railway stations. The weekly market is on Friday. There are two half-yearly hiring markets; the first is held on the last Friday in March, the second on the last Friday of October. A fair for lambs is held in July, on the Friday after Langholm. There is also an annual sheep and cattle market called the tup fair, in September, on the Friday after the Falkirk tryst, at which time a flower, sheep, cattle &c. show—or rather a combination of shows, is held, to which by its excellence great crowds are attracted. The district is noted for the breed of cheviots; there is a grand annual sale of rams of that breed on the day before the tup fair. Some choice specimens of stock are always forwarded, and prices per head have repeatedly exceeded 100 guineas. Moffat House is the town residence of the superior, John James Hope-Johnstone esq. J.P. of Annandale. John Loudon M'Adam, well-known as the inventor of an improved system of road-making, and born at Ayr, 21 Sept. 1756, died in this town, 26 Nov. 1836, in his 81st year; a great portion of his early life had been spent in this neighbourhood, to which he was much attached, but it was as a magistrate of Ayrshire that his attention was first directed to the question of road-making; for his public services in this respect he received from Government £10,000, in two separate instalments, and was offered the honour of knighthood, which he declined on account of age and infirmities, and it was, instead, conferred upon his son. Joseph Locke F.R.S. an eminent engineer (born at Attercliffe, near Sheffield, in 1805), and the assistant and pupil of George Stephenson, and from 1847 to 1860 M.P. for Honiton, died here 18 Sept. 1860. Nicholaus de Moffet, Bishop of Glasgow (1268-1270); Robert Johnstone LL.D. author of "A History of Scotland," &c.; Walter Boyd, banker, of Boyd, Benfield & Co.; William Dickson, a writer on slavery; William Murray, the chronometrist, and Dr. D. Welsh, moderator of the first Free Church Assembly, and author of the "Life of Dr. Thomas Brown, a Church History," were all born at Moffat. Dr. William Carruthers F.R.S. late of the Nat. Hist. Dept. British Museum (1871-95), is also a native (1830). John James Hope-Johnstone esq. J.P. is the principal landowner. The area comprises 42,972 acres; rateable value, £29,704; the total population of the parish in 1891 was 2,977, which included 2,291 in the police burgh and 670 in the landward part in this county and 16 in Lanarkshire; in 1881 it was 2,930, with 2,161 in the burgh.

MONIAIVE, see GLENCAIRN.

MORTON is a parish about 12 miles north-west of Dumfries, bounded on the north and north-west by Durisdeer, east and south by Closeburn and south-west by Penpont, and extends 7 miles from north to south by 3 in breadth, and contains the village and railway station of Thornhill, which see; it is in the Upper Nithsdale poor combination and Thornhill small debt court district; it is both pastoral and arable, and, where cultivated, it is well inclosed and fertile. In addition to the Nith, the Carron and the Cample streams pass through the parish, the whole of which belongs to the Duke of Buccleuch, exclusive of one small property. Morton Castle, which is in ruins, is about 3 miles from Thornhill; it is an ancient structure, and during the minority of David Bruce was held by Sir Thomas Randolph, 1st Earl of Moray, as Regent of Scotland, and guardian to the king. Of the House of the Hassock, an ancient building, on the site of which the present castle was erected, some remains may still be traced. The remains of Roman camps and, in the high grounds, of ancient British camps, are very numerous over the whole district, and at one time there were many cairns of stones. The parish church, erected in 1781, on a site about a mile and a half from Morton Castle, was taken down in 1840-1 and the present edifice erected at Thornhill, by the late Duke of Buccleuch K.G. (d. 1884), at a cost of £3,550, and will seat 1,200 persons.

At Gatelaw Bridge, about 2 miles from Thornhill, is the Union Poorhouse, which serves for the ten adjoining parishes.

Carron Bridge is a village in the parishes of Morton and Durisdeer, on the river Carron and on the road from Sanquhar to Dumfries, about 2 miles south from Carron Bridge station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, and 1¾ north-west from Thornhill.

The area comprises 8,036 acres; rateable value, £11,861; the population in 1891 was 1,855, including 1,128 in Thornhill, and in 1881 was 2,118, with 1,289 in that village.

Post Office, Carron Bridge; Mrs. Grace Wallace, postmistress. Letters received through Thornhill. Deliveries, 6.45 a.m. & 8.15 p.m.; dispatches, 3.50 & 8.30 p.m. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Thornhill

MOUSWALD is a parish and village on the road from Dumfries to Annan, about 6 miles south-east from Dumfries, 10 north-west from Annan, and 2½ from Ruthwell and Racks (the nearest) stations, both on the Glasgow and South Western railway. The kirk, which stands on an elevated site close to the village, contains a dilapidated effigy of Sir Simon Carruthers, a former laird of Mouswald. At Mount Kedar, about a mile from Ruthwell, but in this parish, stands a monument erected to the Rev. Henry Duncan D.D. sometime minister of Ruthwell. The memorial, which is of stone, consists of an arched base, surmounted by a pyramid 40 feet in height; he was the founder of the system of savings banks, was born in 1774, and died in 1846, after being minister of Ruthwell parish for 44 years. In 1887 William F. Carruthers esq. of Dormont, proprietor of the village, provided a supply of water for the village by a system of gravitation. The area comprises 5,889 acres; rateable value, £4,954; the population in 1891 was 500, and in 1881, 558.

PENPONT is a parish and village, in Upper Nithsdale poor combination, and in Dumfries small debt court district; the parish is an extensive agricultural district, of irregular form and uneven surface, the only low land being found chiefly upon the verge of the rivers which flow through the parish; the village is about 2 miles south-west from Thornhill and 3 from Thornhill station on the Glasgow and South Western railway. The church, rebuilt in 1872, is a handsome edifice of sandstone, and has tower with spire and clock. Tibber's Castle, the ruins of which stand within a mile of Drumlanrig Castle, were excavated by the late Duke of Buccleuch; this fortress, referred to in Blind Harry's metrical history of Sir William Wallace, appears to have been destroyed during the reign of King Robert the Bruce (1306-29). The Glenquhargen

Craig, which rises to a great height, is in this parish, and there are likewise remains of Roman encampments, causeways, &c. The Duke of Buccleuch K.T. owns nearly the whole of the parish. The area comprises 21,961 acres; rateable value, £8,908 18s. 6d.; the population in 1891 was 1,063, and in 1881, 1,176, the population of the village being 407 in 1891, and 437 in 1881.

RUTHWELL is a parish and village about 7 miles west from Annan and 10 south-east from Dumfries, in the small debt court district of Annan, with a station about 2 miles distant on the Glasgow and South-Western railway; the village being also a barony, is privileged to hold markets and fairs, but it is long since the inhabitants availed themselves of these rights. The kirk and manse of Ruthwell stand about a quarter of a mile from the village. In 1887 the ancient and famous Runic monument here, formerly in the grounds of the manse, was removed and placed in the church. The Post Office was erected in 1886. About a mile from the station is Comlogon Castle, in part an ancient border keep, and now the residence of Arthur Hy. Johnstone-Douglas esq. D.L., J.P. but formerly one of the seats of the Murrays of Cochpool, now Earls of Mansfield. Clarencefield is a village in this parish, about a mile from Ruthwell station. The area comprises 8,693 acres; rateable value, £ ; the population in 1891 was 858, and in 1881, 868.

SAINT MUNGO is a parish in the district of Annandale, about 3 miles west from the village of Ecclefechan, and about the same distance south from Lockerbie. The Established church, erected by Sir R. Jardine bart. at a cost of £5,000, and opened 7th Jan. 1876, is an edifice of stone in the Gothic style. Castlemilk, the seat of Sir Robert Jardine bart. D.L. is a fine mansion romantically situated in the bosom of a delightful valley and surrounded by beautiful grounds. This house was originally the seat of the ancient lords of Annandale; much later it belonged to the Maxwells and to the Douglas family, but was eventually purchased by the Jardines from George Armstrong esq.; during the minority of Edward VI. it was besieged by the Duke of Somerset, and some of the balls fired on that occasion were found in 1771, on a spot afterwards called "The Cannon Holes." The area comprises 4,897 acres; rateable value, £6,916; the population in 1891 was 603, and in 1881, 653.

SANQUHAR is a town and royal and parliamentary burgh on the left bank of the river Nith, and a large parish in the district of Nithsdale and in Upper Nithsdale poor combination, 56 miles south-south-west of Edinburgh, the same distance south-by-east of Glasgow, 32 east-south-east of Ayr and 26 north-north-west of Dumfries, with a station on the Glasgow and South-Western railway. The town consists chiefly of one main street, and in respect of trade is the principal coal mart in the county, large quantities of coal being supplied to Dumfries and other parts. The coalfield is 7 miles in length and 2½ in breadth, and the veins are from 3 feet 8 inches to 4 feet 6 inches in depth. There are spade and shovel manufactories at Crawick and near the railway station, and two brick and tile works in the town. It is lighted with gas and supplied with water from works belonging to local companies. The town was made a burgh of barony in 1484, advanced to the dignity of a royal burgh in 1596 by charter of James VI. and is governed by a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild, treasurer, and four councillors. Sanquhar, in conjunction with Dumfries, Annan, Kirkcudbright and Lochmaben, forms the Dumfries parliamentary district, constituted in 1708, and returning one member. The Town Hall stands at the end of High street, and has a tower with a clock. In 1882 a handsome public hall was erected at a cost of £1,500. There is a Subscription Library at the Town hall, and a Social club also holds its meetings there. The parish church, erected in 1823, on the site of the former edifice, has a square tower. The Free school, founded by a bequest of £2,000, left by the late James Crichton, of Friar's Carse, in this county, and a native of Sanquhar, was discontinued in 1885, by an order of the Educational Endowment Commissioners, and the net proceeds of the endowment are now applied, through the School Board, to the purposes of higher education. The British Linen Company and the Royal Bank of Scotland have branches here, and there is also a District Savings Bank. The Castle ruins, which stand on a high bank overlooking the river Nith, a short distance south-east, were excavated by the late Duke of Buccleuch, and many interesting objects were then found, including several human skeletons and a well of great depth with a bucket suspended in it. The fortress, originally a building of great strength, had towers at the angles, and was surrounded by a ditch. It formerly belonged to a branch of the family of Crichton, ancestors of the Marquess of Bute and Lords Crichton of Sanquhar, a title still held by the present Marquess, by whom the castle was acquired from the Duke of Buccleuch in 1894. Eliock is the residence of the family of Veitch, who gave a senator to the college of justice in the last century; this mansion lays claim to the honour of being the birthplace of the "Admirable Crichton" (1561). Fairs are held on 1st Friday after the 12th of February and November (old style); and there is one for lambs, sheep and wool on the 17th July, or the first Friday after. The Sanquhar Farmers' Society's show for horses, sheep and cattle is held annually on the second Friday in May. Crawick and Mennock Bridge are small hamlets in this parish. The Duke of Buccleuch K.T. is the chief landed proprietor. The area of the parish comprises 40,846 acres; rateable value, £20,165; the population in 1891 was 2,910, including 1,315 in the town, and in 1881 was 3,109, with 1,339 in the town; the population (1891) of the royal burgh was 1,241, and of the parliamentary burgh 1,315.

THORNHILL is a considerable town or village in the parish of Morton, 66 miles south-by-east of Glasgow, 48 north-west of Carlisle, 40 north-east of Newton Stuart, 44 south-east of Kilmarnock, 30 north-west of Annan, the same distance south-east of Cumnock, 22 north-east of New Galloway, 14 north-north-west of Dumfries and 12 south-south-east of Sanquhar, with a station on the Glasgow and South-Western railway; it is charmingly situated towards the centre of the extensive amphitheatre of hills which include Middle Nithsdale, the river Nith winding through the valley. The streets are wide and lighted with gas. The trade is chiefly of a domestic nature; there is, however, a brewery. The Museum of Natural History and Antiquities,endowed by the late Dr. Grierson, who originated it and formed the collections, was erected in 1869, and is surrounded by tastefully laid out grounds, planted with shrubs and trees, and containing a statue by the late Mr. Currie, sculptor, of Dumfries, of Richard Cameron, a noted Covenanter, who fell fighting at Airdmoss, Ayrshire, when his head was cut off and conveyed to Edinburgh, and there placed on the Nether bow. The Freemasons' Hall is in South Drumlanrig street. There is also a Public Library containing about 1,000 volumes, several benevolent societies, Conservative and musical clubs, and bowling, lawn tennis and cricket clubs, as well as a society for the diffusion of knowledge by means of public lectures. There are branches here of the Union Bank of Scotland and the British Linen Co.'s Bank. The chief hotels are the Buccleuch, and Queensberry and the George. The Nithsdale Auction Company Limited hold sales for live stock at their mart adjoining the railway station, weekly on Saturday. The Nithsdale Agricultural Society's show is held on the third Tuesday of Sept. annually. Fairs are held on the second Tuesday in February (old style) and on the last Friday in June; the latter chiefly for hiring reapers and agricultural labourers. The population of Thornhill in 1891 was 1,128, and in 1881, 1,289.

TINWALD is a parish on the rivers Lochar and Æ, 4 miles north-east of Dumfries and 6 from Lochmaben, and is triangular in form, each side being about 4½ miles long, and for the most part the land is arable.

Skipmyre, in this parish, was the birthplace, in 1655, of William Paterson, the original projector of the Bank of England, founded in 1694, and in the same year he made public a scheme for the colonization of the Isthmus of Darien, for the accomplishment of which a company was incorporated in 1695 by Act of the Scottish Parliament, and between 1698-9, three expeditions sailed to Darien from Scotland, but the scheme being opposed by the English and Dutch and the colonists divided and reduced by quarrels, fever and famine,the project failed disastrously; the settlements were surrendered, 30 March, 1700, to the Spaniards; Paterson returned before the arrival of the second expedition and died after great losses and sufferings, 22 Jan. 1719.

Amisfield is a village in this parish, with a station on the Caledonian railway. Amisfield Tower, once the seat of the Charteris family, is now (1896) occupied by Lady Jardine.

The area comprises 10,283 acres; rateable value, £9,441; population in 1891 was 902 and in 1881, 861.

WAMPHRAY is a parish adjoining Kirkpatrick-Juxta and Johnstone, and is oblong in figure, being 8 miles in length by 3½ in breadth, and has a station on the Caledonian railway. The parish church stands in a deep wooded recess, by the side of Wamphray water, and over the belfry door is a fine sculptured stone, probably part of an ancient cross, which has been imitated in a monument erected to Mr. Charters, late teacher here, by his son, Professor Charters, of Edinburgh. Wamphray water, a tributary of the river Annan, brawls and thunders through a most romantic and picturesque glen, formed on both sides either by high steep banks clad with thriving plantations, or by lofty basaltic columns, mantled with ivy, and saplings of ash springing from their interstices. Sir Robert Jardine bart. of Castlemilk, is the principal landowner. The area comprises 13,133 acres; rateable value, £ ; the population in 1891 was 458, and in 1881, 455.

WANLOCKHEAD is a village and quoad sacra parish, at the eastern extremity of the parish of Sanquhar, and near the foot of the Lowther Hills, about 8 miles north-east from the burgh, and 6 from Elvanfoot station on the Caledonian railway; it is said to stand at a greater elevation above the sea level than any other village or town in Scotland. The houses are scattered on the hillside, without regard to regularity. The extensive and valuable lead mines in this neighbourhood belong to the Duke of Buccleuch K.T. and furnish employment to a considerable number of miners, artisans and others. The population in 1891 was 745, and in 1881, 788.

WESTERKIRK is a parish and village near the north-eastern boundary of the county, in the small debt court district of Langholm and Hawick poor combination, and about 6 miles north-west from Langholm (the nearest) station on the North British railway. Nearly the whole of this portion of the district is devoted to pasturage for sheep and cattle. The church stands on the left bank of the river Esk. The Duke of Buccleuch K.T. Sir Frederick J. W. Johnstone bart. of Westerhall, and Col. William Elphinstone Malcolm D.L., J.P. of Burnfoot, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 26,992 acres; rateable value, £5,689; the population in 1891 was 454, and in 1881, 478.

EDINBURGHSHIRE.

THE county of Edinburgh (or Mid-Lothian, a name which occasionally is applied to a small portion, being that part, excluding the burgh, which is represented by the county member) lies in the southern division of Scotland, bounded on the north by the Firth of Forth (an arm of the German ocean), by Linlithgowshire, or West Lothian, on the west, by the counties of Lanark, Peebles and Selkirk on the south,and by Haddingtonshire, or East Lothian, with small portions of Berwickshire and Roxburghshire, on the east. The length of the county, from east to west, is about 36 miles, and its breadth, from its extreme apex on the south, to near Musselburgh on the north, where the eastern extremity of the county abuts on Haddingtonshire, is about 24 miles. In figure it is very irregular. Its sea coast only extends for about 17 miles, and has no bays or lochs. The area of the county is about 362 square miles, or 231,724 acres; the population in 1891 consisted of 205,698 males and 228,461 females; total, 434,159, and in 1881 of 389,164 persons; the number of inhabited houses in 1891 was 85,164, and in 1881, 72,581. This county in size ranks as the twenty-third, and in population as the second, mostly due to it containing the capital.

Early History.—In common with other portions of the country, the part now forming Edinburghshire was under the control of the Picts and other Celtic tribes, and it was not until A.D. 81, when the Romans under Agricola, who 2 years previously entered the country by the Solway Firth, having constructed a wall across the isthmus between the Clyde and the Forth, took possession of what was for many centuries known as part of Northumbria, though then called by them the province of Valentia, which appears to have extended from the Forth southward to the Tyne, and this district was held by the Romans until 120, when they fell back to the line of the Tyne, returning in 139 and holding the country until about 410, when they evacuated it, leaving behind them many indications of their occupation. Shortly after this the Saxons seem to have pushed forward from the north-east of England and to have sustained for nearly a century a fierce struggle with the ancient inhabitants, to whom the Romans had handed over the country, a struggle which in 547 was decided in favour of the invaders, who under Ida, a Scandinavian chief, obtained a firm hold over a district extending from the Tees to the Forth, and called by them "Bernicia," while the portion now including Linlithgow, Edinburghshire, Haddingtonshire and part of Roxburghshire and Stirling became Laodine, or subsequently Lothian, a name even now called by the natives Loadian, and it is not until 617 that we meet with any designation resembling Edinburgh, when Aethelfrith, grandson to Ida, having been slain by his nephew Eadwine, a prince of Deira (or Yorkshire), the latter founded on the rock, on which a Pictish castle had already stood, a town and castle, to which he gave the name of Eadwinesburgh and as King of Northumbria ruled the country from the Humber to the Forth, and it was only in the reign of Malcolm II. 1057 to 1093, that Lothian became an integral part of the Scottish kingdom. In the struggle which Edward III. maintained for the restoration of the Baliol dynasty, one of the most sanguinary battles was fought on the Boroughmoor of the metropolis. In 1385 Mid-Lothian was subjected to the horrors of pillage and conflagration, in the expedition of Richard II.; and a century and a half later it suffered much from the invasion of the English, on account of the treaty of marriage between the son of Henry VIII. and the young Queen of Scots. The county was, soon after, the scene of many of the insurrectionary movements against the authority of Queen Mary, and in 1650 Cromwell passed through in pursuit of Charles II. but falling back to Dunbar, fought there, in September, the well-known battle in which he defeated General Leslie, and in 1745 Prince Charles Edward passed through to his victory at Prestonpans.

Surface, Soil & Climate.—The greater portion of the county is, if not mountainous, hilly, and in many places wild and pastoral; the portion under woods and plantations is only 11,000 acres. The most prominent hills are the Pentland Hills in the centre of the county, and the following, with their altitude above the level of the sea;—Blackhope Scar, 2,136 feet; Dodlaw, 1,550; Blackhill, 1,528; Moorfoot Hills, 1,850; Caerketton (Pentland range), 1,555; Spittal Hill, 1,360; Arthur's Seat (from its base, 700), 796; House of Whim, 884; Woodhouselee, 729; Dalmahoy Hill, 680; summit of Braid Hills, 630. By the close of the 11th century, agriculture had made some progress in the district of Mid-Lothian. During the last and present century much has been accomplished in this part in rearing plantations; but it is to the society of "Improvers," formed at Edinburgh about the year 1723, that this county is mainly indebted for its advancement in agriculture. In 1744 potatoes were first raised in fields, and in about thirty years afterwards their cultivation was completely established in the county. Agriculture is vigorously prosecuted in the valleys of the rivers; the upland districts being unsuitable for agriculture, thus causing more attention to be devoted to sheep farming, but cultivation is rapidly ascending the hills, while the boggy grounds are gradually undergoing a process of drainage. The universally prevalent system of leases here, generally for nineteen years, gives the tenant farmers of Scotland an independence which tenants at will, or from year to year, cannot have, and encourages them to expend money on the land. The climate is, upon the whole, salubrious, and not unfavourable to vegetation, its greatest drawback being its variability. The chief crops are oats, 25,800 acres; turnips, 12,281; barley, 5,120; potatoes, 4,621; wheat, 3,380; vetches, cabbage &c. 1,089 and hay, 14,949; the total corn crop being 34,682 acres, and of green crops 18,436 acres; land under grass, 34,655 and permanent pasture, 50,129 acres; total area of land and water, 236,089 acres. The live stock in 1894 comprised, horses, 4,594; cattle, 19,918; sheep, 183,116 and pigs, 7,057.

Minerals, Manufactures and Commerce.—The county abounds in several valuable minerals, especially coal, sandstone, limestone and whinstone. The production in 1894 of fire-clay was 33,081 tons, value £5,375; of coal, 720,681 tons, value £234,221; of iron ore, 61,711 tons, value £24,684; oil shale, 709,141 tons; limestone, 146,980 tons. In the western part is an extensive coal field, and the eastern contains inexhaustible and rich beds of this valuable mineral, extending from the shore at Musselburgh, on both sides of the North Esk, about fifteen miles inward, to the head of that stream at Carlops, on the confines of Tweedale. In the parish of Calder are extensive beds of rich bituminous shale, from which paraffin oil and other chemical products are extracted. Mid-Lothian possesses sandstone of different kinds, and of an excellent quality. The quarries of Edinburghshire have long enjoyed a pre-eminence which cannot be so effectually indicated by anything as by the appearance of the New Town of Edinburgh. The works of Craigleith and Hailes, near the city, are objects of curiosity. Almost all the houses of the New Town, besides other buildings, have been reared from the former mine. There are several other quarries of inferior note throughout the county. Lead was, in former times, found at the head of the North Esk, on the south side of the Pentland Hills. A vein of copper is said to exist in the parish of Currie, but it has never been worked. The manufactures of Edinburghshire cannot be traced to a remote date, and have never been remarkable for their extent. It is but little more than a century since that the fabrication of linen was known in the county. In Edinburgh, Leith, and Musselburgh there are now numerous manufactories of goods of different kinds. The principal articles manufactured in the shire for exportation, either by out-ports or inland, beside linen, are glass, soap, salt, candles, refined sugar, ale, whisky, leather, bricks, tiles, pottery, iron, chemical preparations, printing ink and materials, paper and books. The manufacture of paper became first known in Scotland in this county, and the district still possesses large establishments employed in this industry, chiefly at Penicuik, and in the neighbourhood of Colinton and Lasswade. Paraffin oil has also become an important manufacture at Mid and West Calder. The maritime traffic of the county, which is very considerable, is concentrated at Leith, the only port suitable to the entrance of large vessels, and indeed the only one of any kind except those of Fisherrow, or Musselburgh, Newhaven, and the rising port of Granton. The number of fishing boats registered in 1894 at the ports of Leith and Granton was 415, with an aggregate tonnage of 5,830 tons, employing 1,677 hands and 54 extras, besides 43 steam fishing vessels, aggregate tonnage, 1,226 tons, while 244 other vessels, aggregate tonnage, 114,030 tons, were registered at these ports and 15 steamers, aggregate tonnage, 3,200 and 2 sailing vessels, 211 tons, were built at Leith.

Rivers and Railways.—This county does not possess any large rivers. This deficiency, however, is of little or no importance, in consequence of being placed on the margin of a broad and navigable firth. Next the Forth, the Esk may be said to be the chief river; it is composed of two streams, which unite their waters below Dalkeith, and glide into the Forth at Musselburgh. The Leith, a valuable small river, takes its rise on the north side of the Pentland Hills, and after receiving several rivulets, discharges its waters, after a course of nineteen miles, into the Forth. The Almond, the most westerly stream, rises in the high grounds on the borders of Lanarkshire; it is joined by the Briech Burn, in its way to the Forth, which it enters at Cramond. The Union canal, 31 miles in length, proceeding to the west from Edinburgh, conveys large quantities of coals and various kinds of goods to the city. Several railways centre in the county; beginning at the north-east we have the North British line, from Berwick, via Dunbar, entering it at Wallyford, a little east of Musselburgh, joined after a few miles at Inveresk by the branch from Macmerry, and proceeding thence by Joppa and Portobello to Edinburgh; the next line towards the south is that known as the Waverley route, North British railway, entering the county at Boowland station and running north to Millerhill, Portobello and the city, with branches to Leith, Arthur's Seat and Murrayfield; another branch of the North British from Galashiels enters the county on the south at Leadburn, where a line from Dolphington joins it, and proceeds north to Bonnyrigg and Portobello into Edinburgh, and there are branches to Dalkeith, Glencorse, Polton and Penicuik. The Caledonian railway enters the county from Carlisle at Cobinshaw station and runs through Meadowbank, where the Glasgow branch joins it, to Edinburgh. The lines of the North British from Airdrie and Linlithgow come into the county at Ratho Junction, and are joined there by the line from the Forth Bridge, while small branches from Leith and Granton run into the north of the city.

Divisions, Parliamentary Constituency &c.—The county is divided into 28 complete civil parishes, including 3 in Edinburgh city and 2 in Leith, and parts of 4 others, and for judicatory purposes is divided into 6 districts. This district became subject to the government of a sheriff prior to the reign of David I. The office of sheriff of Edinburgh seems to have been at all times an appointment of great trust and dignity; and from the 13th to the 18th century was filled by the heads of families of note in the shire and its vicinity. Besides Edinburgh, the shire does not comprise any royal burghs, but possesses three of regality, namely, Musselburgh, Canongate and Portsburgh and the town of Leith. Its only burgh of barony is Dalkeith. The contributory burghs belonging to this county represented in Parliament are Leith, Musselburgh and Portobello. The county at large sends one member to Parliament. The parliamentary constituency of the county numbered in 1894-5, 13,750. There are 71 ecclesiastical parishes (including 34 in the city and 2 in Leith) and parts of 4 others, the whole being in the presbyteries of Edinburgh and Dalkeith and synod of Lothian and Tweedale. The valuation for 1894-5 (exclusive of railways and waterworks) was £576,684; and of railways and waterworks (exclusive of portions situated within burghs), £124,411.

BORTHWICK is a parish in Dalkeith poor combination and small debt court district, about 12 miles south-south-east from Edinburgh, on the Carlisle road, and has stations at Gorebridge and Fushie Bridge, both within the parish, on the North British railway. The village of Gorebridge (which see) is in this parish. Borthwick gives the title of baron to an ancient family of the same name, and though no official record of its creation exists, this peerage, certainly in existence before 1455, is stated to have been bestowed by James II. of Scotland, in 1452, on William Borthwick, son of Sir William, mentioned below. This parish was the birthplace, in 1721, of William Robertson D.D. author of the "History of Charles V." and other works; principal of Edinburgh University in 1722, and in 1764, historiographer for Scotland; he died 11 June 1793; here also was born in 1685, Robert Dundas, an eminent Scottish advocate, raised to the judicial bench in 1737 as Lord Arniston, and in 1748 president of the court of session. In the parish and about 2 miles west from Crichton are the ruins of Borthwick Castle, erected in 1430 by Sir William Borthwick. It is an imposing battlemented structure, 90 feet in height, with walls of hewn stone, varying in thickness from 13 feet at the base to about 7 feet at the top, and still bears traces of its siege by Cromwell. The Arniston Colliery Library was founded by Robert Dundas esq. D.L., J.P. of Arniston. Arniston House, the residence of Robert Dundas esq. J.P., D.L.; Vogrie, of Captain James Cumming Dewar J.P.; Borthwick Hall, of David J. Macfie esq. J.P. and Currie House, of Walter Brown esq. are in this parish.

Fushie Bridge is a village about one mile from Borthwick and 5 south from Dalkeith with a station on the North British railway. About a mile to the north is the village of Stobbs Mill, also lying in Borthwick parish.

The area comprises 9,806 acres; rateable value, £21,277; the population in 1891 was 3,102, including 849 in the village of Gorebridge, and in 1881, 1,741.

MID-CALDER is a parish and village, in the small debt court district of Edinburgh; the parish is bounded north and north-east by Uphall, east by Kirknewton, south and west by West Calder and north-west by Livingstone. The village, pleasantly situated on an eminence between the water of Linnhouse and the river Almond, on the road from Glasgow to Edinburgh, is 12 miles west-south-west from Edinburgh, and 8½ east from Whitburn, and has a station about 2½ miles distant, on the Edinburgh and Glasgow section of the Caledonian railway. Calder wood, which is of considerable extent, overhangs the village. The soil in the northern district is light, dry and fertile, in the southern the surface undulates towards the Pentland hills. About one-third of the entire area of the parish is under tillage; in the remaining portion there are several beds of rich, bituminous shale, from which a large quantity of paraffin oil and other chemical products are extracted at the different works. Coal abounds in the parish, and on the estate of Calder House, the property of Lord Torphichen, is an extensive bed of freestone of excellent quality. Fairs are held on the second Tuesday in March, and on the Friday after the second Tuesday in October. The parish church is a fine specimen of the Gothic style, and originally founded by Duncan, Thane of Fife, in the early part of the 13th century, was rebuilt on the ancient site by Peter Sandilands, a scion of the noble family of Torphichen, in 1541, and has since been enlarged and restored at a cost of over £3,000. Calder House is the seat of Lord Torphichen; John Knox, in the hall of this mansion, first dispensed the sacrament of the Lord's supper after the Reformation, and his portrait hangs in it. The house of Greenbank, in the vicinity, was the birthplace, in 1565, of John Spottiswoode, Archbishop of Glasgow (1603-15), and of St. Andrew's (1615). The Earl of Buchan, Lord Torphichen and Lieut.-Col. James Hare J.P. are the principal landowners. Pumpherston is a village in the north of this parish, in connection with the Shale Oil works. The area comprises 12,294 acres; rateable value, £22,015; the population in 1891 was 3,126, including 671 in the village of Mid-Calder, and 1,305 in the village of Pumpherston, and in 1881 was 1,695, with 657 in the village.

CORSTORPHINE is a village and parish in the poor combination and small debt court district of Edinburgh; the parish, which begins about 2 miles to the west of Edinburgh, is generally level, the only eminences being the Corstorphine hills, which have an altitude of 470 feet above the level of the sea. The whole parish consists of rich arable land, part of which is cultivated by market gardeners, and there are also many dairy farms. The village of Corstorphine is 3 miles west from Edinburgh, on the high road to Glasgow, and has a station, half a mile distant, on the North British railway. The church, attached in 1429 to a provostry or college, was founded and endowed by Sir Adam Forrester, his widow and their son, Sir John Forrester: it bears their arms on the outer wall in several places, and within are several life-size stone effigies of members of this family, occupying niches in the chancel. At the Board school is a good subscription library of over 2,000 volumes. Millburn Tower is the seat of Sir William Liston Foulis bart. John H. Dickson and W. Traquair Dickson who are lords of the manor, the Earl of Morton and Sir James Ramsay Gibson Maitland bart. J.P. of Barnton, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 3,654 acres; rateable value, £21,574; the population in 1891 was 2,332, including 1,199 in the village, and in 1881, 2,156, with 952 in the village.

Gogar, formerly an independent parish, is a pleasant hamlet in this parish, on the banks of the Gogar burn, a tributary of the water of Leith, and 5 miles south-west from Edinburgh, with a station, three quarters of a mile distant, on the North British railway. The present church occupies the site of a church existing here previous to the Reformation.

CRAMOND is a parish and village, 3 miles north-west from Craigleith station on the Leith and Newhaven branch of the Caledonian railway, in the small debt court district of Edinburgh; the parish, which contains a small portion of Leith parliamentary burgh, lies on the south shore of the Firth of Forth, some part of it being in Linlithgowshire, and is bounded on the west by the river Almond; the village of Cramond, on the east side of the creek into which the river falls, is known to have been an important Roman station. On the opposite bank is a craggy eminence, on which a fortification once existed, and from which, it is said, the parish derived its name. Opposite the mouth of the Almond, at a short distance from the shore, is Cramond Island, which rises with a gentle slope into a hill of moderate elevation, and part of it is cultivated. This place, from 1628, gave the title of baron to the Richardson family, of Norfolk, of which was Sir Thos. Richardson kt. lord chief justice, and speaker of the House of Commons (d. 1634); the peerage is supposed to have become extinct on the death of William, 5th baron, 28 July, 1735, but this is quite open to doubt. The parish contains the villages of Cramond Bridge, Davidson's Mains (which see) and the port of Granton, which is included with Edinburgh. Cramond Bridge, which has a terminal station of the Edinburgh and Cramond Bridge branch of the Caledonian railway, is situated on the Almond river, which is here crossed by a fine stone bridge, connected with a road from Edinburgh to South Queensferry, 5 miles from the city. Silver Knowe is the residence of the Right Hon. Lord George Young; Barnton House, of Sir James Ramsay Gibson Maitland bart. J.P.; Lauriston Castle, of Capt. Thomas McKnight Crawford; Craigie Hall, of Adam P. Cross esq. and Muirhouse, of William Davidson esq. Mr. William Davidson, of Muirhouse, Sir James Ramsay Gibson Maitland bart. J.P. and Capt. McKnight Crawford are the principal landowners. The area of the entire parish is 5,277 acres; rateable value, £34,758; the population in 1891 was 3,168, including 91 in the county of Linlithgow and 719 in the village of Davidson's Mains; in 1881 the parish contained a population of 3,004.

CURRIE is a parish and village, in the small debt court district of Edinburgh, bounded by Corstorphine and Ratho on the north and Colinton on the west, while the Pentland Hills skirt it on the south. The village, situated on the north bank of the water of Leith, is 6 miles south-west from Edinburgh, with a station on the Caledonian railway, and is also a quarter of a mile from Currie Hill station on the same line. The manufacture of paper and snuff is carried on to some extent. The Baberton Golf club, founded in June, 1893, has an excellent course of 18 holes, opened by Sir J. H. Gibson-Craig bart. on Christmas day, 1893; the club house, built in 1895 at a cost of £1,200, from the designs of Messrs. MacArthy & Watson, architects, is a building with gabled wings, and contains a club room, dining and ladies' rooms, kitchen and lavatories. Lennox Tower, on the estate of Maleny, beyond Currie, was anciently the seat of the Lennox family, as well as the occasional residence of Mary Queen of Scots. At a short distance from it, on the opposite bank of the river, are the ruins of another ancient edifice, once the mansion of the Skenes of Currie hill. The house of Baberton, also in this parish, was used as a hunting seat, first by James VI. of Scotland, previous to his access on to the English throne, and secondly by Charles X. of France, after his expulsion from his dominions in 1830. The area comprises 11,103 acres; rateable value, £23,828; the population in 1891 was 2,580, and in 1881, 2,390.

DALKEITH is a parish, market town, a burgh of barony and the head of a poor combination, 6 miles south-east from Edinburgh, and has a station on a branch from the Waverley section of the North British railway; there is also a station at Eskbank on the same section. It occupies a dry and exceedingly pleasant site, in a fertile district, diversified with hill, dale and wood, with the North and South Esk flowing around it. This place gives the title of Earl to the Douglas-Scott family, Dukes of Buccleuch. The immediate locality abounds with coal of excellent quality, which is worked to a great extent. Messrs. Mushets Limited, iron founders, afford employment to a large number of people, and Messrs. Henry Widnell & Stewart Limited, of the Eskbank Carpet works, give occupation to upwards of 300 hands. Midlothian is famous for the excellence of its oatmeal, and Dalkeith mills have long been identified with its production. There are also Messrs. Dawson's brush factory, Messrs. Hope's brass and iron works, Messrs. A. & W. Douglas's corn mills and Messrs. M'Lennan and Urquhart's brewery. The town is lighted with gas from works belonging to a company, formed in 1827. An ample supply of excellent water was obtained in 1888, within the burgh bounds by boring, the yield amounting to 65,000 gallons every 24 hours. The municipal body consists of a provost, two bailies and twelve commissioners, constituted under the Police Improvement (Scotland) Act, who have the power to assess and regulate local taxes. A sheriff court is held in the Foresters' Hall, for cases under the Small Debt Act and Certain Debts Recovery Act, on the third Thursday of every month (September excepted), and a police court at the Police barracks, on the second and fourth mondays of every month, and other days, as cases may require. There are branches here of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, opened in 1810; the National Bank of Scotland Limited in 1825; the Royal Bank of Scotland, in 1836; the Edinburgh and Glasgow Bank, merged in the Clydesdale Bank Limited, in 1858, has also a branch here. In 1839 a National Security Savings Bank was established, and there is also a Penny Bank. The Dalkeith Union workhouse was erected in 1849 at a cost of £4,058, for the poor of four parishes, but there are now twelve parishes in combination. The building is available for 120 inmates. The Market Hall, a fine covered building, opened in 1854, is 172 feet long, 50 feet wide and 45 feet high, and was erected at a cost of nearly £4,000. The corn market is held weekly on Thursdays. Fairs are held annually on the first Thursday after Rutherglen (in May), for horses, &c., on the third Tuesday in October for cattle &c. last Thursday in February, first Thursday in April, and second Thursday in October for hiring. A newspaper, the "Dalkeith Advertiser," is published here on Thursday. Dalkeith House, the seat of His Grace the Duke of Buccleuch K.T. who is the principal landowner, stands on the south bank of the Esk adjoining the town and occupies the site of an ancient castle, long in the possession of the family of Douglas, and afterwards the frequent residence of the Regent Morton during the minority of James VI., when it was commonly and significantly called "the lion's den." The present edifice, erected by the Scott family, about the close of the 17th century, is a substantial mansion in the Classic style, consisting of a centre with wings, the ornamental features being of the Corinthian order. The hall, the grand staircase, and the several suites of apartments within are spacious, elegantly furnished, and enriched by a valuable collection of paintings. His late Majesty George IV. on his visit to Scotland, sojourned here; and her present Majesty, Queen Victoria, has likewise repeatedly honoured the house with her presence. The park contains about 800 Scottish, or 1,000 English acres, surrounded by a stone wall; it is adorned with much fine timber, and traversed by the streams of the two rivers Esk. The parish area is 2,344 acres; rateable value, £38,267; the population in 1891 was 7,704, including 6,953 in the town of Dalkeith and in 1881 was 7,707, of which 6,835 were in the town.

DUDDINGSTON is a parish, in Inveresk poor combination and the small debt court district of Edinburgh and containing portions of the burghs of Portobello and Edinburgh, and is bounded by the parish of Canongate, a part of the metropolis on the west, South Leith on the north, the sea and part of Inveresk on the east, and Liberton on the south; Duddingston and Craigmillar station on the Edinburgh Suburban and Southside line of the North British railway, is near the southern border of the parish. Superiority of the barony of Dodinestoun, with the church, was granted to Kelso Abbey, founded by David I. in 1128, and remained in the possession of the abbey till the Reformation, when the barony came into the possession of the Thompson family, the last of whom was made a baronet by Charles I. in 1636. The barony of Duddingston became, in 1674, the property of the notorious John (Maitland), Duke of Lauderdale, from whom it passed with his step-daughter, Elizabeth (Tollemache), to her husband Archibald, 1st Duke of Argyll. In 1745 it was sold by his successor to James, 8th Earl of Abercorn, whose present representative, the Duke of Abercorn K.G. still holds a large portion of it. Easter and Wester Duddingston are both villages in this parish. Wester Duddingston is charmingly situated near the base of Arthur's Seat, and at the east end of Duddingston Loch and round Arthur's Seat is a noble thoroughfare, known as the Queen's Drive. The church, which stands on a small eminence rising from the verge of the water, is an edifice of Norman origin, built in the first part of the 12th century, but has been modernised externally. Duddingston House is the residence of General H. A. Cockburn. Duddingston Loch, a beautiful sheet of water, is about a third of a mile in length, and not more than half a mile from the southern outskirts of Edinburgh. There is an excellent road between Duddingston and Portobello. The Duke of Abercorn K.G., P.C. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The area comprises 1,731 acres; rateable value, £52,792; the population in 1891 was 9,643, including 52 in Edinburgh and 8,519 in Portobello.

Post Office, Duddingston, Thomas Hay, postmaster. INVERESK is a parish and village and the head of a poor combination, in the small debt court district of Edinburgh, and has a junction station on the North British railway. There is also a station at New Hailes in this parish. The pleasant village of Inveresk consists chiefly of mansions and villas, surrounded by attractive grounds. The parish church, which occupies the summit of the hill of Inveresk, is a large square edifice in a plain style, and has a tower with a lofty and elegant spire. In the churchyard is the grave of D. M. Moir, see Musselburgh, p. 468. Pinkie House, long the country residence of the Abbots of Dunfermline, and now the residence of General Sir William Hope bart. J.P. is delightfully situated in extensive policies, with fine old trees. Its turreted tower and much admired Gothic fountain are, perhaps, the portions of greatest antiquity and interest. The site of the battle of Pinkie, 10 Sept. 1547, is about a mile south of Pinkie House, and overlooking it, a mile and half further off, is Carberry hill, celebrated for the surrender of Queen Mary to the confederated nobility 15 June, 1567, and her final parting with Bothwell. Near is the fine mansion of Carberry Tower, the seat of Lord Elphinstone. New Hailes, a fine mansion half a mile south-west from Fisherrow, now the property and residence of Sir Charles Dalrymple bart. J.P., M.P. was the seat of Sir David Dalrymple bart. who was in 1766 appointed a lord of session, as Lord Hailes; he was distinguished as the great restorer of Scottish history and antiquities, and died in this mansion 29 Nov. 1792, where his valuable library is carefully preserved. In this parish are found limestone, freestone, and coal, the latter particularly in abundance. From the higher grounds to the south most extensive views are to be obtained, reaching from Ben Lomond, Ben Ledi and Ben Vorlich on the west to the German Ocean, and from the Grampians Ochils, and Lomonds to the Pentlands, Moorfoots, the Lammermuirs, the Firth of Forth, and Fife coast, forming the foreground of the panorama. Monkton Hall is a small village and Brunstane, or Brunstane Mills, a hamlet, both in the parish of Inveresk, the latter being about a mile from Musselburgh. New Craig Hall, or Niddrie, is a mining village, 1 mile west from Fisherrow, and has a station on the North British railway. The colliery works of the Niddrie and Benhar Coal Co. are near here. Deantown and Cowpits are colliery villages further south. LASSWADE is a town and police burgh and parish in Dalkeith poor combination and small debt court district, 6 miles south of Edinburgh and 2 south-west from Dalkeith. There are five railway stations in the parish, viz.: Lasswade and Polton (the terminus) on the Polton branch and Hawthornden, Rosslynlee and Pomathorn, on the Peebles and Dolphinton section of the North British railway. The North Esk runs through the whole length of the parish. The town has been greatly improved by the erection of many substantial dwellings, and the opening of various manufactories, including several paper mills. The parish church is an ancient structure, and in the attached cemetery lie the remains of William Drummond, of Hawthornden, the poet, who died 4 Dec. 1649, and to whom a memorial was erected in 1893: one aisle contains the burial vault for the noble family of Dundas, and here was interred Henry (Dundas), 1st Viscount Melville P.C. and secretary of state during the administration of Mr. Pitt; he died 29 May, 1811. There are traces in the village of two religious foundations, St. Ann's and St. Leonard's. Melville Castle, on the bank of the Esk, is the seat of Viscount Melville, and near here, on the same river, are Polton, once the residence of Constable, the printer and publisher, and now the seat of James H. Balfour Melville W.S.; and Hawthornden, the home of Drummond, the poet and historian, and now the seat of Sir James Hamlyn Williams-Drummond bart. J.P., D.L. Pittendreich is the seat of Lady Deas. Sir Walter Scott spent the first years of his married life in a neat cottage a little apart from the village. John Clerk, of Eldin, author of a famous work on naval tactics (d. 10 May, 1812) and his son, also John Clerk, a learned lawyer, appointed a lord of session, as Lord Eldin, in 1823, both resided in Lasswade; and Thomas de Quincey, the author of the "Life of an Opium Eater," and many other works, lived in a cottage at Mavis Bush, near Polton, during 1840-41. Below Hawthornden are three caves, which in troublous times afforded shelter to fugitives; the largest, 90 feet in length, 12 feet wide at the entrance, gradually tapering inwards, and 6 feet in height, with a shaft cut for the admission of the light and air, and in a recess there is a well, several fathoms deep. Broomieknowe, a hamlet in this parish, forms part of the town and police burgh of Bonnyrigg, which see. The area comprises 10,678 acres; rateable value, £60,937; the population in 1891 was 10,455, including 3,244 in the village of Loanhead.

LIBERTON is a parish in the small debt court district of Dalkeith, including three villages of its name—Upper (or Over)

Liberton, Liberton Kirk and Nether Liberton, with Gilmerton (which see), and Greenend. The kirk town is about 3 miles south from Edinburgh, 3 north-west from Dalkeith and Lasswade. Duddingston and Craigmillar station on the North British Suburban railway, which encircles the outskirts of Edinburgh, is near the northern border of the parish, and Gilmerton, on the Roslin and Glencorse line, is close to the south eastern boundary. The old church of Liberton was removed on the erection of the present structure, a building in the Gothic style, with turrets and pinnacles; the manse adjoins. The inhabitants are for the most part engaged in the adjacent collieries. Greenend village is about 4 miles north from Lasswade, on the road to Edinburgh. Large quarries of limestone are worked at Burdiehouse, and those of freestone and whinstone in various parts employ many persons. There are also three breweries, a malting, a creamery and a margarine factory. Colonel Henry Trotter D.L. of Morton Hall, and Colonel Andrew Gilbert Wauchope C.B., C.M.G. of Niddrie Marischal, are the principal landowners. The celebrated cave here, dug by George Paterson, a blacksmith, out of the solid rock, and finished in 1724, after five years' toil, contains several apartments with bedsteads, and a table with a large punch bowl, all hewn out of the same material, and also includes a smith's forge, a well and a washing house. Here Paterson lived for several years, and here he died about 1737. Craigmillar Castle, sometime a favourable residence of Queen Mary, stands on rising ground of moderate elevation, and commands a beautiful and extensive prospect over the surrounding country. The area comprises 6,617 acres, rateable value, £47,192; the population in 1891 was 8,266, including 2,037 in Edinburgh.

MUSSELBURGH is an ancient town and a burgh of regality in the parish of Inveresk, and in Inveresk poor combination and Edinburgh small debt court district, 2½ miles east from Portobello, 4 north from Dalkeith,5 east from Leith and 6 east from Edinburgh, with a station on a branch from Inveresk Junction of the North British railway. The town occupies a level expanse upon the south shore of the Firth of Forth, generally acknowledged to be an ancient sea level. The river Esk flowing through, divides it into nearly two equal parts, that on its western bank being known, up to 1896, as Fisherrow, but now all is included in the one designation, Musselburgh. The town consists of two streets, lying nearly due east and west along the eastern bank; the main or High street, extending from the bridge over the Esk on the west to Loretto and Pinkie on the east, and being on the great road from Edinburgh to Berwick and London. The approach to High street from the station is through a fine avenue of trees called the Mall. Parallel to High street is Mill hill, which leads from the Esk to the London road, at the entrance to the Links and Loretto grounds. A street known as Newbigging runs southward from a point opposite the cross, and leads directly to Inveresk, a quarter of a mile inland. There are also a few minor streets and alleys on the western bank; the principal thoroughfares are from parallel streets. The streets generally are of good width and are well paved with whinstone blocks, and the two portions are connected by six bridges across the Esk. The old bridge, a venerable structure of three arches, was built by Lady Janet Hepburn, wife of George, 3rd Baron Seton,and grand-aunt of the notorious James (Hepburn), 4th Earl of Bothwell, so unhappily associated with the history of Mary Queen of Scots. Upon the top of one of the buttresses may still be seen the iron fastenings to which the gateway was attached. The roadway is high and narrow, and is approached by a flight of steps at either end, being now used only by foot passengers, although in ancient times it was the chief thoroughfare to the south. Across it the Scottish army passed after the battle of Pinkie (10 Sept. 1547), when Lord Graham, eldest son of the Earl of Montrose, and others were killed on it by cannon shot from the English fleet anchored at the river mouth. The other bridges are: one of iron for foot passengers only at the lower ford, another of iron at the middle ford, also for foot passengers only; the new stone bridge of five elliptical arches, designed by John Rennie F.R.S.the famous engineer; the iron girder railway bridge on the North British railway, Musselburgh branch; the stone railway bridge carrying the N.B.R. main line to London; and the Cowpits wood bridge for foot passengers, near Dalkeith policies. The small harbour on the western bank of the river is under the control of commissioners. A large sum has been expended in erecting and improving the piers, but the access to the harbour is shallow, and does not admit vessels of any considerable tonnage. The custom house, connected with that of Leith, is near the harbour. A portion of the inhabitants around here are fishermen, and the produce of their industry is conveyed by rail to Edinburgh and disposed of by their wives and daughters. Contiguous to Fisherrow Links are the public slaughter houses, constructed upon the most approved plan. An effective system of drainage has been carried out, and the water supply, derived from the Moorfoots, is ample and excellent. The town is lighted with gas by a company established in 1831, whose works are at the north-west corner of the Links, near the river mouth. Thomas, 9th Earl of Mar, in 1340, granted to the town its first charter. After the disastrous battle of Pinkie, in 1547, this charter, and the whole of the burgh records, were ruthlessly destroyed by the Duke of Somerset K.G. lord protector, but in 1562 Robert Pitcairn, commendator of Dunfermline, executed another, affirming the ancient rights and privileges of the burgh. This charter is still extant, and has been ratified and confirmed by various subsequent charters and Acts of Parliament, more particularly by one from John, Duke of Lauderdale K.G. lord high commissioner in Scotland, dated 1670, in which all former grants in favour of the burgh are acknowledged. In 1632, Musselburgh was erected into a royal burgh by charter under the great seal, an act which excited the jealousy of the magistrates of Edinburgh, who contrived to obtain a reduction of the charter in the same year. The burgh is, however, still represented on the convention of royal burghs, founded in 1150. Musselburgh is governed by a provost, three bailies, a treasurer and seven councillors, elected according to the provisions of the Burgh Reform Act. The magistrates hold a court of record, and to grant enfeoffments. Their jurisdiction extends two and a half miles along the shore, from the Magdalen bridge rivulet on the west to Ravenshaugh streamlet on the east, which at that locality is the boundary with Haddingtonshire; but they possess no jurisdiction over Inveresk village, which is included within the county. Musselburgh, together with Leith, Newhaven and Portobello, forms the Leith parliamentary district, constituted under the Reform Act, 1832 (2 and 3 Wm IV c. 45) and returning one member. The Town House, which occupies an angle in the High street, is a substantial edifice, including an Assembly room, council chamber, offices for the town clerk, town chamberlain, burgh surveyor, and quarters for the constabulary. Attached to the building is a tower with a slated spire of quaint Flemish design, and containing a clock, presented to the town by the Dutch States in 1496, and its working parts are still in wonderful preservation. Connected with the Town House is the gaol, said to have been erected about 1590, from the materials of the ruinous chapel of Loretto, but used since the passing of the Prison Act, only as a temporary place of confinement for petty offenders. The Town Cross, which stands opposite the municipal offices, consists of a square base, supporting a disused pant or basin, from the centre of which rises a stone pillar surmounted by the figure of a unicorn bearing a shield with the borough arms, az. three anchors, one in the centre chief, and two in fess, or, and as many mussels, two in the dexter and sinister chief points respectively, and one in base, ppr. A drinking fountain was erected in 1895, at the top of High street, at a cost of over £500, by Mr. David T. Wright, merchant, of Riddle's close, Leith, and a native of Musselburgh, who has presented it to the town; the fountain, which stands on a circular base of two steps, is an octagonal structure in the Renaissance style, four of the sides having arched recesses with basins of grey granite; it is finished above with a frieze and cornice, and a ribbed ogee shaped dome, and also bears the arms of the town, of the Regent Randolph, Earl of Moray, and those of the donor, and another shield, charged with the emblem of St. Michael; the total height is 18 feet. In the same street, and opposite the fountain, is the memorial erected to David Macbeth Moir, the celebrated poet and litterateur, and a native of Musselburgh, best known by his contributions to "Blackwood's Magazine,"under the name of 'Delta;" he died 6 July, 1851. At the east end of Musselburgh, near the Links, are the scattered buildings and fields belonging to the now well-known school of Loretto. The school house occupies the site of a monastery, originally an offshoot from the castle of Our Lady of Loretto in Italy, and became a cell to the abbey of Dunfermline during the 12th century; subsequently the property fell into the hands of the Maitland family, Earls of Lauderdale, whose monogram may still be seen over the door of an old vault, and it was afterwards bought by the celebrated Lord Clive, who erected a considerable part of the present building. In 1829 it was converted into a preparatory school by the late Rev. Dr. Langhorne, but gradually changed its type, and eventually took rank as a public school, being especially noted for its proficiency in athletic games and choral singing. The school choir is probably the most powerful in Scotland, and is now heard to advantage in the beautiful chapel, erected by past and present scholars. There are branches here of the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Lim. and the National Bank of Scotland Limited. The manufactories here include the Patent Fishing Net Works of Messrs. Stuart; in addition to which this firm has another large factory of the same kind at Buckhaven, Fifeshire. Adjoining this establishment are the very extensive paper mills of the Inveresk Paper Company, which give employment to a large number of hands. Besides these industries there are two large breweries, maltings and seed crushing, tanning and leather currying works, and the manufacture of confectionery, potteryware, salt, skin mats, bricks and tiles, and boat building are all carried on. There are several literary, benevolent and religious societies; and golf, bowling, cycling, tennis, cricket and football clubs. A battery of the Mid-Lothian Volunteer Artillery, and a company of the 6th Volunteer Battalion Royal Scots, have their head quarters in the town.

The extensive common, known as Musselburgh Links, has long been in deserved repute as a golfing ground, and both the Royal Musselburgh Golf Club, the Musselburgh New Golf Club and the Bruntsfield Golf Club have erected club-houses adjoining it. The Royal Company of Archers also come here once a year to compete for the Musselburgh silver arrow. This competition is said to have been instituted in the 16th century, and is an event of great local interest. Attached to the arrow are many gold and silver medals, added by successive winners, and it is annually returned to the town that it may again be offered for competition. The Edinburgh race meeting is also held here annually, and the races of the Royal Caledonian Hunt at intervals of three years. Cromwell, before the battle of Dunbar in 1650, quartered his infantry on Musselburgh Links, his own tent being pitched on an elevated spot nearly opposite Linkfield House, and his cavalry quartered at Inveresk. Skirting Musselburgh Links on the south are the attractive residences known as Linkfield, Woodside and Linkfield House; and at the eastern extremity is the suburb of Levenhall, including Buccleuch Park, Hope Place and West Pans, now a popular seaside resort. The Romans, after their invasion of Britain, established themselves in this locality, planting a colonia upon the rising ground at Inveresk. Where the church now stands an altar was erected to Apollo, and various buildings once stood in the adjacent grounds of Inveresk House. Towards the close of the last century the remains of a Roman villa were discovered here. Musselburgh, in the Saxon chronicle, is mentioned as the "Eskmuthe" of the Northumbrians, whose territory extended from the Humber to the Forth, and this name is the exact equivalent of Inveresk, i.e., mouth of Esk, the present name of the parish. In the earliest Scottish records mention is made of the two manors of Little Inveresk and Great Inveresk. Malcolm III. surnamed Ceanmor or Canmore (1058-93), and his consort, Queen Margaret, gifted the manor of Little Inveresk to the monks of Dunfermline, and their son, David I. confirmed this, and gave in addition Greater Inveresk, which included the burgh and port of Musselburgh. In 1206 the Scottish nobles assembled at Musselburgh to take the oath of fidelity to Alexander II., infant son of William the Lion. Until the Reformation it continued a burgh of regality, belonging to Dunfermline Abbey; Lord Maitland, of Thirlstane, and lord chancellor of Scotland, then became the Superior, and the burgh still pays a small annual sum in name of feu duty to the Duke of Buccleuch, whose ancestress, Anne, Duchess of Monmouth, acquired rights thereto about the beginning of last century. The latest attempt to extort feudal homage from the magistrates, as representing the towns-people, in 1702, at the instance of Sir Robert Dickson, of Smerton, was successfully resisted upon the ground that the charters granted to the burgh freed them of any such acknowledgments. Her Majesty the Queen, the Prince of Wales and the Duke of Connaught have at different times honoured Musselburgh with their presence, and the Princes have played golf upon its links. In 1888 the rateable value of Musselburgh was £29,000, and at the present time is £32,416. The population of the burgh in 1891 was 8,888, and in 1881, 7,880.

NEWBATTLE is a parish and small village,in Dalkeith poor combination and small debt court district; the village is situated about a mile to the south of Dalkeith, where there is a station on the North British railway, and is watered by the South Esk. Newton Grange is a village in this parish. The parish church is a plain building, but several of the windows are stained. In 1895 it was enlarged and restored, when an ancient aisle, for many years walled up, was re-opened, and named "Lord Aneram's aisle," as a memorial to Walter William Schomberg (Kerr), Earl of Aneram, who died in June, 1892. Robert Leighton, afterwards Bishop of Dunblane and Archbishop of Glasgow, was minister of Newbattle from 1641 to 1652, and the pulpit in which he preached is still in use. In the church is a mural tablet, erected in memory of the archbishop, who died 1 Feb. 1684. The parish abounds in valuable coal mines, worked by the Lothian Coal Co. Limited. Newbattle Abbey, the seat of the Marquess of Lothian K.T., P.C., LL.D. who is also Baron Kerr of Newbattle, occupies part of the site of the ancient Cistercian abbey, and it is surrounded by grounds containing some of the oldest and largest trees in the kingdom, including a beech of extraordinary dimensions. The mansion has a collection of valuable paintings, both ancient and modern. The abbey of Newbattle, or Newbotle, was founded in 1140 by David I. for the monks of the Cistercian order. The buildings were burnt by Richard II. of England in 1385, and again by the Earl of Hertford in 1544. The architecture is chiefly Early English, and has been assigned to the middle of the 13th century. The foundations of the Abbey Church, accidently discovered, have now been disclosed throughout, and show that it consisted of a long nave with aisles, choir and a central tower. In 1892 some workmen in digging, came upon the foundations of the north transept and side chapels; the excavations were continued in 1893 and 1894, and revealed the bases of piers, in line with those now remaining in the crypt, and connecting them with the south transept. An immense open chimney (12 ft. 6 in. by 6 ft.) was also discovered. The piers of the crypt are octagonal, the plain shafts measuring 3 ft. 6 in. in height, and carrying circular arches; some finely carved bosses were also found, one of which is placed in the crypt, which, so far as at present opened, is 100 feet long by 27 ft. 7 in. wide. The Great Hall and the Chapter house have also been examined, and from the east end of the church towards the south, the foundations of other buildings were met with, including a portion of the stair from the dorter (dormitory), and an entrance to the cloisters; the walls are of ashlar, and on the south of this entrance was a groined chamber with the bases of four columns, and, extending east and west, a stone built arched culvert of ashlar work; the line of the walls and position of the piers of the church have been carefully marked with brown glazed fire-clay edging, specially made. In course of the work a number of stone coffins were found, principally outside the choir and north transept, and one of polished stone near the entrance to the church from the cloisters. The area of the parish comprises 5,225 acres; rateable value, £17,528; the population in 1891 was 3,560 and in 1881, 3,346.

PENICUIK is a parish and police burgh, on the borders of Peebles-shire, in Peebles poor combination, and in the small debt court district of Dalkeith; the parish is from 11 to 12 miles in length and 6 in breadth, and is watered throughout by the North Esk. The town, seated on high land, on the north bank of the North Esk, and on the road from Edinburgh to Peebles, is about 9 miles south-west from the former, 13 north from the latter, and 9 south-south-west from Dalkeith, and has two stations on the North British railway, one in the town, the terminus of the Penicuik line, and another at Esk Bridge (half a mile north-east) on the same section. Along its northern border, the parish includes a considerable part of the Pentland Hills, on which are pastured numerous flocks of sheep. The southern portion is more level, and the soil is various, but dairy farming is carried on to a considerable extent on several of the farms. The town is governed by a provost, two bailies, and commissioners. The principal industry is the manufacture of paper, carried on at Valleyfield Mills by Messrs. A. Cowan & Sons Lim. and at Esk Mills by Messrs. J. Brown & Co. Lim. At Valleyfield Mills, the largest in this part of the country, both printing and writing papers are manufactured. In the beginning of this century these mills were acquired by Government for the reception of 5,000 French prisoners of war, of whom 300 died here and were buried in the grounds, and in 1860 a handsome monument was erected to their memory, near the spot, by some of the inhabitants. The Esk Mills, the first mills in Scotland devoted to the manufacture of cottons, were afterwards used as cotton and paper mills, but are now paper mills only. There is abundance of coal and limestone, the latter occasionally so hard as to admit of a fine polish, and containing a variety of petrifications. Whinstone and freestone are also plentiful, and in Carlope Hill lead and iron ore have been discovered. Ironstone mining has also become an important industry. The Cowan Institute, in the High street, erected in 1894 by the late Alexander Cowan, at a cost of £4,500, is a handsome building containing a library of 2,500 volumes, reading and billiard rooms, a public hall and a gymnasium. "Habbies How" is a romantic glen here, and there is another of the same name in the adjoining parish of Glencorse. There are several chalybeate and petrifying springs in this district, and on the banks of the North Esk, near Spittal Hill, is a well, the waters of which have a bitter taste, and are drunk by the country people for bowel complaints. In the locality are several ruined castles and vestiges of encampments. Penicuik House, built about 1761 by Sir James Clerk, 3rd bart. (d. 1782), is now the residence of Col. Sir George Douglas Clerk bart. J.P.; the mansion contains a good collection of paintings, including Ossian's Hall, by Alexander Runciman, who was employed by Sir James Clerk to decorate the house with scenes from Ossian. Sir James also collected here a considerable number of Roman antiquities. South of the house is an obelisk erected to Allan Ramsay, the poet, who frequently resided here, and died in 1758, and the grounds of New Hall, another mansion in the parish, are supposed to be the scene of his fine pastoral comedy, "The Gentle Shepherd," published in 1728. The area comprises 18,880 acres; rateable value, £27,990; the population in 1891 was 4,914, and in 1881, 5,309; the police burgh in 1891 had a population of 3,002.

POLTON, see LASSWADE.

PORTOBELLO is a town, municipal and parliamentary burgh and fashionable watering place, on the south side of the Firth of Forth, in the parishes of Duddingston and South Leith; the town is 3 miles east from Edinburgh by road, and has two stations, one near the centre of the town, and another at Joppa, on the Berwick and Carlisle section of the North British railway. As a town it has risen to its present importance with singular rapidity; towards the close of the last century the ground which it occupies was an unproductive waste along the shore, overspread with whins and bent, the only dwellings here consisting of a thatched hut of two rooms, which stood until 1862, when it was pulled down to make room for the Town Hall, and one or two shepherds' shealings, the hut being used as a hostelry, or half-way house, for travellers taking the shore road from Musselburgh to Edinburgh. The town, which continues to increase in size and importance, now consists principally of one main street, the High street, 1½ miles in length, which forms a part of the highway from Edinburgh to London, and includes Joppa, now practically a part of the town; branching off right and left are other streets with terraces, squares &c. the houses in most of which have gardens in front. The residential accommodation is ample, and there are several hotels. The beach, a noble expanse of pure smooth sand, affords safe and convenient bathing at all times of the tide, and there is also a suite of warm salt water baths. The Marine Promenade, laid out by the Town Council, is a broad thoroughfare, a mile in length, stretching along the sea beach, and in the centre stands the Prince of Wales's Fountain, an ornamental structure for drinking purposes. The pier, 1,250 feet long, has seats for 2,000 persons, and a spacious saloon with pavilion above, in which concerts are held twice daily during the summer months. Water of excellent quality is supplied in abundance at high pressure, and the houses and streets are lighted with gas. A large sum of money has also been expended on the drainage of the town, which is now thorough and complete. Considerable trade is done in the manufacture of paper, bottles, pottery, earthenware, bricks and tiles and at Joppa there are salt works. Portobello was erected into a burgh in 1883 and is governed by a provost, two bailies, a treasurer and nine councillors. Conjointly with Leith and Musselburgh it forms the Leith parliamentary district, constituted in 1833, under the "Reform Act, 1832" (2 and 3 Wm.

IV. c. 45), and returning one member. The quoad sacra parish of Portobello was formed from the civil parishes of Duddingston and South Leith. The church of the quoad sacra parish of Portobello was erected in 1809, as a chapel-of-ease, subordinate to the kirk session of Duddingston, and the Rev. John Glen continued to be the minister until the disruption of 1843. There are branches here of the Royal Bank of Scotland, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, and the Clydesdale Bank Limited. Three weekly newspapers are published here, viz.:—"The Portobello Advertiser," "The Midlothian Journal" and "The Musselburgh News," all on Friday. The scenery surrounding the town is varied and extensive—on one side is the noble estuary of the Forth, with the island of Inchkeith, the hills of Fife and Kinross, the fertile lands of East Lothian, Troplainlaw and North Berwick Law, and in the distance the Bass Rock, and on the other side are Arthur's Seat, Craigmillar Castle, and the Pentland Hills. The Duke of Abercorn K.G., P.C., C.B., Sir James Percy Miller bart. J.P. of Manderston, and Wakefield Christie Miller esq. are the principal landowners.

Joppa, before mentioned, intimately connected with and now a part of the burgh of Portobello, is of modern growth. Its salt works and quarries have been wrought for many years, but the latter are now worked out. Coal at one time was found in great abundance; but in consequence of the flooding of the pits, which stood near the sea, in 1790, the works have been entirely abandoned. From its proximity to the beach and rocks, Joppa is a favourite resort of summer visitors. There are numbers of neat villas built near the road, nearly all of which are laid out for their accommodation.

The rateable value is £53,295; the population in 1891 was 8,684, and in 1881, 6,926; the ecclesiastical parish in 1891 contained a population of 5,594.

PUMPHERSTON, see MID CALDER.

RATHO is a parish and village, in the small debt court district of Edinburgh; the parish is about 4 miles long and 3 broad, and lies midway between the Pentland Hills and the Firth of Forth; it is bounded on the north and north-west by Kirkliston, on the north by Kirkliston and Corstophine, south-east by Currie, and south-west by Kirknewton; the village is about 8 miles west-by-south from Edinburgh, and has a junction station on the Edinburgh and Glasgow section of the North British railway. The country in the eastern part of the parish is flat, and the soil fertile, but the ground rises gradually towards the west. The parish church, originally erected in the 12th century and restored in the 17th and again in the earlier part of the present century, is an irregular structure, incorporating work of each of these periods, but is not without features of interest. The Roman Catholic church was erected in 1883. Dalmahoy, the property of the Earl of Morton, and Hatton House, formerly belonging to the Maitlands, Earls of Lauderdale, are in this parish. Hatton is one of the oldest and most substantially built houses in Scotland, and its massive walls contain hiding places used in the old troublous times. William Wilkie D.D. a poet, and sometimes called the "Scottish Homer," and sometime professor of philosophy at St. Andrew's, was born here, or at Dalmeny, 5 Oct.1721. Robt. Liston F.R.S. an eminent surgeon, and Sir W. Fettes are also said to have been natives of this parish. There are vestiges of two Danish camps, one on Kaimes Hill, and the other on South Platt Hill. The Earl of Morton is the principal landowner. The area comprises 6,147 acres; rateable value, £15,935; the population in 1891 was 1,839, of which 821 were in the village.

ROSLIN is a small village and quoad sacra parish in the civil parish of Lasswade, and in Dalkeith small debt court district, 7 miles south from Edinburgh, 2½ south-west from Lasswade and 2 south-west from Loanhead, with a station on the Edinburgh to Glencorse branch of the North British railway, called Rosslyn Castle and Roslin Lee, on the Dolphinton and Peebles line of the same system, but on the other side of the valley. Rosebank House is the seat of Blanche, Countess of Rosslyn, and Woodhouselee of James William Fraser-Tytler esq. The inhabitants are chiefly occupied in agricultural pursuits, but there are also gunpowder mills and extensive carpet works. Rosslyn chapel, which stands on an eminence at the east end of the village, overlooking the remains of the castle and the romantic valley of the Esk, was founded in 1446, by William St. Clair, or Sinclair, 3rd Earl of Orkney of that family, as a Collegiate church, and dedicated to St. Matthew the Apostle. It was, however, left incomplete, and the existing structure represents only the eastern arm of the projected building, the nave and transepts of which, uncovered in 1881, were found to have been carried nearly to the floor level. At the period of the Revolution, the chapel was attacked, 11 Dec. 1688, by a fanatical mob, who destroyed much of the external ornament, including the numerous figures of apostles and martyrs, which adorned the canopied niches of the exterior: the fabric is, nevertheless, in a singularly perfect condition, and the judicious restorations and repairs carried out by the later Earls of Rosslyn have to a large extent removed the traces of its former maltreatment. It consists of a lofty choir with clerestory, a lady chapel beyond, and continuous aisles, supported by bold pinnacled buttresses; behind which are tall square pinnacles, rising from the aisle wall, and carrying the flying supports of the choir. Architecturally, this famous edifice is confessedly unique as an example of the Gothic style, for it combines the massive character of Norman work with even more than the elaborate and profuse ornamentation which distinguishes that of the Tudor period. The choir and aisles are divided by arcades having seven clustered piers on either side; two others standing in the centre at the east end; the clerestory has five large windows on either side, and the lofty roof is divided into as many compartments by ribs springing from the arcade below; the lady chapel, only 15 feet in height, opens by arches to the side aisles, and has a groined roof of florid design. One of the most interesting and striking features of the interior is the celebrated "Prentice's pillar," a clustered pier, wreathed round diagonally with bands of varied and finely sculptured foliage, and several of the arches bear inscriptions or symbolical figures. Beneath the east end is the lower chapel, erected by the Lady Elizabeth Douglas, wife of John (Stewart), Earl of Buchan; it is reached by a descent of 24 steps at the south-east angle; it is 36 feet long, 14 wide, and has a height of about 15 feet; the groined vaulting displays the arms of St. Clair—arg. a cross engrailed, sa.—and at the east wall is an altar. In the north aisle is a monument to George (Sinclair), 4th Earl of Caithness, and hereditary justiciar of Caithness, who died at Edinburgh 9 Sept. 1582; on the floor of the same aisle is a large flat stone, incised with the figure of a man in armour, his feet on a greyhound, and on each side of his head a small shield, charged with a rampant lion; this stone is supposed to indicate the burial place of Sir William St. Clair, of Rosslyn, an ancestor of the founder, who lived during the early part of the 14th century; there is also on the north side a large slab said to cover the entrance to the vault of the Sinclairs, lords of Rosslyn, ten of whom, previous to 1690, were here interred, and according to the ancient custom of the family, in complete armour and without any coffin, a traditional practice alluded to by Sir Walter Scott in his "Lay of the Last Minstrel." James, 3rd Earl of Rosslyn in 1861-2, effected a considerable restoration of the chapel, and Robert, 4th and late Earl, in 1879, erected a new baptistery with organ loft over, from designs by Mr. A. Kerr, architect, of Edinburgh, enclosing it with screen work and providing a font; he also renewed a number of the destroyed figures formerly adorning the interior, and filled many of the windows with stained glass, including the east window, a memorial to his sister, Harriet Elizabeth, wife of George Herbert, Count Munster of Dernburg, and German ambassador to England; she died at Dernburg, Hanover, 29 Nov. 1867. In the burial ground attached to the chapel is a memorial of various coloured stone, erected in 1893 by his countess, at a cost of £1,000, to Robert Francis, 4th and late Earl of Rosslyn, who died in 1890; the monument, 19 feet in height, includes six figures emblematical of certain Christian virtues, and is surmounted by a cross. Rosslyn Castle, now a ruin, stands on a lofty and almost isolated cliff overhanging the wooded and picturesque glen through which flows the river Esk. It is believed to have been originally erected by one of the Norman St. Clairs, an adherent of the Conqueror in the 12th century, but in 1447 was partly destroyed by fire, and afterwards rebuilt by William St. Clair, the founder of the intended collegiate church: in Sept. 1544, it was again burnt by an English force, under the command of Sir Edward (Seymour), 1st Earl of Hertford, but must have been subsequently repaired, for in 1650, when Cromwell crossed the Tweed (22 July) with an army of 11,000 men, it was held for the Royal cause by commission from Charles II. who had previously landed in Scotland, June 23rd. After the battle of Dunbar (3 Sept.), in which the Scots, under Gen. David Leslie, afterwards Baron Newark, were signally defeated, Gen. Monk invested Rosslyn Castle, which shortly surrendered and was plundered by the Roundheads, and in 1688 it was much injured by the same mob that attacked the chapel; the ruins, now inconsiderable, are reached by a bridge thrown across a deep ravine; some fragments of the north side of the fortress, with walls 9 feet thick, are standing, and to the south is a mansion of the Early 17th century, erected on the site of part of the ancient structure, which includes several vaulted chambers; the dining room of this has a panelled ceiling, with ornamental work in plaster, enclosing shields of arms of the St. Clair family and over the principal entrance are the initials S.W.S. 1622. Near the castle are the remains of the ancient chapel and cemetery of the village, close to which is a copious spring of excellent water called St. Matthew's well. Omnibuses ply during the summer from Edinburgh, and the walk by the valley of the Esk to Hawthornden is exceedingly picturesque. The population of the village in 1891 was 730 (and ecclesiastical parish 1,630) and in 1881, 611.

STOW is an extensive parish and village, in the southern extremity of the county, nearly 16 miles in length and 8 broad; it is partly in Selkirkshire, and in Dalkeith poor combination and small debt court district. The village is 24 miles south-east from Edinburgh and has a station on the North British railway. The village is well lighted with gas, supplied by a company. An augmented water supply has been provided from Sell Moor hill, at a cost of over £1,200, the villages of Stow and Killochyett having been constituted a special district alike for water supply and drainage. The Town Hall is in part devoted to a literary institute and library, and also includes a large room for lectures and public meetings. There are three woollen manufactories here. Hirings for servants are held on Friday before the last Monday in February and the second Tuesday in March. The fast days are Wednesday before the first Sunday of May and the second Sunday of November. Caitha is a small hamlet in this parish, 4 miles south-by-west from Stow village and near the Bowland station on the North British railway. Fountainhall is also a hamlet in this parish, about 4 miles north-north-west from Stow village, with a station on the North British railway. Bowland, the residence of William Ramsay esq.; Crookston, of John Borthwick esq. J.P. and Torsonce House, the residence of Miss Milroy; also Ashiestiel, the residence of the late Sir Walter Scott, previous to his removal to Abbotsford, and now of Miss Russell, and Laidlawstiel, the property of Lady Reay, and now the residence of Walter G. G. Pattison esq. The area comprises 36,843 acres, of which 9,969 are in Selkirkshire; rateable value, £13,377; the population in 1891 was 2,201, 442 being in Selkirk.

STRAITON, see LIBERTON.

TEMPLE is a parish and village, in Dalkeith poor combination and small debt court district; the parish is bounded on the east by Borthwick, on the south by Heriot, on the west by Edleston and Penicuick, and on the north by Carrington. The village, situated on rising ground on the banks of the Gladhouse water, which falls into the South Esk, is about 10 miles south from Edinburgh and 3 miles from Gorebridge (the nearest) station on the North British railway. The land is chiefly hilly, but contains a good deal of moor and pasture land. The old church, an edifice in the Gothic style and now in ruins, was founded by King David I. for the Knights Templars; the new church, also in the Gothic style, was built in 1830. Robert Dundas esq.D.L., J.P. of Arniston House, is the principal landowner. The area comprises 14,257 acres; rateable value, £18,042; the population in 1891 was 1,646, reduced by the transfer of 1,191 persons to Borthwick parish, to 455.

ELGINSHIRE,

So designated from the name of its capital, Elgin, and sometimes Morayshire, from being the central division of the "Province of Moray," is one of the northern counties of Scotland; bounded on the north-east by the North Sea, and on the north-west by the Moray Firth, on the east and south-east by Banffshire, on the south and south-west by Inverness-shire, and on the west by the county of Nairn. It has about 30 miles of coast line indented by several small harbours. The figure of Elginshire is very irregular, being intersected in several places by districts of the counties which form its boundaries; with Nairn it is so intimately connected that, in speaking of its shape, that small county is not unfrequently included in the description. Thus conjoined, the district is somewhat of a triangular figure—with the apex pointed inland—and in this quarter partaking of the wild, rocky and mountainous character of the Highlands. The county comprises 475 square miles, or 304,606 statute acres of land, and extends from north to south 30 miles, and from east to west 25 miles. In point of size Elgin ranks as the eighteenth and in population as the nineteenth amongst Scottish counties, having a population in 1891 of 20,381 males and 23,072 females, or a total of 43,453 against 43,788 in 1881. It had in 1891, 8,838 inhabited houses against 8,611 in 1881.

History.—In ancient times the limits of the county were much more extensive than at present, comprehending all that tract of country which lies between the river Spey on the east, the Beauly on the north-west, and in the northern confines of Argyleshire on the south-west. The remains of antiquity are numerous, of which the cathedral of Elgin, the Bishop's palace at Spynie, the priory of Pluscardine, the estates of Lochindorb and Dunphail, and the "dun" of Relugas, are the chief. Of the struggles of the natives with the Danes, who infested the district in former ages, there are various testimonials, such as "cairns," monumental pillars &c. &c. The "Province of Moray," anciently so important and extensive, in the present day is without any political distinction, and is divided into three several shires of Banff, Moray (or Elgin) and Nairn. On the east it is separated from Aberdeenshire by the Deveron; on the west it is bounded by Inverness-shire, and on the north it has the large arm of the sea, designated from it the Moray Firth. So late as the time of Charles I. the Highlanders considered Moray as a sort of neutral land, where every man was at liberty to take his prey. The province of Moray suffered more, perhaps, than any other district in Scotland by the civil wars. The people were then generally attached to the covenant, and, as Montrose made it one of his principal scenes of action, it is easy to conceive that its peaceable farmers were not permitted to have both their opinions and their goods undisturbed. Montrose, in his descent upon Moray, in 1645, after his victory of Innerlochy, destroyed all the houses of such as did not join his standard, and gave up the towns of Banff, Cullen and Elgin to indiscriminate pillage.

Soil, Surface, Climate, Produce &c.—The soil of this country, though less uniform than that of Banffshire, is for the most part a sandy loam—in some places a sandy gravel; considerable tracts are of very fertile clay, and of the most genial mould. The low country may be pictured as a large plain, extending from the Spey westward, between the shore and a range of mountains, for the whole length of the district, nearly 40 miles, but of unequal breadth, from about 5 to 12 miles or more, measured in a straight line from the hills to the shore; this plain, however, is diversified over its whole extent by ridges of lower hills in general nearly parallel to the shore; beyond this are valleys of great fertility and beauty, near the sources of the river Spey, Lossie and Findhorn, with the lesser vales along the banks of the tributary streams which pervade the intervening hills. Within the range of the mountain district the country may be described as chiefly pastoral; the arable land, in most instances, hanging upon the acclivities of the valleys, or stretching out in narrow plains upon the banks of the waters which wind among the hills—the wideness of the valley bearing a relative proportion to the size of the river. The upper part of the country is popularly termed "the Brae of Moray," and is mountainous and woody, and abounds in beautiful lakes. Agriculture is pursued in a spirited manner, and the land in general yields a higher rent than that of the neighbouring shires. For many years past agricultural improvements have been made with rapid strides, and the greater portion of the waste land is now either brought into cultivation or planted with forest trees. In the lower part of the county the Duke of Fife and other proprietors formed plantations to so great an extent that almost every part of the land inaccessible to the plough has been covered with different species of forest trees. Except sandstone, limestone and marl, no mineral substance of value has been discovered in this district. The south of this county produces principally oats, but in the north is unsurpassed for the quantity and quality of the crops of turnips, potatoes, barley and wheat. The chief crops are oats, 21,823 acres; turnips, 15,997; barley, 13,687; hay, 6,974; potatoes, 1,701; wheat, 960; and rye, 887. Total corn crop, 37,424 acres; total green crops, 18,144; land under grass, 38,957; permanent pasture, 7,794. Total area of land and water, 308,499 acres. To the breeding and rearing of cattle much attention is devoted, the polled Aberdeenshire and the pure shorthorned being the breeds most highly prized. The live stock comprise 5,151 horses, 22,440 cattle, 59,223 sheep and 2,428 pigs. Little can be said respecting manufactures; woollen stuffs are made to a small extent, which, together with grain, cattle, salmon, hewn freestone, wood and whiskey, comprehend the principal exports; the chief imports being coal, iron, timber and manures. There are also ship and boat building yards, breweries, tanneries &c. Herring fishing is prosecuted at several villages on the coast, and fine salmon fishing at the mouths of the Spey and Findhorn, and all along the sea coasts. The coast of this district, although within the fifty-eighth degree of north latitude, has ever been distinguished for the mildness of its climate; the hardier kinds of fruit, all the varieties of the apple, and almost all of the pear and of the plum, by a little attention may be abundantly produced on every farm; whilst flowers and fruit of the more rare species are brought to perfection in the gardens and orchards of this county. With respect to the winds, the most prevalent gales are from the north-west. This part of the country presents no object so elevated as to attract the clouds or impede their course; and from this cause, it is concluded, falls of snow are comparatively unfrequent and of small depth, as they are drifted over the subjacent levels insomuch that the operations of husbandry are but little interrupted by the inclemency of the weather. It is asserted that in the lower parts of the Moray the climate is as warm, and the atmosphere at least as dry, as in any district in Scotland; in the higher quarter the weather is more mild than in the adjoining county of Banff, at the same distance from the sea coast—a natural consequence of its local position, the progress of cultivation and the inherent warmth of the soil.

Rivers, Lakes and Railways.—The principal rivers are the Spey, the Findhorn and the Lossie, all flowing in a northerly direction and each teeming with the finest salmon; the Spey and Findhorn rise in Inverness-shire, and reach the sea at Garmouth, the end of an estuary on the east of the county and Findhorn Bay on the west near Forres, and the Lossie, which is smaller than the former rivers, rises in the hills near Dallas and Strathspey and debouches at Lossiemouth. There are many delightful lakes, of which Loch Spynie is most deserving of notice; it is three miles in length and one in breadth, and appears to have been formerly a firth of the sea, though it is now shut up at the east and west by a long extent of valuable ground. In accordance with this apparency, the land between the lake and the sea still retains the appellation of Ross Isle; and a corroborative proof of the accuracy of the popular designation is exhibited by the sea shells (particularly those of the oyster) that are found on the margin of the lake, several feet below the surface of the earth. Loch Spynie produces several kinds of fish, but none in such abundance as the perch and the pike. The railways in this county are the Great North of Scotland and the Highland lines, the former entering the county a little east of Garmouth from the coast branch viâ Banff, Cullen, Buckie &c. and runs to Elgin, where it is joined by a branch from Keith viâ Craigiellachie junction, and Rothes, the branch from Craigiellachie to Boat of Gartan, running through the south-east of the county from Elgin; there is also a branch to Lossiemouth. The Highland railway enters the county from Keith viâ Mulben and Orbliston, from which place there is a branch to Fochabers, runs to Elgin, thence to Alves, with a branch to Burghhead and Hopeman on the north coast, and turning west proceeds to Forres, and north-east to Nairn, and south to Grantown and Kingussie, Perthshire.

Divisions, Representation &c. — Elginshire comprises fifteen parishes and seven parts of parishes; it contains two royal burghs —Elgin and Forres; the former unites with Cullen, Banff, Inverurie, Kintore and Peterhead in returning one member to Parliament, and the county in conjunction with Nairnshire returns one member. The parliamentary constituency for 1894 and 5 was 4,866. The valuation of the county for 1894-5 was, exclusive of railways, £162,723, and of railways, £26,032; total, £188,755.

BURGHEAD,

DUFFUS PARISH, HOPEMAN, CUMMINGSTON, NEW DUFFUS AND ROSEISLE.

BURGHEAD is a fishing village, situated on a bold headland jutting out into the Moray Frith, in the parish of Duffus, 9 miles west from Elgin and about 10 north-east from Forres, in the Morayshire poor combination and Elgin small debt court district, and has a station on the Alves and Hopeman branch of the Highland railway. It possesses a pier and a safe and commodious harbour, well protected from the north and east winds; at high water steam or other vessels may enter with perfect safety. This was anciently a Roman as well as a Danish station; the remains of a fort of the latter nation are still visible, also a well dug out of the solid rock, which is known by the name of the Roman well. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in fishing, but a good many find employment in the chemical works. There is a coasting trade for the supply of the neighbourhood. In 1891 the population was 1,662, against 1,428 in 1881, and the inhabited houses numbered 312.

Duffus parish extends along the shore of the Moray Frith to the north of Elgin, from which the church is about 5 miles distant. Hopeman railway station is 2 miles from the village. The parish is about 6 miles in length by about 3 in breadth, and includes besides Burghead the villages of Cummingston, Hopeman, New Duffus and Roseisle. It is a flat district, chiefly agricultural. Duffus House is the seat of Sir Archibald Dunbar bart. D.L., J.P. and Gordonstown House the seat of Sir William G. Gordon-Cumming bart. Sir Archibald Dunbar bart. Sir William Gordon-Cumming bart. Robert Mackessack, of Ardgye, and Ed. Mortimer, of Inverugie, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 9,475 acres; rateable value, £14,880; population in 1891, 4,293, against 3,985 in 1881. In the parish, close to New Duffus, is an Established church, together with a chapel of ease at Burghead, where there are also a Free church, a United Presbyterian church and a public school.

Cummingston is a small village, situated on the road midway between Burghead and Hopeman, and almost without any trade. There is a station here on the Alves and Hopeman branch of the Highland railway. Population in 1891, 218.

Hopeman is a village, situated 2 miles east of Burghead, on the coast of the Moray Firth. It possesses a neat harbour, which in 1888 was greatly improved, but the shipping of the port is not extensive. It is a rising bathing place and the terminus of the branch line from Alves, on the Highland railway, being the centre of the parish of Duffus. School Board and Parish Council meetings are held here. There is a Free church here. Population in 1891, 1,464.

New Duffus is a small village near the parish church of Duffus, prettily situated, and entirely agricultural. Hopeman is the nearest railway station, 2 miles distant. Population in 1891, 121.

Roseisle is a hamlet near Burghead, 6½ miles north-west of Elgin. Coltfield is the nearest stopping station, about 1½ miles away. Population returned with the parish.

EDINKILLIE is a parish south of Forres and Rafford parishes, in the Nairn poor combination and Forres small debt court district. The Highland railway passes from south to north through the parish, with stations at Dava and Dunphail. There are several hills on the east side of the parish ranging about 1,500 feet. The church, which is near the centre of the parish, is about 9 miles south from Forres; it stands on the banks of the Divie, a stream that dashes along the bottom of deep narrow ravines and a little further down falls into the Findhorn. The woods of Darnaway on the west, and Altyre and Logie on the east, are very extensive. The viaduct, which carries the Inverness and Perth Junction railway over the Divie, near the church, is said to be the finest bridge in the north of Scotland; it has seven arches, and the height from the surface of the water to the rails is about 110 feet. Dunphail House, the residence of Lord Thurlow, stands a little north of the church, and near are the ruins of the old castle. The Dorboch, which unites with the Divie to form the Findhorn, rises in Loch an Dorn in the south of the parish. The ruins of a castle occupy an island in the loch. The Earl of Moray, Sir W. G. Gordon-Cumming bart. Mrs. Cumming, of Logie,the Scottish Equitable Life Assurance Co. (as proprietors of Dunphail) and Mrs. Smith, of Relugas, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 32,467 acres; rateable value, £8,221; population in 1891 was 983, against 1,175 in 1881.

ELGIN.

ELGIN is a royal burgh, in Morayshire poor combination, a parish and the seat of a small debt court, the capital of its shire and the seat of a presbytery in the synod of Moray; 189 miles north of Edinburgh by way of Aberdeen and Huntly and 153 by way of Perth and Forres, 33 north of Brechin, 64 west of Aberdeen, 39 north-east of Inverness, 12 east-by-north of Forres and 9 west of Fochabers; pleasantly situated on the right bank of the river Lossie, about 6 miles above its mouth, and surrounded by hills clad with pine, beech, oak and elm trees. Railways from five different points meet here, viz.:—from Rothes on the south, Keith and Banff on the east, Lossiemouth on the north and Forres on the west; the lines from Keith and Forres being part of the Highland railway, the others Great North of Scotland. It is the general supposition that the town was originally a settlement of Helgy, a general of the army of Sigurd, the Norwegian Earl of Orkney, who, about the year 927, conquered Caithness, Sutherland, Ross and Moray, and it is said that from this person the name of Elgin is derived; and as the word "Helgyn" is still used in the inscription upon the seal of the town, it is probable that this etymology is correct. So early as the reign of William the Lion a castle was built here, the ruins of which are still visible on an eminence called Lady hill, on the north-west side of the town. A monumental column, erected by public subscription, in memory of the last Duke of Gordon, now stands on this hill.

The cathedral of the Holy Trinity, Elgin, now a majestic and beautiful ruin, belonged to the see of Moray, founded by Malcolm III. surnamed "Canmore," and for many years seated at Spynie, but in 1224 transferred to Elgin, which by that time had become a place of importance; in the same year also the cathedral was dedicated, but about 1240 received some damage, and in 1270 was injured by fire, and the necessary repairs involved various additions; in 1390 the fabric again suffered by fire at the hands of Alexander Stewart, Earl of Buchan, known as "The Wolf of Badenoch," and in 1402 was plundered by another chieftain: portions of the building were subsequently restored or rebuilt, but in 1658 the work of spoliation began, and the lead was stripped from the roofs in order to provide ammunition for the Scottish soldiers then campaigning in the Low Countries; in 1594 it was only in partial use, but up to 1640 services continued to be held within the ruins. The church, when complete, consisted of a choir of seven bays, with aisles of five bays, an octagonal chapter-house, approached through a vestibule from the north choir aisle, transepts, nave of six bays, with double aisles, south porch and central and western towers; the total length is 300 feet; the width across the nave, 98 feet, and through the transept, 114 feet. The earliest existing portions are the ends of the transepts, now only fragmentary, but representing the Transitional church of the 12th and early 13th centuries; the choir and the earlier part of the chapter-house date from 1270; the former is an extremely elegant example of Early English, the dog-tooth ornament being very freely employed; the chapter-house was restored in 1462, and still retains its clustered central pier and vaulting and the flamboyant tracery of one window: the central tower was begun during the period 1397-1406, but in 1506 it fell, and its re-erection was not completed till 1538; in 1711, owing to the weakness of the later piers, it again fell, destroying or seriously injuring the north transept and the nave arcades adjoining: of the nave nothing is left but some of the bases of the piers, most of which have been restored: the western towers are now reduced to the belfry stage, and reach a height of 84 feet; between them is the western entrance, a fine and deeply recessed portal of eight orders, with much carved work, and enclosing a double doorway of later date with a vesica panel in the tympanum, the whole being highly enriched; over the entrance are three panelled gablets, and the great west window above is an insertion of the early 15th century: another striking doorway is that of the south transept: in the choir and transepts are remains of a number of tombs of bishops and others, some of which retain more or less mutilated effigies; the sedilia are almost entirely destroyed, but piscinæ exist in several parts of the fabric, and in the choir stands part of the shaft of a Celtic cross, discovered in the town in 1823. In the graveyard to the south are the steps and shaft-base of a cross, and to the north-west stands the episcopal palace, built c. 1535-73, and still almost intact. The remains of the cathedral are now in charge of the Commissioners of Woods and Forests and are well cared for.

Anderson's Institution, constituted under the bequest of Major-General Andrew Anderson H.E.I.C.S. who left between £70,000 and £80,000 to found and endow an institution in his native town, for the support of old age and the education of youth, a fine building of stone in the Grecian style was erected for £8,000, but the School board have taken over the school. Gray's Hospital, a fine building of stone with portico and dome, was founded under the will of Dr. Alexander Gray, of India, at a cost of £30,000, and lately presented with £1,000 by Mr. John Munro, of Clinton House. Another fine building is the Elgin Club House, in Commerce street: it is in the Italian style, and contains some good rooms. High street is about a mile in length; in the centre stands the Established Church, a building in the Grecian style, with a lofty tower at the east end: it will seat 2,000: west of this is a pavement used as a market for farm produce, and having a fountain in the centre marking the site of the old jail. To the east stands the "Muckle Cross," originally erected in 1650, destroyed in 1790, and rebuilt at the cost of William Macandrew esq. of Westwood, Essex, in 1888: it is sexagonal, with a centre shaft. In North street are several fine buildings, including the Trinity chapel (Episcopal), a neat Gothic structure, and the Trinity Lodge Rooms. The three leading hotels are the Gordon Arms, in High street; the Station Hotel, facing the Great North of Scotland railway station; and the Palace Hotel, in High street. Two newspapers are published here, the "Elgin Courant and Courier," and the "Moray and Nairn Express." On the south side of the town stands the County Hall, a building in the Jacobean style, with lofty tower, erected from plans prepared by Mr. A. Marshall Mackenzie, Aberdeen. The Academy, a building in the classical style, with Roman-Doric portico, from the plans of Messrs. A. and W. Reid, Elgin, was built in 1886, at a cost of £5,000. In High street are branches of the British Linen Company, Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, Bank of Scotland, North of Scotland Bank Limited, Caledonian Banking Co. Limited, Union Bank of Scotland Limited, Royal Bank of Scotland, Town and County Bank Limited, and a Savings Bank. The Victoria School of Science and Art, so called from having been built as a memorial of Her Majesty's jubilee, is a building in the later Romanesque style, from a design by Mr. George Sutherland, Elgin, and cost about £2,000. An arrangement has been made between the School Board and the local committee for it to form a scientific and technical department to the Academy.

The trade of Elgin has been greatly increased by the opening up of railway communication. There is a woollen manufactory, which employs many hands, and an iron foundry and saw mills. Of the other branches, a trade in corn, wool and timber is of some consequence, and there is a large tannery, while in the neighbourhood are the famous distilleries of Milton Duff, Glenlossie, Linkwood and Longmorn, also lime works and stone quarries. Alexander II., in 1224, granted to the burgesses of Elgin a guild of merchants, which still continues, though the funds of the corporation were, for a considerable period, merged in the common good; connected with the guildry there is a flourishing charity fund from which decayed members and their families derive substantial pensions. The municipal government is vested in a lord provost, four bailies and 12 councillors. The burgh joins with Banff, Cullen, Inverurie, Kintore and Peterhead in returning one member to Parliament, the present representative being Alexander Asher esq. There are several mineral springs in the vicinity of Elgin. The weekly corn markets are held on Friday; cattle auctions are also held every Friday. The feeing markets are 26th May, if Friday, if not, Friday before, the first Friday in July (harvest) and the Friday before the 28th November. The area of the parish comprises 19,166 acres; rateable value, £35,747; population in 1881, 8,741, and in 1891, 9,285, of which 6,458 were in the burgh; the total population of the burgh drawn from three parishes (Elgin, St. Andrew's Lhanbryde and New Spynie) was 7,646, and the number of inhabited houses, 1,846. the land in the city is chiefly freehold In the parish and about 6 miles south-west of the town are the ruins of Pluscarden Abbey, on the left bank of the Black river.

FINDHORN, a small village seaport, lying on the northern headland of Findhorn bay, in the parish of Kinloss, Morayshire poor combination and Forres small debt court district, is virtually the port of Forres, from which it is distant in a northerly direction about 5 miles; it is the centre of the fishery trade of this portion of the coast, and has also a small coasting trade, chiefly in pit props, which are shipped to Newcastle and Sunderland. The harbour is well sheltered. Kinloss station, on the Highland railway, is distant about 3 miles, and a line was constructed from that station to Findhorn and used for some time, but is now closed for traffic, which has a depressing effect on the trade of the place. There is a Free church in the village, also a school and Public library. The population in 1891 was 562, against 605 in 1881; number of inhabited houses, 171.

Kinloss is a parish on the Moray Firth, 3 miles from north to south, and the same in width, in Morayshire poor combination and Forres small debt court district, and has a village of same name, 2 miles north of Forres, containing an Established church (parish), a school and a railway station on the Highland line. Here, a short distance from the church, are the scanty remains of the Abbey of Kinloss, once one of the richest abbeys in Scotland, presided over by a mitred abbot with a seat in the parliament; it was founded in 1141 by King David I. and the monks obtained a papal bull of confirmation in 1174; it was a Cistercian abbey, and the original monks came from Melrose in 1303. King Edward I.stayed at the abbey for nearly a month. Sir George Macpherson-Grant bart. Mrs. Dunbar, of Seapark, R. C. Munro Ferguson esq. of Novar, John Mackessack esq. of Kinloss, Alexander Brodie esq. of Lethen, William Smith esq. of Fochabers, Alexander Matthieson esq. of Down Park, Wm. Mathieson esq. of Muirton House, Grant Peterkin esq. of Grange, and R. H. Mackessack esq. of Woodside, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 5,184 acres; rateable value, £7,646; population in 1891 was 958, against 1,072 in 1881.

FOCHABERS.

FOCHABERS is a small town and burgh of barony, in the parish of Bellie, Morayshire poor combination and Elgin small debt court district, 52 miles east of Inverness, 12 south-west of Cullen, 9 east of Elgin and 8 north-west-by-north of Keith; situated on the north road from Aberdeen to Inverness, and lying in a deep valley, through which the Spey runs at a little distance to the west of the town. The streets diverge from a square, in the centre of which stands the parish church. There are also Episcopalian, Free and Roman Catholic churches in the town. An elegant stone bridge crosses the Spey near the town. This is not an important town as respects trade; its situation on a main road contributes somewhat to its prosperity. At the west end of the town is a gate leading into the policies of Gordon Castle, the seat of the Duke of Richmond and Gordon K.G. which is a fine modern mansion, standing in an extensive deer park of over 1,200 acres; the present building is grafted on to the old tower of the Earls of Huntly, who held it from 1450 to 1684; it then stood in a gloomy morass (known as Bog of Gight), over which a stone causeway was the only means of access: this tower, which is 90 feet in height, now forms the most conspicuous feature in a large quadrangular building of four storeys, flanked by lower wings which are connected to the main building by long galleries; the interior contains many valuable pictures and some statuary. The baths, the gift of the late Duchess of Richmond and Gordon, are much appreciated by the inhabitants. The water supply to the burgh was laid at the sole expense of the Duke of Richmond and Gordon, and the inhabitants have erected a fountain in the square to commemorate the gift. The Free School, at the east end of the town, is an elegant building in the Elizabethan style of architecture, founded by Alexander Milne esq. a native of Fochabers; by his will, dated New Orleans, 17th October, 1836, he bequeathed to the parishes of Bellie and Ordifish the sum of 100,000 dollars for establishing a free school; the cost of the building amounted to £4,338, and the balance, about £17,000, was invested in heritable security, yielding an annual income of £740, by means of which 500 children are educated. Fochabers is a burgh, and is governed by a baron bailie appointed by the Duke of Richmond and Gordon. The population in 1891 was 1,101, and number of inhabited houses, 257. A branch of the Highland railway, from Orbliston junction to this town, has recently been opened, and the North of Scotland railway has a station (Fochabers Spey, in Banffshire), about 2 miles north-east of the burgh, on the line to Banff. Cattle markets are held on the third Thursday in every month, and a horse market on the third Thursday in March, June and September. A fountain in commemoration of Major Wilson, of the Matabele war (1893), was completed Oct. 1895.

The parish of Bellie, situated partly in this county and partly in that of Banff, is a flat agricultural district, and the portion in Elginshire is bounded on the west by the river Spey, and extends about 5 miles from north to south and 3 from east to west; it is in the Morayshire poor combination. The Duke of Richmond and Gordon K.G. and the Countess of Seafield are the principal landowners. The area of the entire parish comprises 12,928 acres, of which 4,875 are in Elginshire; total rateable value, £4,405; the population in 1891 was 2,210, of whom 1,223, including those in the burgh, were in Elginshire.

FORRES.

FORRES is a royal burgh, in Morayshire poor combination, the head of a small debt court district, capital of the parish of its name and the seat of a presbytery; 201 miles north-by-west from Edinburgh by way of Aberdeen, 165 by way of Brechin and Huntly, 75 north-west of Aberdeen, 27 north-east of Inverness, 21 west of Fochabers, 20 east of Fort George, 12 west of Elgin and 11 east of Nairn; it has a station on the Highland railway. It is a neatly-built clean town, and stands on rising ground; at a distance of about 5 miles is the village of Findhorn, which is its seaport. Forres is noted for one of the most remarkable stone obelisks of ancient date in Britain; this interesting object stands at the east end of the town, and is supposed to commemorate a pacification concluded here between Malcolm II. and Sweno, a Danish invader, about the beginning of the 11th century; it is an enormous slab of grey stone, upwards of 20 feet in height, supported by a socket which conceals at least three feet more, and the shape resembles that of a very long wedge, or, as some fancifully describe it, a highland broad-sword; the figures upon the obelisk, which are presumed to represent a battle and subsequent treaty, are wonderfully distinct, considering that they must have withstood the assaults of wind and weather during the last eight centuries. At the western extremity of the town, on an eminence, once stood a castle, wherein Duffus, one of the early Kings of Scotland, was perfidiously killed by Donald, governor of the fortress, which circumstance, it is said, Shakespeare has made use of in his dramatic version of the murder of King Duncan by Macbeth; and it was on the waste in the neighbourhood that that hero, along with Banquo (according to the old historians) met the "weird sisters," who gave him so many fatal promises. The exact spot on which that meeting is asserted by the country people to have taken place is marked by a small clump of trees, about 200 yards north from the post road between Forres and Nairn, near the toll bar, 5 miles from the former of these places, 1½ miles from Brodie station and nearly on the confines of the two counties of Moray and Nairn. The country has now been brought under cultivation and can no longer be described as a rugged heath. On the castle eminence is a granite obelisk to the memory of Dr. Thomson, who sacrificed his life by over exertion in his attention to the wounded Russians after the famous battle of Alma. Upon an eminence to the south-east of the town stands a tower, erected by the inhabitants of Forres in honour of Lord Nelson, the walk to which, as it winds round the hill, is extremely pleasant; from its elevated situation, a fine view is hence obtained, and the object is a conspicuous one for a considerable distance. Sloping to the north, where the river Findhorn sweeps round from the south-west through the Forest of Darnaway, is a modern mansion, the seat of the Earl of Moray; adjoining it is the old Castle of Darnaway, in which is a fine hall, built by Earl Randolph, regent of Scotland during the minority of David Bruce, capable of containing 1,000 men under arms. Here Mary Queen of Scots held her court in 1566. Altyre is the residence of Sir William G. Gordon-Cumming bart.; Brodie Castle, of Lieut. Ian. A. M. Brodie; Dalvey House, of Major Norman MacLeod J.P. and Grange Hall, of James Grant-Peterkin esq. D.L., J.P. About 2 miles below the castle, the river, which debouches into Findhorn bay, is crossed by an elegant suspension bridge, which was erected by a joint stock company, in shares of £10 each. The trade of Forres is not of an extensive character. Dye works, manufactories for woollens, artificial manures, boots and shoes and bobbins, chemical works and flour mills being the principal branches. Three-quarters of a mile from the centre of the town is situated the Leanchoil Hospital, erected in 1891, at a cost of between £6,000 and £7,000, accommodation being provided for the burgh of Forres and the six adjoining parishes. The British Linen Co. the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Caledonian Banking Co. Limited and the National Bank of Scotland Limited have branches here. A newspaper, the "Forres, Elgin and Nairn Gazette," is published every Wednesday. Owing to the configuration of the country round about Forres, the burgh enjoys a remarkable immunity from rain, the rainfall for the past few years having been ascertained from accurate observations to be about the lowest in Scotland, and this circumstance, and the soil being porous, mark out Forres as an excellent health resort. Cluny Hill House, on one of the eminences in the vicinity of the town, was built for a hydropathic establishment. There are two masonic lodges in the town. Forres, as before stated, is a royal burgh, and governed by a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, treasurer and 11 councillors, and unites with Nairn, Fortrose and Inverness in returning a member to Parliament, the present representative of the Inverness burghs being Sir Robert B. Finlay. A sheriff small debt court sits once in every two months for the recovery of debts not exceeding £12. In the centre of the High street stands the Town House, a substantial structure, with a tower in the Scottish Baronial style surmounted by a spire; the building comprises the goal, a court house, a council room &c.; and near to this stands a handsome Gothic market cross of four storeys, the lower one having eight pointed arches with angle buttresses surmounted by finials. The Mechanics' Institute, also in High street, a fine building, the property of the burgh, possesses a library, a reading room and two public halls; the large hall is of recent erection, and is capable of seating 1,000 persons. At the south-east end is a good stone edifice, erected in 1824, called Anderson's Institution, founded by Jonathan Anderson esq. a native of Forres, for educating children of the humble class from the parishes of Forres, Rafford and Kinloss; this school is now placed under the Forres School Board. The Forres Public school stands opposite. There is an Established church, a Free church, a Roman Catholic church, and others for congregations of Episcopalians, United Presbyterians, Evangelical Union and Baptists. A corn market is held every Tuesday, and a cattle market every alternate Tuesday; cattle sales are also held in the auction mart every Tuesday. Feeing markets for hiring servants are held on the Saturday before the 28th of May (called Whitsunday market) and the Saturday before the 28th of November (called Martinmas market). The area of the parish comprises 5,440 acres; rateable value, £14,990; the population in 1891 was 4,801, against 4,752 in 1881; these include the population of the burgh, 3,971 in 1891, and 3,691 in 1881; the number of inhabited houses being 827. The Earl of Moray, Sir William G. Gordon-Cumming bart. James Grant Peterkin esq. of Grange, George Grant esq. of Invererne, Mrs. Roney Druyatt, of Ratho, and the representatives of Mrs. Fraser Tytler, of Sanquhar, of C. Macpherson Grant esq. of Donneduan, and of R. D. Grant esq. of Thornhill, are the principal landowners of the parish.

GRANTOWN.

GRANTOWN is a neat modern village in the parish of Cromdale, the latter lying formerly in this county and that of Inverness, but by a recent Act of Parliament the whole of the parish is incorporated with this county. Grantown is the head of a small debt court district, and is situated in that district of the parish called Inverallan, on the north bank of the Spey, rather more than a mile south of Castle Grant and at the distance of 35 miles south-east from Inverness, 22 south from Forres, 8 north-east from Duthil and 6 north from Abernethy. Grantown was begun about the year 1774, under the patronage of the Grant family, who have been its continued benefactors; and a large number of the inhabitants retain the name of Grant to the present day. It is a great attraction for visitors from Edinburgh and Glasgow during the summer months, and during the last few years several handsome villas have been built for their accommodation. In 1887 the Highland railway erected a commodious station, which is situated about a mile from the centre of the village. There is also a station on the Great North of Scotland line, a mile and a half distant. The trade of the place is of a retail and domestic character, there being a fair proportion of first-class shops and businesses which are usually found in a small country town. There is a distillery in its vicinity and an extensive wholesale grocery and drapery business. Branches of the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland and the Caledonian Banking Co. Limited are established in the town; also a branch of the National Security Savings Bank. There are also three excellent and commodious hotels—the Grant Arms, Palace and Strathspey. There is in the town an Established church (for the quoad sacra parish of Inverallan), a handsome stone edifice, built in 1884 by Caroline Stuart, Dowager Countess of Seafield, also a Free church, an Episcopalian church and a Baptist chapel. A sheriff small debt circuit court is held on the first Wednesday after the 16th of January and the first Wednesday in May and September. There are several schools and also an orphan institution. A neat Cottage Hospital was built in 1884 by the Dowager Countess of Seafield, in memory of Ian Charles, late Earl of Seafield. Grant Castle, a modern mansion, with which is incorporated an old tower called "Comyns Tower," is a seat of Caroline, Countess of Seafield.

Fairs are held on the Tuesday after the 12th and Monday before third Wednesday in January, Monday before third Wednesday in February, Monday before third Wednesday in March (cattle, horses, sheep and hiring), Thursday before third Wednesday in April (sheep), Monday after third Wednesday in April (horses, cattle and sheep), Monday after second Wednesday in May (horses, cattle and sheep), Monday after Beauly (for horses, cattle and sheep) and first Friday (Figget Fair) in June, Monday after third Thursday in July (horses, cattle and sheep), first Wednesday (shearers') and Monday after third Tuesday (horses, cattle and sheep) in August, Monday after third Tuesday in September (horses, cattle and sheep), Monday after third Tuesday in October (cattle and sheep), Monday after second Wednesday (horses &c.), and Wednesday preceding term week (hiring). Caroline, Countess of Seafield, is the principal landowner. The population in 1891 was 1,423, against 1,374 in 1881; number of inhabited houses, 270. A halfpenny newspaper, "The Grantown Supplement," is published every Saturday.

Inverallan (and Dulnain Bridge) is a quoad sacra parish formed from that of Cromdale, and a hamlet about 3 miles from Grantown, the church being, however, in the latter village.

See ST. ANDREW'S LHANBRYD.

LOSSIEMOUTH, which is composed of the districts of Branderburgh, Lossiemouth, Seatown and Stotfield, and was created a burgh in 1890 under the Lindsay Act, is in the parish of Drainie, 5 miles north from Elgin, situated on the banks of the Lossie, at its influx into the Moray Firth, in the Morayshire poor combination and the small debt court district of Elgin; it has a station on the Great North of Scotland railway (Elgin and Lossiemouth branch), is the seaport of Elgin, and is fast advancing into importance. Most of the town is regularly laid out, and is a resort for sea bathers. Several gentlemen residents in Elgin have erected villas which they occupy during the summer months. The harbour was opened in 1839, and has since been improved, so as to render it a safe and commodious haven for shipping; the cost of this erection amounted to £20,000. In 1891 a grant of £20,000 was obtained from the Government for deepening the harbour to admit vessels of larger tonnage. The improvement of the harbour, and the facilities of railway communication which this place has now enjoyed for several years, have given a stimulus to trade which has rendered it one of the most important seaports north of Aberdeen. There is a chapel of ease to the Drainie Established church, and a Free church, built on an imposing site commanding an extensive view of the Moray Firth, replacing one destroyed by fire; it is in the Early English Gothic style, and its handsome octagon tower and spire serves as a notable landmark to mariners; it cost £2,400. A Town Hall was opened on February 2nd, 1885, by Sir George Macpherson Grant, of Ballindalloch, and Mrs. Dunbar-Brander, Pitgaveny; the cost of the building was about £1,100.

Drainie is a parish on the shore of the North Sea, bounded east by Urquhart parish, west by Duffus and south by New Spynie; it is 5 miles from east to west, by 3½ from north to south, and is nearly devoid of hills. The parish church is 2 miles south-west of Lossiemouth.

Sir William G. Gordon Cumming bart. and Capt. G. B. Dunbar-Brander are the principal landowners. The area of the parish of Drainie comprises 6,948 acres; rateable value, £12,054; the population in 1891 was 3,922, against 3,991 in 1881. The population of Lossiemouth in 1891 was 3,486; inhabited houses, 680. There is a fine golf link, near which a new hotel is now (1895) in course of erection.

ST. ANDREW'S LHANBRYD parish, which is in Morayshire poor combination and small debt court district of Elgin, comprehends what were originally two (St. Andrew's and Lhanbryd), the former including Linkwood and Barmuckity; the latter lay to the east of St. Andrew's and comprehended the lands of Coxton, Pittenseir &c. Parish church is about 2 miles south-east of Elgin. About 3 miles east of Elgin, and in the above-named parish, is the neat village of Lhanbryd, having a good inn, saw mill, a few well-stored shops, schools &c. Population, 316 in 1891, and inhabited houses, 74. There is a station here on the Keith and Elgin section of the Highland railway. The country is flat and well cultivated, and is noted for geological specimens. The Duke of Fife K.T. the Dowager Countess of Seafield and Capt. G. B. Dunbar-Brander are the principal landowners. SPEYMOUTH is a quoad sacra parish in the civil parishes of Urquhart and Speymouth, poor combination of Morayshire and small debt court district of Elgin; it lies along the left bank of the river Spey, and contains in its Urquhart portion the small fishing villages of Garmouth and Kingston, which are near the mouth of the Spey, about 4 miles north-west of Fochabers and 7 east-by-north from Elgin. The Established church is in the Speymouth portion of the parish. The principal trade was ship building, now declining, and the exportation of corn, timber and salmon; of the latter, considerable quantities are sent to London and other southern markets. The imports are guano, bone manure, timber and coal. There was formerly a good harbour, formed by the mouth of the Spey, and here a number of vessels have been built entirely of native wood. A fair is held on June 30th. There is a railway station, on the Elgin and Portsoy branch of the Great North of Scotland line, at Garmouth. The Duke of Richmond and Gordon K.G. and the Duke of Fife K.T. are the principal landowners. The civil parish of Speymouth contains 6,025 acres, and had a population in 1891 of 616; the other portion of the quoad sacra parish being in Urquhart civil parish, no separate acreage can be given for it, but it had a population in 1891 of 768. The population of Garmouth in 1891 was 535; inhabited houses, 135, and the total population of the entire parish was 1,384.

FIFESHIRE.

FIFESHIRE is an extensive and populous maritime county in the east of Scotland; it is a peninsula, having the Firth of Forth on the south, the German Ocean on the east, and the Firth of Tay on the north, which river separates it from Forfarshire and Perthshire. Its western border is very irregular; commencing at Newburgh, on the Tay, it follows that of Perthshire south to near Auchtermuchty, turning west as far as Damhead, whence it extends with Kinross south to the Leven and west nearly as far as Rumbling Brig, when the Perthshire border again crops up and is continued southwards to the Firth of Forth at Torry. The coast line is about 80 miles in extent; the breadth from its eastern apex to its western point, where it intersects Kinross and Perth, is about 35 miles, and a line direct south from Newport on the Tay to Earlsferry is about 17 miles, or one from Newburgh to Kinghorn 20 miles; towards the west, however (from Burntisland to the verge of Kinross-shire), it is not more than 10 miles across; the extreme length, from north-east to south- west, in a curved line, is fully 40 miles. The regularity of its figure is much interrupted by the intrusion of Kinross-shire, which creates a considerable indentation, not far from its centre, on the west. The area comprises 492 square miles, or 314,952 statute acres. In regard to size, this county is sixteenth, and in population the seventh. In 1891 the population was 89,135 males, 98,211 females, total, 187,346, against 171,931 in 1881; the inhabited houses being 40,696 in 1891 and 36,854 in 1881.

Early History.—At an early period the district of Fyfe included Kinross-shire, Clackmannanshire, and part of the counties of Perth and Stirling; it was then designated Ross, a term signifying a peninsula, and seems to have been under one general jurisdiction. This large territory has long since been dismembered—Clackmannan was first taken from it, and next Kinross was erected into a distinct shire. The origin of the name "Fife" has much troubled etymologists, nor has a satisfactory conclusion ever been arrived at upon the subject. The monkish chroniclers assume its derivation from one Fyfus Duffus, a hero of whom nothing more appears to be known than that he was a chieftain who performed some great exploits, and did the country essential service in war. The ancient history of Fife is enveloped in nearly similar obscurity. Its original possessors were the Celts, and their invaders the Romans; and towards the close of the 9th century the King of the Scots obtained paramount sway over the district. Between this period and the 11th century the country was in a great measure either the property or under the jurisdiction of a succession of "thanes" of the title of Macduff; one of these, Duncan Macduff, was created Earl of Fife by Malcolm III., about 1057; and from this time till the family honours were merged by the marriage of female heirs or extinction in other families, and finally lost by forfeiture in 1424, the Earls of Fife were amongst the most influential of the Scottish peerage. After a lapse of more than three centuries, the ancient title of Earl of Fife was revived as an Irish peerage, in 1759, in the person of William Duff, Lord Braco of Kilbryde, who, according to his genealogists, derived his descent from the original earls. The Duke of Fife, who was raised to a dukedom in 1889, is the lineal descendant of this person, and now inherits the title and privileges—the estates of the family being situated principally in Aberdeenshire and Banffshire.

Soil, Surface and Climate.—The peninsula of Fife was originally almost an entire forest, full of swamps, and while in this condition was the haunt of wild beasts, especially swine of a monstrous size; it is understood that such animals were not extirpated in the reign of James V., who, like his forefathers, often made Fife the scene of his hunting expeditions. In this county are found four kinds of soil, differing considerably in quality, and generally occupying distinct tracts of the country. Along the braes facing the Firth of Forth the composition of the land is for the most part excellent, being deep, rich loam, good clay, and gravel mixed with loamy earth, based chiefly on whin rock, and produces good crops of wheat, barley, oats, beans, turnips and potatoes; north from the waving line which bounds this territory to the base of the hills on the south side of the vale of Fife, and from St. Andrews on the east to the western parts of the county, the soil is in general vastly inferior—a great proportion being cold, poor and very wet clay; the tract of the "Howe of Fife," which comprises both sides of the river Eden as far as Cupar, is very productive; it consists of loam, partly deep and moist, and partly light and dry, with also a considerable proportion of moor and moss; in the hilly district, from the vale to the river Tay, the land is uniformly of the best description, having much rich loam, clay and gravel. The peninsula of Fife exhibits on its surface a series of vales, stretching from west to east parallel with the sea on each side, and of greater or less dimensions; these vales, which from the undulating character of the country are in some places not so distinct as in others, are the basins of different small streams, which merge either in the Firth of Forth or St. Andrew's Bay. Extending in a north-easterly direction to the Tay, the Ochil Hills penetrate the county, forming a ridge of moderate elevation, upon which many cattle and sheep are pastured. The other eminences of greatest altitude in Fifeshire are Kellie Law, 800 feet; Norman's Law, 850; Largo Law, 965; East Lomond Hill, 1,470; and West Lomond Hill, 1,713 feet above the level of the sea. The climate is, perhaps, as genial and salubrious as that of other districts more to the south; the fogs, which formerly were continually exhaling from the lochs and marshes, have been effectually dissipated by the drainage of the damp lands, and the general spread of cultivation. Altogether Fife is a most important district; its agricultural prosperity and capabilities, its manufactures, its fisheries, and its mineral treasures, its burghs, seaports, and fine harbours, and its domestic and foreign commerce, form a combination of advantages that most favourably distinguish this shire. In 1894 the chief crops were: oats, 42,024 acres; barley, 23,152; wheat, 9,152; turnips, 26,179; potatoes, 14,527; hay, 32,355; rye, 1,237; vetches &c. 1,302; beans, 1,279; the total corn crop being 76,854 and total green crops 42,080; land under grass, 104,493; permanent pasture, 73,711; and total area of land and water 323,802 acres. The live stock in the same year were: horses, 10,423; cattle, 50,236; sheep, 97,826; pigs, 6,309.

Produce and Manufactures.—The shire is fortunate in possessing inexhaustible mines of coal, with whinstone, sandstone, limestone and some ironstone. Coal and lime are wrought only in the southern division of the county, between the two extremities, and some miles inland; within this district there are as extensive lime and coal works as can be seen in Scotland. In 1893, 2,619,530 tons of coal were produced, valued at £1,176,347; besides 47,924 tons of fire-clay, value £7,788; 9,383 tons of iron ore, value £3,753; 5,014 of oil shale and 56,102 tons of limestone. The sandstone found in this part is of the very best quality; from its beauty it is exported to Edinburgh, where some of the finest edifices have been built with it. Marl is abundant in some places, so likewise is fine clay, for the composition of bricks, tiles and pottery. From the possession of the above, and the exuberant produce of corn and cattle, it is a common saying among the people of Fife that their county could support itself better, without the aid of imported articles, than any other district in Scotland. Besides supplying home consumption, it has a very large export trade in corn, potatoes, pigs, black cattle, lime, coal and sandstone—not to mention that of its manufactured goods. Lead has been discovered in the western Lomond, and mines of this ore have been profitably worked in the parish of Kemback; pebbles, much admired for the high polish of which they are susceptible, have been found in different places, with agates and rubies of fine water. The staple manufacture of Fife is linen goods, in the weaving of which many towns, villages, and hamlets are busily employed without intermission; fine diapers and shirtings and the most elegant table linen are produced from the looms of this county; of this trade Dunfermline and Kirkcaldy are the principal seats; while the yarns, composed of foreign flax, are mostly spun and bleached on the Leven and in the adjacent places. Iron founding and machine making are prosecuted with success at several places, and the manufacture of fishing nets, floor cloth, fire clay and terra cotta goods and linoleums and floor cloths are likewise branches of importance. The fisheries are also a source of wealth to this county, shoals of herrings during the spawning season visiting its coast, in the capturing and curing of which many of the population are employed. Turbot, soles, plaice, cod, haddock and ling are also found in abundance, the three first-named being taken in the shallow waters on the east coast. The number of boats registered at Kirkcaldy under the "Sea Fisheries Act, 1868," was, in 1894, 595; aggregate tonnage, 7,776 tons, employing 1,664 men and boys (besides 1,037 extra hands); in addition to which there were 8 steamers and 1 sailing vessel, in all 176 tons.

Rivers and Railways.—Exclusive of the Forth and the Tay, the county is watered by several streams—none of which, however, are entitled to the denomination of river, except the Eden and the Leven, which both abound with excellent salmon; the first rises in the Lomonds and flows through the town of Cupar, and debouches at Guardbridge in St. Andrew's Bay; the Leven rises from a loch of the same name in Kinross-shire, passes eastward through the centre part of the county and reaches the Firth of Forth at the town of Leven. Fife cannot boast of many lakes, and those that it does possess are but of small extent, the principal being Lindores, Kilconquhar, Lochgelly, Camilla and Fitty lochs. The North British railway, branching at Alloa to the east and north-east, enters the county with the former branch at Oakley and proceeds to Dunfermline, whence there are branches north to Saline, Cowdenbeath and Kelty, and thence into Kinross, and south to Inverkeithing and North Queensferry; the main line continues through Lochgelly to Thornton, where a branch leaves it north to Markinch (with a branch to Leslie), Ladybank and Newburgh, where it turns westward to Moncrieff and Perth; from Thornton there are two branches southward, one turning to the west runs through Dysart and Kirkcaldy to Burntisland, and the other sweeping eastward passes through Wemyss and Buckhaven to Methil, opposite to Leven. The main line continues by Cameron Bridge, through the coast towns of Leven, Largo, Pittenweem and Crail, to St. Andrews; from this latter city the line passes through Leuchars Junction to the Tay Bridge, for Dundee, with a loop line to Leuchars, Tayport, Newport and the Bridge; the north-eastern branch after leaving Alloa passes through Kinross-shire and Auchtermuchty, and, crossing the Newburgh branch at Ladybank, continues through Cupar to Leuchars Junction, where it joins the Tay Bridge line.

Divisions, Representations &c.—This county forms a sheriffdom, under one sheriff depute; but being divided into an eastern and a western district, each is placed under the jurisdiction of a sheriff substitute; in these two districts are comprehended the four sub-divisions of St. Andrews, Cupar, Dunfermline and Kirkcaldy. It has politically and ecclesiastically attached to it the islands of Inchcolm, Inchkeith and May, in the Firth of Forth. Fifeshire comprises sixty-two parishes and parts of two others; it contains seventeen Royal burghs (out of the 70 contained in all Scotland), and of these thirteen are burghs with parliamentary representation; these; conjointly with Queensferry in Linlithgowshire and Stirling in Stirlingshire, return three members. The shire formerly returned but one representative, but is now separated into the Eastern and Western divisions, each of which sends a member. The parliamentary constituency for 1894-5 was: Eastern Division, 9,432; Western Division, 10,637. The population of the entire shire in 1881 was 171,931, and in 1891, 187,320, exhibiting an increase of 15,389. The valuation of the county for 1894-5 was £680,538, of railways and waterworks, £118,692.

ABERDOUR.

ABERDOUR is a parish and a village seaport and burgh of barony, on the north shore of the Firth of Forth, extending 3½ miles from north to south by the same in breadth, 10 miles north-west from Edinburgh (across the Firth of Forth), 9 south-west from Kirkcaldy, 8 south-east from Dunfermline and 3 west from Burntisland. There is a station here on the North British line of railway, opened 1890, connecting Inverkeithing and Burntisland. Burntisland parish bounds it on the east, Auchentool and Beuth on the north and Dalgetty on the west. The small island of Inch-Colm belongs to the parish. There is a small ridge of hills which runs from east to west. It is a place of considerable antiquity, and belonged in the 12th century to the family of the Euponts, from whom it passed to the Mortimers by marriage, afterwards to the Douglasses, one of whom, in 1457, was created Lord Aberdour and Earl of Morton, whose castle, which stood close to the village, was burnt down by accident while occupied by a detachment of troops in 1745. The village gives a second title to the Earl of Morton. The Mortimers appear to have bestowed Wester Aberdour upon the Abbey of Inch-Colm, and it was made a burgh of barony under the abbot in 1500; Easter Aberdour, which was retained by the family, being made a burgh of barony in 1643. Aberdour is the place of summer resort of the citizens of Edinburgh and their families, there being good bathing grounds here, and the exposure being sunny and warm. One of the chief causes of its popularity as a bathing place is the ready access which is obtained by steam vessels and other means of conveyance from the opposite shore, there being frequent communication in the summer season. The ruins of the church, dating back before 1178, lie to the south-east of the castle. In the village are Established, Free and Episcopal churches; there are also two board schools in the parish. The island of Inch-Colm lies in the mid-channel of the Firth of Forth, about 2 miles south of Aberdour, and contains the extensive remains of the Augustinian Abbey, founded about 1123, by Alexander I.; the buildings, of grey stone, consist of the ruins of the octagonal Chapter House, with groined roof and a muniment room above it, the half of the Lady Chapel, a short massive square tower, and some remains of domestic buildings and of a small square chapel supposed to be the original cell first founded in the island. The hamlet of Donibristle Colliery and the fine policies of Donibristle Park, a seat of the Earl of Moray, lie to the west (the house being in the adjoining parish of Dalgetty); part of Fordel village is also in the parish. The Earl of Moray, the Earl of Morton, Charles Grey Wotherspoon esq. and Patrick Hill Normand esq. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 5,974¼ acres; rateable value, £18,490; the population in 1891 was 1,977, and in 1881, 1,736; these figures included 748 persons in the village of Aberdour in 1891, and 610 in 1881, and 618 persons in the hamlet of Donibristle Colliery in 1891, and 502 in 1881.

ANSTRUTHER,

WITH THE PARISHES OF ANSTRUTHER EASTER AND ANSTRUTHER WESTER.

ANSTRUTHER is a seaport on the north shore of the Firth of Forth, about 20 miles north-east of Kirkcaldy, 10 by road and 15 by rail from St. Andrews, and is composed of the royal and parliamentary burghs of Anstruther Wester and Anstruther Easter, together with the seaward portion of the royal and parliamentary burgh of Kilrenny; this portion, which constitutes a full half of the port and contains the harbour, is principally composed of the fishing village of Cellardyke or Nether Kilrenny, which, though really a suburb of Anstruther Easter, is itself in Kilrenny parish and burgh. The two Anstruthers are separate royal burghs and civil parishes, the dividing line being the small Dreel Burn. The port is the market town for the surrounding district, and there is a station here on the Thornton Junction, Leven and St. Andrews section of the North British railway. This place was of great importance before the union with England, carrying on an extensive trade with Holland and France; and it is still one of the first fishing stations in Scotland, fish curing being the staple trade. In 1825, there were only 58 boats, from 18 to 20 feet long; now the number is about 180, from 50 feet long, as well as 7 steam line fishing vessels, 88 feet keel, built at a cost of £2,600 each. The harbour was found too small for the increasing trade of the district, and the three burghs united to obtain, with Government assistance, a union harbour, which has cost about £80,000; the present harbours (inner and outer) give a space of 13½ acres, and will hold 500 fishing boats, and admit vessels from 200 to 500 tons burthen at half flood; there is about 4 feet of water at the East Quay at the lowest spring tide. In addition to fish curing, there is a considerable amount of business done in the export of grain, potatoes &c. the refining of cod liver oil, manufacturing of fishing gear and tanning. There are branches of the National Bank of Scotland Limited, Commercial Bank of Scotland Lim. and the Clydesdale Bank Limited in the town.

ANSTRUTHER EASTER is a royal burgh and parish (included in the Port of Anstruther), bounded on the south by the Firth of Forth, west by Wester Anstruther and north and east by Kilrenny; the burgh is governed by a provost, two bailies, a treasurer and six other councillors, elected under the Scotch Burgh Reform Act. A sheriff's small debt court is held here quarterly, for the parishes of Anstruther Easter and Wester, Elie, Kilconquhar, Kilrenny, Newburn, Pittenweem, St. Monance and Crail. A weekly corn market is held on Friday. This burgh unites with St. Andrews, Cupar, Crail, Kilrenny, Anstruther Wester and Pittenweem in returning one member to Parliament. Dr. Chalmers, the celebrated orator and divine, and Professor Tennant, author of "Anster Fair," were natives of this town, and also Professor Goodsir, of the Edinburgh University. In addition to the Established church, there are a Free church, called Chalmers' Memorial Church, erected at a cost of nearly £10,000, a United Presbyterian church, and Evangelical Union and Baptist chapels. The Established Manse dates from 1590. The chief educational establishment here is the Waid Academy, opened Sept. 6th, 1886, and endowed mainly from funds mortified by Andrew Waid, lieut. R.N. a native of Anstruther Easter, who died in 1803. By his will, dated 1800, he founded the building for an academy for orphan boys and seamen's boys in indigent circumstances, and for their maintenance, clothing and such education as would instruct them in the great principle of the Christian religion, and fit them for serving in the British Navy with reputation: the amount of the Trust estate at his death was about £5,000, but at the time of the transfer to the governors of the academy, it was of the value of about £15,000; accordingly a scheme promoted by the Trustees and by the School Board of Anstruther Easter and others was laid before the commissioners under the Education Endowments (Scotland) Act, 1882, and approved by Order in Council, August 11th, 1884: Lieutenant Waid in his will expressed a hope that his intentions might be greatly aided and extended by other charitable contributions, and Stephen Williamson esq. M.P. contributed £1,000 towards the funds: the school, which is built of stone, with a tower in the centre, has a fine commanding appearance.

ANSTRUTHER WESTER, included in the Port of Anstruther, which adjoins Anstruther Easter, is also a parish and royal burgh, and holds its charter of incorporation from James IV. in 1587. A bridge connects the two burghs. It is bounded on the north and west by Carnbee, on the south by the Firth of Forth, and on the east by Anstruther Easter and Pittenweem; in the small debt court district of Anstruther. This burgh was disfranchised in 1853, when three managers were appointed by the court of session. In 1869 it again recovered its municipal status, and is now governed by a chief magistrate, two bailies, a treasurer and six other councillors. The inhabitants are principally employed in agricultural pursuits. Great improvements have been effected in this town within the last 40 years; among these must be noticed the widening of the main street from 13 to 30 feet, its being macadamised, and the formation of a footway, at an expense of £450, contributed equally by the burgh and the county; the place supplied with water, the streets lighted, common sewers constructed, and a parish church manse and a parochial school and dwelling house for the schoolmaster erected.

William Baird esq. of Elie, is the principal landowner for Anstruther Easter, the area of which is 25 acres; rateable value, £3,428; the population in 1891 was 1,033, and in 1881, 1,248.

Walter D. Irvine esq. of Grangemuir, and Sir Ralph W. Anstruther bart. of Balcaskie, are the principal landowners of Anstruther Wester, the area of which comprises 911 acres; rateable value, £3,838; the population in 1891 was 593, and in 1881, 673.

The population of the entire seaport of Anstruther in 1891 was 4,268, and in 1881, 4,702.

The populations of the royal burghs in 1891 were—Anstruther Easter, 1,025; Anstruther Wester, 516.

ARNCROACH, see CARNBEE.

AUCHTERDERRAN is a parish in the western part of the county, bounded by Beath and Ballingry on the west, Abbotshall and Auchtertool on the south and southeast, Dysart on the east and Kinglassie and Portmoak (Kinross-shire) on the north. It has an irregular outline, and is about 4 miles long from north to south, and about 3 miles broad. The water of Orr flows eastward through the parish, and in the southern part there is a sheet of water called Lochgelly, which discharges itself by a small rivulet into that stream. The inhabitants are employed in agriculture and coal mining. Most of the parish is under tillage, and the rest in pasture. A considerable bed of coal and ironstone traverses this part of the county; the former has long been celebrated for its excellent quality; the latter is of the black band variety, but is not now worked. The parish contains part of the town of Lochgelly, at which place and at Cardenden there are stations on the Thornton and Dunfermline section of the North British railway. The area comprises 7,818 acres; rateable value, £22,394; the population in 1891 was 6,185, of whom 3,958 were in the town of Lochgelly, and in 1881, 4,332, of whom 2,484 were in Lochgelly.

AUCHTERMUCHTY,

WITH THE VILLAGE OF DUNSHALT.

AUCHTERMUCHTY is a parish and a royal burgh, the latter, 19 miles west-south-west from St. Andrews, 14 south-south-east from Perth, 5 south from Newburgh, 17 north from Kirkcaldy and 28 nearly due north from Edinburgh. A station on the Mawcarse and Ladybank section of the North British railway is adjacent to the town. The land in the vicinity of the town is remarkably rich and fertile, and the climate is considered very salubrious; the parish is bounded north by Perthshire, west by Strathmiglo, south by Falkland and east by Collessie; the town is situated on the road from Kinross to Cupar Fife, 9 miles from the latter town. It is irregularly built; many of the houses are thatched and low, but the greater portion are of a superior appearance. There is a good substantial mansion in the town, once the residence the Thane of Fife. A stream of water called Lover's pool runs through the town, dividing it into nearly two equal parts; it was constituted a royal burgh by James IV. which charter was confirmed by James VI. and it still enjoys all the privileges arising therefrom, and is governed by a provost, two bailies, twelve councillors, a treasurer and town clerk, and has a sheriff's small debt court, which is held quarterly. A considerable trade is carried on here in manufacturing linen. Malting and distilling are likewise engaged in, and the making of scales, beams and weighing machines has been established here for upwards of a century. There are branches of the Bank of Scotland and Union Bank of Scotland Limited, and a Savings bank. The Victoria Hall, erected in 1865, is a fine building. The parish church, near the centre of the town, is an old structure enlarged. There are two board schools, and a large school conducted on the Madras principle. The People's Institute comprises reading, recreation and temperance refreshment rooms. There is also another reading room in the town, and a well stocked library. Fairs are held on the last Monday in April, and July 2nd. The Marquis of Bute, Thomas Blyth esq. of Leckiebank, and Mrs. Speedie, of Brombrae, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 3,530 acres: rateable value of parish, £7,905; of burgh, £2,401; the population of the parish in 1891 was 2,002, of whom 665 were in the burgh; the figures in 1881 were 2,322 and 824.

Dunshalt is a small village situated about 1 mile south from and in the parish of Auchtermuchty, where there is a linen factory and a board school. Auchtermuchty railway station is about half a mile distant.

To the west, and on the banks of the Tay, stands the ancient village of Balmerino, adjacent to which are the ruins of the once famed abbey, a beautiful structure, begun by Alexander II. and his mother, Emergarde, daughter of the Earl of Beaumont, in 1229. BUCKHAVEN, METHIL and INNER LEVEN, which now form a united police burgh, and a small town, village and hamlet, in the parish of Wemyss, and they form a good shipping station for coal export and a shelter for fishing, Buckhaven having a harbour and Methil a new dock with appliances for loading colliers; they are situated on the north shore of the Firth of Forth, 2 miles south of Leven and 7 north-east of Kirkcaldy; the burgh is governed by a senior and two junior bailies and six commissioners. Methil is a quoad-sacra parish. The dock at Methil, opened 5th May, 1887, built by Randolph Gordon Erskine Wemyss esq. of Wemyss Castle, now the property of the North British Railway Co. has greatly added to the prosperity of the district, large quantities of coal from the neighbouring collieries being shipped here. The dock has an area of 4¾ acres, with width at entrance of 50 feet, and a depth of water at ordinary spring tides of 23 feet, and at neaps of 19 feet; it is fitted with three of Sir William Armstrong & Co.'s hydraulic hoists, each capable of loading a vessel with 2,500 tons of coal in 24 hours; there are also hydraulic cranes for working other import and export goods. The dock is connected with the main railway system of Fifeshire, and is in direct communication with all the Fife collieries, and is lighted by electricity. A new dock is in course of construction, at an estimated cost of £200,000, the area of which will be 7 acres; similar hoists will be erected as in the old dock; Sir John Jackson is the contractor. The manufacture of fishing nets is carried on at Buckhaven. There are stations at Methil and Buckhaven, on the branch line of the North British railway from Thornton Junction. Inner Leven forms part of the town of Leven. The populations in 1891 were—Buckhaven, 4,006; Methil, 1,662 and Inner Leven, 579, and in 1881, 2,952, 754 and 501 respectively.

BURNTISLAND.

Is a royal and parliamentary burgh, seaport and parish, with a station on the North British railway, situated on the north shore of the Firth of Forth: the burgh is distant 9½ miles north-by-west from Edinburgh, 16 south-east from Kinross, 6 south-west from Kirkcaldy and 3 east from Aberdour. The parish, originally a portion of Kinghorn, is 3 miles square and consists of the Bin and Dunearn ranges of hills, with the High Bents on the east side of the town, extending into Kinghorn parish: some portions of the hills contain fine specimens of basaltic columns; they are irruptive through limestone and sandstone strata. It is in the poor combination and small debt court district of Kirkcaldy, and is bounded east and north by Kinghorn and west by Aberdour. Burntisland was originally a burgh of reality under the Abbot of Dunfermline; in the year 1541 it was purchased from him by James V. and erected into a burgh royal, confirmed by James VI. in 1587 and renewed by Charles I. in 1632. It is governed by a provost, two bailies and nine councillors; the town council are also the police commissioners and the local authority, and four members of the town council with four representatives from the N. B. Railway Co. constitute the harbour commissioners; there is also a parish council: the municipal, police and parliamentary boundaries have been made identical by an Act obtained in 1876, and the burgh forms part of the Kirkcaldy parliamentary district; the same powers have been granted to the magistrates as are at present possessed by the sheriff and justices of peace under the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854; this admits of the administration of justice in nautical cases being conducted in the town instead of in Kirkcaldy as previously. There are police and bailie courts, the sheriff and small debt courts for the burgh being held weekly at Kirkcaldy. The present gasworks were founded by the late Sir John Gladstone, who sold them to the Fife Railway Company, by whom they were transferred to the North British, but they are now the property of the burgh, and managed by the members of the town council as a gas commission. There is a railway institute and reading room. Weekly markets are not held here, the nearest being Thornton on Mondays and Dunfermline on Tuesdays, but there is an annual fair on the third Friday in July. Burntisland is now the head quarters of the custom house business for the district, which embraces the line of coast from Aberdour to Anstruther.

Previous to the union, Burntisland was a place of great trade, particularly with Holland; since 1603 its trade declined till 1848, when the opening of the Fife railway imparted an impetus to the export trade in coal and pig iron; since the opening of the new dock the harbour revenue, then £2,200 annually, has since increased till in 1883 it amounted to £27,055; in 1894 it decreased to £19,000, owing to the great coal strike. The fine dock, built by Mr. Walter Scott, of Newcastle-on-Tyne, from plans by Messrs. T. Meik and Sons C.E. comprises an area of 5½ acres, and cost about £100,000, including railway connections and hydraulic loading machinery by Sir William Armstrong and Co. of Newcastle-on-Tyne; the depth of water in the dock is 22ft. 9in. at high water of spring tides and 19ft. 9in. at neap tides; the width of entrance is 50ft.; dock extensions involving expenditure of £250,000 are (1895) proposed. Consequent upon the completion of the Forth bridge, the ferry traffic in goods and passengers greatly decreased, but being still a metropolitan ferry the North British Railway Co. are obliged to keep a steamer plying at stated intervals between Burntisland and Granton: the number of vessels, steamers &c. outwards was in 1894, 712. The railway from Burntisland westward to the Forth bridge has opened up a picturesque district some 8 miles in extent; the cost of this line was over £140,000, being opened for traffic in March, 1890: the line enters Burntisland by a long viaduct, which passes at the bottom of High street and crosses Harbour place, reaching the main line east of the present terminus. A direct line to the coalfields by Auchtertool is now completed. The herring curing trade, which used to be very flourishing, is extinct, although Burntisland is still a fishing station for the Firth fishery, a number of boats being annually engaged in the winter herring fishing.

The railway locomotive works, situated between the Lammerlaws and the old town, employ 300 men. The sandstone quarries at Grange and Newbiggin give out extensive supplies of stone for buildings in the neighbourhood, and quantities are shipped at Starleyburn for other places. The limestone mine belonging to the Carron Co. at Starleyburn, which was closed for some years, has again been opened up, and additional facilities given for the transit of the material by a connection with the railway, which is in close proximity. There is a distillery at Grange, about a mile from the town, belonging to Messrs. Young and Co. Limited. A local merchant has commenced the making of home-made jams, jellies &c. from fruit grown in the neighbourhood. There are branches of the National and Commercial Banks of Scotland Limited, and a savings bank. The Forth hotel at the railway station was formerly the parish manse. The music hall, built by the late Joseph Young, of Dunearn, and presented to the town by his trustees, accommodates 400, and is frequently used for lectures, concerts and public meetings. There are three tennis courts and a bowling green and belonging to a limited company some fine links and a private golf course. The only object of antiquity connected with Burntisland is Rossend Castle, built in 1119, by the abbots of Dunfermline; it occupies a very picturesque situation, and has a fine square keep: it was the residence of Cromwell during the occupation of Burntisland by his troops, and was a favourite resting place of Queen Mary; Rossend is now the property of James Shepherd esq. who takes a great interest in antiquarian researches.

The Established church, bearing the date 1592 over its entrance, is probably the oldest building in the town; in style after the model of the North Church, Amsterdam, the Dutch having a great deal of intercourse with Burntisland at that date. The galleries, which show very antique carving, were erected in 1613, and were occupied by the seats of the Guilds, and on the fronts of some the ensigns of the companies remain; the magistrate's state seat stands against one of the four piers and the pulpit against the opposite one, and it was within these walls that James VI. met the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, and pressed his pet proposal for a new translation of the Scriptures, a proposal which took practical shape after that monarch's accession to the throne of England, and resulted in an authorised version. In connection with the Established church a fine new hall was opened in 1894 with accommodation for 600 persons. An Episcopal school, founded by the late Rev. G. H. Forbes, continues to be conducted by his trustees: the Episcopal congregation have an iron church of a Gothic design, at Ferguson place. The old kirk of the parish was at "Litel Kingorne," or Kirkton, and when the present church was built in 1592-4 there was some litigation with the heritors before the services could be moved, which was not terminated until 1632; the "auld kirk" is now a ruin. The cemetery at Bentfield was established by the Town Council at the cost of about £4,000. The only mortification belonging to Burntisland is Watson's, consisting of the annual rent of the East Binnlands, amounting to an average of £60, which is divided between three widows and the Board schoolmaster for the education of poor children; there is also the revenue derived from the minerals recently worked. New Board schools erected here in 1876, at a cost of £6,000, in the Elizabethan style, are situated in front of a hill rising more than 100 feet above the level of the sea. Two wings have been added to the original buildings, and another addition has since been made. The playgrounds are ample, and the terrace in front is tastefully laid out. Roger Sinclair Aytoun, of Inchdairnie, the Trustees of R. Kirke, of Greenmount, James Shepherd, of Rossend Castle, Rev. J. Haxton, of Pathhead, and Middleton Rettie, of Dunsarn, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 2,565 acres; gross rateable value of the parish in 1894-5, £34,042, nett value £25,254; rateable value of the burgh, gross, £25,022; nett, £19,663. The population of the parish in 1891 was 6,174, including 4,692 in the burgh, and in 1881 4,821, including 4,099 in the burgh.

CRAIGROTHIE, see CERES.

CRAIL is a seaboard parish, occupying the extreme north-easterly shore of the Firth of Forth, the Fife Ness promontory marking the mouth of the Firth; the seaport of same name as the parish lies a few miles south-west of the Ness, is a royal and parliamentary burgh; it was known formerly as "Carlyle" or "Cair-raile," and has a stn on the Thornton, Anstruther and St. Andrews section of the North British railway. The parish, which is in the small debt court district of Anstruther, extends 3 miles along the shore of the Firth of Forth, and its breadth of 2 miles lies along the North sea, besides which a part almost as large lies inland north of Kilrenny and Carnbee parishes, and on the north-west and north the boundaries are the parishes of Denino, St. Leonard and Kingsbarns. The burgh, which consists of two main streets, one containing some massive old houses, is mentioned by old historians as a town of considerable note so early as the middle of the 9th century. Its importance in latter days has, however, greatly declined, notwithstanding it possesses great capabilities as a port, and with the exception of crab fishing, for which it is famous, it enjoys but very little trade. This in some measure may be ascribed to the inconvenience of its harbour, for it is otherwise eligibly situated. Its principal exports consist of grain and potatoes; the imports are chiefly coal. Crail was erected into a royal burgh by David I. and confirmed by Robert Bruce, and it is governed by a provost, two bailies, a treasurer, and six councillors. In conjunction with St. Andrews, Cupar Fife, the Anstruthers, Kilrenny, and Pittenweem, it returns one member to parliament. It is now a place of summer resort, and has two golfing courses, public bowling greens and tennis courts, and a public library of 2,000 volumes. A little to the east of the harbour are the fragments of a castle, or palace, once the residence of David I., the remains of which consist chiefly of a wall, now partly enclosed in a garden. The parish church was anciently a collegiate church, and is the one that John Knox preached in, when he roused the people to go with him to Anstruther, and then to St. Andrews. The celebrated James Sharp, Archbishop of St. Andrews, was minister of the church for 12 years, and his handwriting is still to be seen in the session records. Wormiston House is the seat of the Earl of Lindsay. The Earl of Lindsay, Sir Thomas Erskine, Cambo, Charleton J. B. Monypenny esq. Pitmilly, Philip G. Anstruther esq. Robert Duncan esq. Kirkmay, Mrs. Mary J. A. Horsly, Rev. Henry A. G. Sheppard, of Sanchop, Colonel George Hannay, Kingsmuir, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 6,383 acres; rateable value, £13,608; the population in 1891 was 1,704, of which the burgh contained 1,119, and in 1881, 1,740, including 1,148 in the burgh.

CREICH is a parish in the north of the county, with its kirktown 5 miles north-west of Cupar, which is the nearest railway station; it is in the small debt court district of Cupar and extends 3 miles from north to south by 2 wide; it is bounded on the north by Flisk, on the south by Moonzie and Monimail, on the east by Balmerino and Kilmany, and on the west by Dunbog. On a little eminence near the ruins of the old church are the vestiges of a Roman camp.and at a short distance therefrom are the remains of a castle, which formerly belonged to Cardinal Beaton. The parish was the birthplace of the Rev. Alexander Henderson, who represented the Scottish Church at the Westminster Assembly in 1643; and also of the Rev. John Sage, the first of the post-revolution bishops in the Scottish Episcopal communion, and the author of that remarkable production, the "Fundamental Charter of Presbytery." The surface is undulating, and the soil sandy and thin. David Cook esq. of Luthrie House, is the principal landowner. The area comprises 2,341 acres; rateable value, £2,376; the population in 1891 was 325, and in 1881, 386.

CROSSFORD, see DUNFERMLINE.

CROSSGATES, see DUNFERMLINE.

CULROSS is a parish on the Firth of Forth, originally included in the county of Perth, though surrounded by Fifeshire, to which county it was transferred by a Local Government Order dated 23 February, 1891. The parish contains the town of Culross, a royal and parliamentary burgh within the poor combination and small debt court district of Dunfermline, 4 miles south-east from Kincardine, opposite to Boness. The nearest railway station is at East Grange, on the North British railway, about 2 miles north. Culross is situated partly on the acclivity of a hill rising from the Forth, the principal street running north from the shore. An extensive traffic in salt and coal was at one time carried on here, and 170 foreign vessels have been at one time in the roads. The Earl of Dundonald erected some very extensive works for extracting tar, naphtha and volatile salt from coal, but the speculation proving unproductive it was abandoned. Culross was erected into a royal burgh by James VI. in 1588, and is governed by a provost, two bailies, a treasurer and councillors. It unites with Stirling, Queensferry, Inverkeithing and Dunfermline, under the style of the Stirling burghs, in returning one member to Parliament. The town and its vicinity possess many objects of antiquity. In 1217 a monastery was founded on the rising ground behind the town by Malcolm, Thane of Fife; considerable portions of this structure are yet extant. On the north side was the abbey church, which had a Decorated tower in the centre; the latter is still entire, as is also the Early English chancel, which is now used for divine service. In a chapel, erected in 1642 in honour of Sir George Bruce, are recumbent figures of Sir George and his lady, in beautiful white marble, and along a low settle are arranged their eight children in a kneeling posture. To the west of the town, on the bank of the Forth, are the ruins of Dunimarle (the castle near the sea), an ancient stronghold of the Macduffs, and according to tradition the scene of the murder of Lady Macduff and her children. The present house of Dunimarle is a modern castellated edifice, built by the late Mrs. Sharp Erskine, who also erected in the grounds a beautiful mortuary chapel, within which she is interred. Within the house is a museum,wherein are some beautiful paintings, rare old china and other articles of virtu, to which, and the extensive grounds, the public are admitted on certain days of the week. Culross Abbey House is a seat of the Earl of Elgin. Near the abbey church is a school, endowed by the late Patrick Geddes esq. at which 20 children receive free education; the building having become too small, the late Miss Davidson, of The Park, erected another school, at a cost of £1,500, and presented it to the trustees

There is also a public school within the burgh. The population of the royal burgh in 1891 was 380. Lord Balfour of Burleigh; Robert Hoyer Millar esq. of Blair Castle; trustees of late Mrs. Magdalene Sharp Erskine, of Dunimarle; trustees of A. V. Smith Sligo, of Comrie Castle; Lawrence Johnston esq. of Sands; Lady William Godolphin Osborne Elphinstone, of Tullialan; Robert W. P. Clarke C. Preston esq. Valleyfield, and John James Dalgleish, of West Grange, are the principal landowners of the parish. The area comprises 7,584 acres; rateable value, £14,950. The population in 1891 was 1,096, and in 1881, 1,130.

CULTS is a parish, having its kirktown 2½ miles east of Ladybank, which is the nearest railway station, and is a junction on the North British line; the parish extends 5 miles from north to south by 2 wide, and is bounded north by Cupar and Monimail, east by Ceres, south by Kettle and Leven, and west by Kettle and Collessie; it is in the small debt court district of Cupar, and contains the village of Pitlessie. It abounds in coal, lime and freestone, and is generally well cultivated and enclosed. The ancient name of the parish was Guilkes, which signifies a nook, or corner, it being disjointed from the large strath which runs from east to west along the banks of the Eden. The area comprises 2,924 acres; rateable value, £5,800. The population in 1891 was 700, and in 1881, 704.

Pitlessie is a small village in this parish, 2 miles north-east from Kettle, on the road between Kirkcaldy and Cupar, 4 south-south-west from the latter town, and about 2 east from Ladybank station. There is a public school here which serves for the whole of the parish.

CUPAR-FIFE,

WITH THE VILLAGE AND HAMLET OF BRIGHTON.

CUPAR is a royal and parliamentary burgh and parish, designated Cupar-Fife, to distinguish it from Cupar-Angus, on the borders of Perthshire, the capital of the county of Fife, and seat of the county council, 32 miles north (by rail via Forth Bridge) from Edinburgh, 12½ south from Dundee, 9 west from St. Andrews, and 9 north-east from Falkland, situated on the left bank of the Eden, and with a station on the Edinburgh, Thornton and Dundee branch of the North British railway. As a royal burgh Cupar is governed by a provost, three bailies, and a dean of guild, with a treasurer and 12 councillors. Being the county town and head burgh of the shire, the public business relating to both is transacted at Cupar; and here, consequently, reside a considerable number of practitioners before the courts of the shire. The ordinary sheriff court and the sheriff small debts courts are held every Thursday during session. It is a place of considerable antiquity, but in the present day its aspect is that of a modern town, nor are there any ancient remains to be discerned in or about Cupar. Of its castle, so frequently alluded to in Scottish history, not a vestige is now visible; the Castle hill, where that fortress once stood (in which the plays of Sir David Lindsay and the "Satire of the Three Estates" were acted in 1555, is now the site of a public school. The principal streets of the town are the Crossgate, the Bonnygate and St. Catherine street, which last is built on the plan of the houses in Edinburgh. The burgh is lighted with gas, supplied by a company established in 1830. Here are the county buildings and two hotels. Opposite the county buildings is an Episcopal church in the Grecian style, its site being that of a convent of Dominican or Black Friars, in old records described as being situated to the east end of the town. On the south side of the river is the old prison, now used as a private warehouse; a more commodious edifice, which was erected for a gaol on rising ground a little to the north of the Dundee road, is now closed as a prison, and used as stores and depot for the Fife Militia Artillery. The principal trade of Cupar arises from the linen manufacture, but there are also others, as those of brewing, tanning and coach building, and of all the various necessary and domestic avocations a due proportion. There are five branch banks, one of the British Linen Company, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland and the National Bank of Scotland Limited, together with a bank for savings. Three newspapers are published in Cupar, the "Fife Herald and Journal," the "Fife News" and the "St. Andrew's Citizen." The Duncan Institute, in Crossgate, was founded by the late Miss Duncan, of Edengrove, for the benefit chiefly of the working classes; it consists of two reading rooms, library, well stocked with books, recreation and billiard room and lecture hall, and is managed by trustees. Near the station stands a stone statue erected to the memory of David Maitland McGill Crichton, a prominent county gentleman, who took a leading part in the disruption of the Free Church in 1843. The places of worship are the parish church and a chapel in connection therewith, and others for the Free Church, United Presbyterian, Episcopalian, Baptist and Roman Catholic congregations. The Cupar Bell-Baxter school is an endowed secondary school (with a primary department), was endowed in the year 1832 by the famous educationalist, Dr. Bell, and a second endowment dating from 1873 from Sir David Baxter bart. of Kilmaron. It is governed by a managing body of eleven persons. Kilmaron Castle is the residence of Capt. John A. Middleton J.P.; Birkhill, of Henry Scrymgeour Wedderburn esq. J.P.; Edenwood, of Alex. Macdonald esq. J.P. and Greigston, of Major Henry J. Cowan-Graham-Bonar. David Wemyss esq. of Wemyss Hall and James Horne Rigg esq. of Tarvit are the principal landowners. The weekly market for corn is held on Tuesday, and a cattle market on Tuesday once a month. The area comprises 5,736 acres; rateable value, £29,895. The population in 1891 was 6,990, including 4,765 in the burgh, and in 1881 7,404, including 5,058 in the burgh. The villages of Springfield and Brighton are in this parish.

The church was erected at the commencement of the 17th century. Dairsie Castle, now a ruin, is noted as the place where a parliament was convened in the year 1335. James Cheape esq. of Fingask, is the principal landowner. The area comprises 2,555 acres; rateable value, £4,700; the population in 1891 was 606, and in 1881, 6[illegible]3.

DALGETTY is a parish in the poor combination and small debt court district of Dunfermline, about 1½ miles from Inverkeithing station on the Edinburgh, Thornton and Ladybank section of the North British railway; it extends 5 miles from north to south, by from 1 to 3 broad, and is bounded on the north by Beath, north-west by Dunfermline, west by Inverkeithing, south by the Forth and east by Aberdour. The Park of Donibristle, which includes the site of Dalgetty House and the fine gardens formerly attached to it, stands partly in this parish and partly in Aberdour; the house, the seat of the Earl of Moray, is in this parish, as are also the ruins of Couston Castle on an island in Otterston Loch, and Fordel Castle and Mansion House, the seat of the Henderson family: the castle was restored about 40 years ago, but is only occasionally used: it possesses a fine banqueting hall; the date of its erection is 1111. Dalgetty old church is roofless, but the walls are standing, and there are many monuments in the church and yard; a vault at the west end of the church, containing the coffin of Chancellor Seton, is surmounted by a fine stone-panelled room, open on the east side to the church, and serving as a pew for the Earls of Dunfermline; the new church is about a quarter of a mile further north, and was built about 1830.

Fordell is a village chiefly inhabited by miners in this parish, about a mile south-east of Crossgates; railway station on the property of the late George William Mercer Henderson esq. It has a fine reading room, which has been provided for the use of the workmen. Population in 1891, 480.

Saint David's is a small port in this parish, about a mile and a half to the east of Inverkeithing. The rise of this place can be mainly ascribed to the advantages it affords for the shipment of coal, brought from the extensive collieries at Fordell by means of a private railway five miles in length. At the pier here, which has been extended at a cost of from £4,000 to £5,000, upwards of 500 tons of coal can be shipped daily; and there is an average depth of 18 feet at high water, being greater than that of any other port on this part of the coast, admitting vessels of upwards of 600 tons to receive their cargoes at the pier. The nearest railway station is Inverkeithing, a mile and a half distant. The surrounding district is rich in coal, of which great quantities are exported from St. David's. Fordell House is the seat of the Hon. Hew Haldane-Duncan-Mercer-Henderson. The Earl of Moray, Captain W. Mowbray and the trustees of the late George W. Mercer Henderson esq. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 3,340 acres; rateable value, £7,253; the population in 1891 was 1,341, and in 1881, 1,321.

DUNFERMLINE.

DUNFERMLINE is a city and a royal burgh, and the seat of a presbytery, the chief town in the western part of Fife, and one of the most important in the scale of manufactures in the county, also a parish and head of a poor combination and small debt court district. Its ancient title of city is now revived. It is 16 miles north-west from Edinburgh, 47 north-east from Glasgow, 31 south-south-west from Cupar, 14 east from Alloa, 21 south-by-east from Stirling, 15 south-west from Kirkcaldy, and 6 north from North Queensferry; situate on rising ground, 3 miles north from the Firth of Forth and 300 feet above the level at Limekilns, the nearest part of the coast. Thus elevated, it commands a prospect remarkably various and beautiful, extending over fourteen different counties, and comprises a fine marine view on the south; and its salubrious situation renders it one of the healthiest cities in Scotland. There is a station here on the Dunfermline branch of the North British railway, whilst another line, about 4 miles in length, hence to Charlestown, is used principally in the conveyance of coal for shipment at that port, but a passenger service of trains has recently been established. The West of Fife mineral railway runs from the town north into the rich mineral district, which contains immense quantities of coal, ironstone and limestone. A line has been constructed between Dunfermline and Edinburgh by North Queensferry across the Forth by means of the Forth Bridge, which was finished in 1890, and opened by the Prince of Wales on March 4th of that year. Dunfermline Lower is on the main line from Inverness and Perth to Edinburgh, and passengers from Dunfermline can now reach Edinburgh in less than half an hour. In 1057 Malcolm Canmore ascended the Scottish throne. Besides founding the monastery of Dunfermline, he built a strong tower on a height in the adjacent glen, and from this tower the town derives its name and dates its existence. Dun, in Gaelic, signifies a hill or fort; fiar means crooked or winding; and lyn a pool and running water, which is exactly descriptive of the tower and locality. The arms of the town are a tower, supported by two lions, with the motto, "Esto Rupes, inaccesso"—"Be thou an invincible rock." The burgh of Dunfermline, it appears, was held of the monastery, which formerly possessed paramount jurisdiction and exclusive privileges here for nearly two centuries, and became royal by a charter from James VI. dated 24th May, 1588. In this document the monarch ratifies sundry charters, donations, and indentures, by John and Robert, abbots of Dunfermline, particularly one dated the 10th of October, 1395, by which the abbot and convent renounce in favour of the aldermen and community the whole income of the burgh belonging to their revenue, with the small customs, profits of courts &c., "reserving, however, the power of punishment, should any of the magistrates be guilty of injustice in the exercise of their office." In 1724 the burgh was placed on the footing it still maintains as respects its government, which is vested in a provost, four bailies, and a dean of guild, together with a treasurer, a chamberlain, a town clerk, and 15 councillors, elected pursuant to the terms of the Municipal Reform Act. The burgh joins with Stirling, Inverkeithing, Culross, and Queensferry (called the Stirling burghs), in sending one member to Parliament. Dunfermline is constituted the seat of the sheriff substitute for the western district of Fife, who holds a regular court on the first and third Tuesday of every month during session, when there is always a considerable amount of business to be done in the way of civil actions. Burgh courts are held daily in the Corporation buildings. James VI. subscribed the first covenant, and Charles I. was born in the palace which had been added to the old Royal Tower of Malcolm Canmore, the south-west wall of which still remains, and here Charles II. signed the Dunfermline declaration. For a long period a case was pending in the law courts between the Crown and the proprietor of the Pittencrieff lands as to the grounds occupied by the palace ruins. In 1873 the dispute terminated in a decision of the House of Lords, by which the ruins, and a portion of the grounds adjoining, were apportioned to the Crown. The ground has been duly boarded off, and the right of admission to it by the public is granted, while the Government for the time being allowed a sum to be inserted in the estimates for the repair of these interesting and historical ruins.

The city consists of streets stretching from east to west, with a number of smaller streets crossing down hill at right angles, or proceeding in a northerly direction. The houses along the leading thoroughfares are nearly all well built; of late years its size has been greatly increased, not only by the extension of the cross streets but by the addition of a large suburb to the west and east, and during the last thirty years the improvements effected have been considerable. It is well supplied with water, the Corporation having obtained an Act of Parliament in 1876 to ensure a plentiful supply from Glensherrup, the works costing about £70,000. The streets are lighted with gas. There is a strong fire brigade in the city, who have quarters in Campbell street, and fire plugs on the gravitation principle are placed in numerous places throughout the streets and lanes. The sewage of the city is conveyed by means of pipes to the sea at Charlestown, a distance of three miles. The plans were prepared by Mr. J. L. Stewart C.E. Edinburgh, and the cost of the undertaking was about £7,000.

The constantly increasing population and prosperity of Dunfermline may be entirely ascribed to its manufacture of table linens and damask goods. This branch of industry was started about the commencement of last century, and is carried on here to a greater extent than in any other town in Great Britain, many firms being engaged in this business. There are several large factories where power-loom weaving is carried on. It is said that the chest of the Incorporation of Weavers contains two curious specimens of their art—a man's shirt wrought in the loom by a weaver of the name of Inglis, and a woman's shift by another named Meldrum, both of which are without seam, and effected without the assistance of the needle; the only part which Inglis could not accomplish was a button for the neck. Exclusive of the linen trade, there are other branches of magnitude and importance, among which may be mentioned the large fire-clay works of Messrs. J. and M. Craig, at Lilliehill; Messrs. Street Brothers, at Townhill; Loch-Head Fire Clay Co. Loch-Head, and the Fife Coal Co. Limited, at Crossgates. There are also iron and brass foundries, engineering works, dye works and tobacco manufactories. The coal trade in the neighbourhood is also very extensive, and large quantities of this article are annually exported. About 4,000 men are employed in connection with the collieries. Five branch banks are established here, in addition to a Savings Bank, for which a fine building has been erected in East Port street, at a cost of £3,000. The board of directors include the provost, bailies and clergymen of the town. There are three newspapers, namely, the "Dunfermline Press" and the "Dunfermline Journal," published on Saturday, and the "Dunfermline Citizen," published on Wednesday. There is a spacious public park at the east end of the town, extending to between 30 and 40 acres, which is finely laid out with trees, and has a polished granite water fountain, given by the late Provost Donald. There is also a band stand with gilt dome, the gift of Mrs. Carnegie. It commands a fine view of Edinburgh on a clear day, as well as of the Firth of Forth for a great distance.

The Town House, at the bottom of High street, was begun in 1875 and finished in 1879 at a cost of about £20,000, and is built on the site of the Old Town House, and at the same time Kirkgate, which was the narrowest thoroughfare in the town, has been greatly widened. The building, which presents a combination of the French and Scotch Gothic styles, is from a design by Mr. J. C. Walker, Edinburgh, and has two frontages, the one to Bridge street 66 feet, and the other to Kirkgate 144 feet in length. At the north-east corner, and joining the two frontages, is the chief feature of the building—viz., a tower, which measures 23 feet square, and rises to an altitude of 150 feet, having a clock with four illuminated dials, and striking the hours on a powerfully-toned bell, weighing 33 cwt. The keystone of the main entrance represents a dragon, the emblem of St. Margaret, and above this, on the east front of the tower, is a carving of the royal Scottish arms. On the Bridge street elevation are the burgh arms, also canopied niches containing busts representing Malcolm Canmore and Queen Margaret, with King Robert the Bruce and Elizabeth, his second queen, all of which royal personages are buried in the abbey. In the Kirkgate front are placed the eight carved stone panels from the old Town House—viz., the royal arms, the burgh arms, St. Margaret enshrined, the English rose, the Scotch thistle, the Irish harp, the French fleur-de-lys, and the sword and sceptre. Some of these are said to be from the old market cross of 1620. Other carved figures of a fanciful and grotesque character adorn the building. The interior of the building includes a burgh court room and a council chamber, accommodation being also provided for the town clerk and other officials of the burgh. The County buildings stand on the south side of the High street, and are constructed in the Grecian style, with a spire 132 feet in height rising over the front; they contain a sheriff court room, justice of peace court room, and a suite of rooms for the sheriff, sheriff's clerk's office, procurator fiscal's, and other county business. The Post Office is a building in Queen Anne street, built on the site of the old High school. By a gift of £5,000 from Mr. Andrew Carnegie, of New York, a native of Dunfermline, the Carnegie Public Baths were founded in 1875, and the building, which is in Bath street, is from a design prepared by Mr. Andrew Scobie, Dunfermline. A further donation of £8,000 by the same gentleman caused the erection of a Free Library at the corner of St. Margaret and Abbott streets, and is named the Carnegie Free Library; the style of architecture, designated domestic Tudor, is from plans prepared by Mr. J. C. Walker, Edinburgh. The interior consists of the library of 15,500 volumes, reading rooms for ladies and gentlemen, recreation and smoke rooms, lavatories, and dwelling house for the librarian. The memorial stone was laid July 27th, 1881, and the building was opened by the Earl of Rosebery, August 29th, 1883. St. Margaret's Hall, in St. Margaret street, and immediately south of the Carnegie Free Library, was begun in 1876, and completed in 1878, at a cost of about £12,000, from plans prepared by Mr. Starforth, Edinburgh; the style is an adaptation of Early English, and the building contains a large hall capable of seating 1,500 persons, a lecture hall capable of seating 350 persons, billiard rooms, a reading room, and several committee and board rooms. In the large hall there is a splendid organ, purchased and presented by the ladies of the town and district at a cost of over £1,300, and derives its blowing power from an hydraulic engine. The building belongs to the St. Margaret's Hall Company Limited. The Music hall, in Guildhall street, is a large modern erection, used for all kinds of public meetings; the upper hall being 90 feet in length, 50 feet in width and 45 feet in height. The principal hotels are the City Arms, in Bridge street; The Royal, in High street and the St. Margaret's, in St. Margaret street. There is a Cottage Hospital in Nethertown Broad street, containing 20 beds, which was erected at a cost of about £4,500, and opened on September 1st, 1894; it is supported by voluntary subscriptions. The West Fife Joint Hospital for Infectious Diseases, situated at the west end of the town, was opened on November 1st, 1894, and is maintained by the Dunfermline committee of the West of Fife County Council, and local authorities of the burghs of Dunfermline, Inverkeithing and Culross, and contains from 40 to 50 beds.

The Abbey, the church of which is now the High Kirk of the burgh, was founded as a Priory of Benedictines on the site of a Culdee cell in 1080 by Malcolm Canmore, who was buried in the church in 1093; there must have been a church here previous to 1080, as King Malcolm is said to have been married to Queen Margaret in 1070 at Dunfermline: in 1124 it was created an abbey, and in 1224 the abbot received the mitre, and in 1304 most of the abbey buildings were burnt by order of King Edward I. At the Reformation, 1560, the remaining buildings and church, except the nave, which the "New Religion" reserved for their own parish kirk, were destroyed, and only this nave remained until 1821, when a new parish kirk, consisting of chancel, transept and central tower, 100 feet high, was added to the east of the nave, which then became a vestibule to the new church: the west doorway (of the old church) between two western towers is Norman, surmounted by a fine decorated window, and opens into a Norman nave of eight bays, with a north porch containing a rich Norman doorway; this is succeeded by the transept central tower and choir composing the present church, which is Modern Gothic, and under the pulpit of which, beneath the tower, the remains of King Robert Bruce have been re-interred; the nave contains 17 other royal tombs, besides those of the Regents, Thomas, Earl of Moray, and Robert, Duke of Albany: on the south side of the church are some remains of the refectory and cells. The tower has the words "King Robert the Bruce" in massive stone letters, four feet high, round the four sides at the summit. The parish church has been collegiate and under the care of two ministers since 1645.

The Secession church (now the United Presbyterian), which has extended over the greater part of Great Britain, because conspicuous here at an early period of its history, the Rev. Ralph Erskine, one of the parochial clergymen of Dunfermline, being one of the four ministers who first seceded from the Establishment in 1733, and shortly after founded Queen Anne Street church here, which, it is believed, was the first or second of that denomination. The Grammar school was instituted towards the end of the 15th century: in 1873 the school was, by the operation of "The Education (Scotland) Act, 1872," transferred to the burgh School Board, the interest of the original sum of £2,000, which belonged to the school, being made over annually to that body. In 1877 the board, with the approval of the Board of Education, resolved to exclude elementary instruction from the curriculum, and to elevate the school into one for an efficient aid to higher or secondary education. The present High school, with every modern improvement, was erected in Buchanan street at a cost of £7,500, and the school was transferred to it in January, 1886. The board have also erected a school in the west end of the town at a cost of £4,136. Since then a central school has been substituted for the Rolland and Commercial schools, at a cost of £5,143. A new infant department has been (1895) erected at an estimated cost of £2,800. There is also a school originally erected in connection with St. Leonard's steam power weaving factory, but which the board purchased at a cost of £1,200. Altogether there are seven schools under the control of the board, while a supervision is exercised over three other educational institutions. Broomhall, the seat of the Earl of Elgin and Kincardine, and Pitfirrane House, the seat of Sir Peter A. Halkett bart. are in this parish. The market is held on Tuesday for grain, which is disposed of by stock and sample. Fairs are held on the third Tuesday in January, March, April, June, July, September, October and November. The entire parish of Dunfermline comprises 20,764 statute acres; rateable value, £129,072; the population in 1891 was 28,948, including 22,157 in the royal burgh, or 19,647 in the parliamentary burgh, and in 1881 in the parish, 26,568; in the royal burgh, 19,812; estimated population in 1895, 28,667.

Crossford, Halbeath, Townhill, Wellwood, Kingseat and Miles Mark are small villages and hamlets in this parish, from one to three miles distant from Dunfermline. At Halbeath are the colliery and offices of Wallace Brothers, and a board school. At Townhill are the collieries and offices of the Townhill Coal Company and a board school. At Wellwood are the collieries and offices of Messrs. Thomas Spowart and Co. Limited, and a school. At Miles Mark a school has been built by the joint aid of the parish and burgh School Boards, at a cost of £3,000 for 400 children. Population in 1891: Crossford, 511; Halbeath, 767; Townhill, 1,801; Wellwood, 590; Kingseat, 735; and Miles Mark and Park Nook, 482.

Crossgates is a village partly in the parish of Dalgetty and partly in this parish, 4 miles east-north-east from Dunfermline and 4 north from Inverkeithing, with a station on the North British railway. The inhabitants are principally employed in the collieries surrounding the village. The places of worship are an Established and United Presbyterian churches and there is likewise a Board school. Population in 1881, 1,057, and in 1891, 1,165.

DUNSHALT, see AUCHTERMUCHTY.

DYSART is a seaport and parish, extending 3 miles from north to south and lying along the north shore of the Firth of Forth for about 2 miles east to west; it contains the royal and parliamentary burgh and seaport of Dysart, the head of a poor combination, and has a station on the Perth and Dundee section of the North British railway. The parish also comprises a considerable portion of the royal burgh of Kirkcaldy, and is bounded on the north by Kinglassie, east by Wemyss and Markinch and west by Kirkcaldy parish, and is within the small debt court district of Kirkcaldy. Dysart town is 2 miles north-west from Kirkcaldy, on a gentle declivity towards the Firth of Forth. The central street contains many substantial houses, and is of very antique appearance. The streets are lighted by gas supplied by a company formed in 1843. So early as 1546 Dysart is mentioned as one of the principal trading towns on the coast of Fife, and was much noted for the manufacture and export of salt, but this has disappeared. The trade it now enjoys is considerable, and consists in the weaving of ticks, checks and similar linen fabrics, also woollens, tweeds, druggets and winceys. There are large power-loom factories in the burgh, besides two flax spinning mills, and in the vicinity are mines of coal, extensively wrought. The harbour is very good, and there is an excellent wet dock with about 18 feet of water. Coal is the principal export. Dysart was created a royal burgh in the beginning of the 16th century, but the original charter is lost. It is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors, and joins with Kirkcaldy, Kinghorn and Burntisland in returning one member to Parliament. The most remarkable object of antiquity near the town is the castle of Ravenscraig, standing on a steep crag fronting the sea; this castle is alluded to in Sir Walter Scott's "Lay of the Last Minstrel," under the name of Ravensheugh. It was inhabited in Oliver Cromwell's time, and was assaulted by a party of his troops. It has for many years been deserted, and time has reduced it to a ruinous state. Dysart gives the title of earl to a branch of the Murrays of Tullibardine. The Normand Memorial Hall, a stone structure, was erected at a cost of between £5,000 and £6,000, and presented to the town by Mrs. James Normand, in memory of her deceased husband. There is also a Mechanics' Institute. Dysart House is the seat of the Earl of Rosslyn. The area comprises 4,197 acres; rateable value, £51,573; the population in 1891 was 13,626,including 3,022 in the royal burgh of Dysart and 9,839 in the royal burgh of Kirkcaldy; the population of the parish in 1881 was 11,601, of whom 2,645 were in Dysart burgh.

EARLSFERRY, a royal burgh, formerly in the parish of Kilconquhar, but transferred in 1892 to that of Elie, lies at the head of Elie bay, and at the police burgh of that name, which lies farther to the east by about half a mile, is the nearest railway station and post office, Elie being, in fact, a suburb of Earlsferry and possessing the harbour. The royal burgh, which is in the small debt court district of Anstruther, is 13 miles south-east from St. Andrews and 5 east from Largo, and remains in the ecclesiastical parish of Kilconquhar. The date of its erection into a royal burgh is uncertain, as its earliest charter was destroyed by a fire in Edinburgh. A new one was in consequence granted by James IV. by which all its ancient privileges were renewed and confirmed; it is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors. Its trade consists chiefly in the export of grain and potatoes. The National Bank of Scotland Limited has a branch at Elie. Earlsferry consists principally of one main street and commodious residences facing the shore, and enjoys with Elie a high reputation as a seaside resort; the beach is very fine and sandy, bathing and golfing, with a tennis club, being the especial attraction. The rateable value of the burgh is £1,736; the population in 1891 was 304, and in 1881 286.

Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office & Savings Bank, Elie; George Birrell, postmaster. (Railway Sub-Office. Letters should have R.S.O. Fifeshire added to them.) Deliveries, 7.30 & 9.30 a.m. & 6.45 p.m.; dispatches, 6 & 11.40 a.m. & 3.40 & 7 p.m

ELIE is a parish and police burgh and seaport, with a station on the Thornton junction, Anstruther and St. Andrews section of the North British railway. The parish of Elie, which extends 3½ miles along the north shore of the Firth of Forth by about 1½ inland, and is in the Anstruther small debt court district, was enlarged in 1892, under the provisions of the Local Government Act, 1890, so as to include the royal burgh of Earlsferry, of which town the burgh of Elie is really a suburb; the parish boundaries are St. Monance on the east, Kilconquhar on the north and Newburn on the west. The burgh is situated on the north-east part of Elie bay, 14 miles south-east from St. Andrews, 44 north-east from Edinburgh and 5 east from Largo, and is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors. There is a small well-sheltered harbour but no docks. The trade of the district consists in the export of grain and potatoes. The National Bank of Scotland Limited has a branch here. There are golfing links and a good beach, and Elie is a summer resort in conjunction with Earlsferry. At some earlier period the village must have been a place of more importance than now, for in one of the streets near the sea there are some substantial ancient residences, evidently once the habitation of families of distinction. Elie House, the residence of William Baird esq. D.L., J.P. is a fine mansion of stone standing in good grounds. William Baird esq. J.P., D.L. of Elie House, Sir James Malcolm bart. and Rev. William E. C. A. Gourlay are the principal landowners. The area comprises 2,020 acres; rateable value for the burgh and landwards, £10,212 16s. 6d.; the population of the parish was 764 in 1891, including 723 in the police burgh of Elie, and in 1881, 670.

Williamsburgh and Liberty are small hamlets in the parish and form part of the police burgh.

FALKLAND is a parish and royal burgh, with a station on the Thornton, Ladybank and Dundee section of the North British railway, 2½ miles east of the burgh, and known as Falkland road. The burgh lies 25 miles north from Edinburgh, 15 south-east from Perth and 10 south-west from Cupar. The parish, which is in the small debt court district of Auchtermuchty, extends 6 miles from east to west by 4 broad, and is bounded north by Auchtermuchty, west by Strathmiglo, south by Leslie and Markinch, and east by Kettle. The town was erected into a burgh by James II. in 1458, and its charter was confirmed and renewed by James VI. in 1595, in order (in the words of the charter) to "obviate the damage and inconveniences sustained for want of innkeepers and victuallers, by the many prelates, peers, barons, nobles and others of their subjects who come to their country seats." The magistracy consists of a provost, two bailies, a treasurer, a town clerk and nine councillors. Falkland consists principally of one street, the eastern part of which is broad and spacious, but towards the west is narrow. The few good houses are of an antique character, somewhat in keeping with the architecture of the palace, a building well worthy of notice; this for a long time was only a ruin, but has been rescued from total decay and repaired by the late Mr. Bruce, of Nethill. It is now (1895) undergoing complete restoration at the expense of the Marquis of Bute. The royal family of Scotland resided here occasionally up to the time of Charles II., who called here on his return from the continent in 1650. James V. died here in 1542. A dungeon is shown in which it is said the Duke of Rothesay was starved to death by his uncle Albany. Tradition reports that this victim of oppression was supported for a length of time by two females, the wives of tradesmen of Falkland, one of whom supplied bread to him through a chink in the wall of the prison, while the other conveyed the milk from her breast by means of an oaten reed; being at length discovered, these supplies were cut off and he perished of hunger. In 1715, it is said, the famous Rob Roy garrisoned the palace with a party of Macgregors, and laid the country under heavy contributions. The manufacture of linen forms an important branch of trade here, and the chief occupation of the industrious class is weaving. A town hall was erected in 1804, in which balls and other public assemblages take place. A large common, which belongs to Falkland, and on which the inhabitants had a right to turn their cattle, &c. was some years ago divided among the heritors, and is nearly all enclosed. The parish church was erected through the liberality of the late O. T. Bruce esq. at an expense, it is said, of £7,000: it is a fine structure, surmounted by an elegant spire; and to perpetuate the memory of this gentleman a monument has been erected on Black Hill, near the Lomonds. A memorial has been erected in the square behind the palace by the executors of the late Mrs. Bruce, to the memory of her father, Colonel Robert Bruce, and her uncle, John Bruce, from whom she inherited the estates of Nethill, Falkland Wood and Grangehill, near Kinghorn. The House of Falkland, erected by the late Mr. Bruce, is one of the finest mansions in the county; the grounds are tastefully laid out, and are annually resorted to by large numbers of visitors. The house and estates are now the property of the Marquess of Bute. The Lomond hills in this district are cone-shaped; the eastern Lomond, which is the most regular and beautiful, is about 1,450 feet above the level of the sea, and appears to have been fortified. The western Lomond is higher, and has on its top a large cairn. Fairs were formerly held in the parish on the second Tuesday in January, third Thursday in March, second Monday in May, third Friday in June, first Thursday in August, last Tuesday in September and Friday before Edinburgh Hallow fair in November; but since railways became general through the country these fairs have fallen into disuse. The Marquess of Bute K.T. George Johnstone esq. and the Misses Aytoun, of Purin Lathrisk, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 8,265 acres; rateable value of parish, £10,272; of burgh, £2,841; the population in 1891 was 2,470, including 959 in the royal burgh, and in 1881, 2,698, including 972 in the royal burgh.

Freuchie is a village in this parish. The manufacture of linen is carried on here. A United Presbyterian and a quoad sacra church are in the village. There is also a public school. Falkland road is the nearest railway station, one mile distant. Population in 1891, 913, and in 1881, 1,059.

Newton of Falkland is a hamlet about midway between Falkland and Freuchie, where there is an extensive trade carried on in brewing. Falkland road is the nearest railway station, 2 miles distant.

INVERKEITHING is a burgh and parish and seaport on the north shore of the Firth of Forth, in the poor combination and small debt court district of Dunfermline. The town is a royal and parliamentary burgh, with a station on the main line of the North British railway, the Forth railway bridge terminating at North Queensferry in this parish. The burgh is 11 miles north-west from Edinburgh, 13 south-west from Kirkcaldy and 4 south-east from Dunfermline, and occupies a slight hill sloping up from the north-west side of Inverkeithing Bay, commanding an extensive view of the south side of the Forth. The parish extends 6 miles from north to south by 5 miles broad; the outlying portion having been transferred by Boundary Order 67 to Dunfermline, by which it is bounded on the north-west and on the north-east by Dalgetty. So early as the days of David I., Inverkeithing was a royal residence, and received a charter of confirmation in the reign of William the Lion, confirming charters of earlier but unknown dates; a number of intervening charters were confirmed by one from James VI., in 1598. The government is vested in a provost, or sheriff, two bailies, a dean of guild, and a treasurer, elected by the councillors. The burgh, in conjunction with Dunfermline, Stirling, Culross and South Queensferry, sends one member to the Imperial Parliament. The trade of the burgh consists of fire-clay works, paper mills, tanning, rope making and shipbuilding; connected with the latter branch is a patent slip, of great use in repairing vessels. Freestone and whinstone are abundant in this neighbourhood, and of excellent quality, and considerable quantities of each are annually exported. The harbour is capacious, and the bay is noted as a place of security in all winds. The private harbour of East Ness affords additional accommodation, and has about 18 feet of water at spring tides. The town consists chiefly of two streets, which are lighted by gas; the town house comprises a gaol and apartments for the courts. A branch of the Clydesdale Bank Limited, is established here. There are many remains of antiquity, some of which are coeval with the earliest periods of Scottish history. Among these is the "Inns," or old Palace, which is said to have been the residence of Annabella Drummond, Queen of Robert III., who died at Inverkeithing. This Queen is supposed to have presented the burgh with its cross, on the occasion of the marriage of her son, the Duke of Rothesay, with the daughter of the Earl of Douglas, in 1398: the top of the cross is adorned with shields charged with the royal arms of that Queen and the Earl of Douglas. The island of Inchgarvie, just below the Forth bridge, contains the ruins of a castle partially destroyed during Cromwell's campaign. The places of worship are a church of the Establishment and one for a United Presbyterian congregation. The parish church contains a beautiful font, said to have been the gift of Queen Annabella, and discovered in 1806, when the church was undergoing a series of repairs. There is a large public school under the School Board. A fair is held on the first Friday in August. The Earl of Elgin, the Earl of Hopetoun and the Hon. Hew H. Haldane-Duncan-Mercer-Henderson are the principal landowners. The area comprises 4,482 acres; rateable value, £41,242; the population of the parish in 1891 was 2,943, including 1,367 in the Royal burgh, or 1,676 in the port, and in 1881, 2,565 in the parish, including 2,565 in the port.

Hillend, James Town and Rosyth are hamlets in the parish of Inverkeithing. At the latter place are the ruins of the old castle of Rosyth, the celebrated residence of Margaret, spouse of Malcolm Canmore, and subsequently of the Stuart family. The rock on which it stands is connected with the mainland by a causeway, and a stone slab, placed in the wall over what appears to have been the principal entrance, bears the date of 1561. In Sir Walter Scott's novel of "The Abbot," this castle is alluded to, and tradition points it out as being the birthplace of the wife of Oliver Cromwell. It is now the property of the Earl of Hopetoun, whose noble mansion stands on the opposite shore.

North Queensferry, in the parish of Inverkeithing, is 2 miles south from Inverkeithing, and is well known to travellers as the port and point of land opposite to Queensferry (or South Queensferry), in Linlithgowshire, and a steamer passes between the two several times daily. The Forth bridge, for carrying the North British railway over the Firth of Forth, forms a connection at this place. It was opened by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, on the 4th of March, 1890, the cost of its erection being about £3,000,000. Two of the spans of this gigantic undertaking are 1,710 feet each in length, and have a height of 150 feet above high water at spring tides. There are two other spans of 680 feet, fifteen of 168 feet, four of 57 feet and three of 25 feet each: the total length with the viaduct approaches is a mile and a half (for full particulars see Queensferry, Linlithgowshire). By its erection the direct journey north can be taken without break as formerly, when passengers had to cross the Forth by ferry from Granton to Burntisland. A short distance to the west of the village is the anchorage ground, resorted to by vessels in stress of weather or contrary winds, called "Saint Margaret's Hope." Here is a station of the coast-guard, and a fishing ground for a kind of sprat, of which quantities are taken. There are large whinstone quarries, employing a number of men. Population in 1891, 489.

KETTLE is a parish and village, the latter 4 miles east from Falkland and 17 south from Dundee, with a station, called King's Kettle, on the main line of the North British railway. The parish extends about 9 miles east to west by 3 broad; is in the small debt court district of Cupar, and is bounded north by Collassie and Cults, east by Largo, south by Kennoway and Markinch, and west by Falkland. The name of Kettle is of very obscure etymology; it was anciently called Catul, or Katul, and in common phraseology it is invariably entitled "the Kettle." At one period the parish was denominated King's Kettle, from being the property of the Crown. This district forms a large portion of that rich and beautiful territory on the north side of the Howe of Fife; it is exceedingly fertile with a slight exception. The river Eden bounds the parish on nearly the whole of the northern side. The manufacture of linen is the principal trade carried on here; George Johnston, of Lathrisk, John Balfour, of Balbirnie, H. V. Haig, of Ramornie, and James Home Rigg, of Downfield Kettle, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 7,612 acres; rateable value, £11,722; the population in 1891 was 1,939, including 558 in the village of Kettle and 478 in Kettlebridge village, and in 1881 the figures were 2,054, 598 and 451.

Kettlebridge is a village in this parish, about one mile south of the church, and about half a mile from the village is the hamlet of Balmalcolm, where there is a Free Church

KILCONQUHAR is a parish and village, having a station on the Thornton junction, Anstruther and St.Andrew's section, of the North British railway, is 4 miles east of Largo and 10 south of St. Andrew's. The parish is in the small debt court district of Anstruther, and contains the village of Colinsburgh (which see); it extends about 6 miles from north to south by a breadth varying from 2 to 3 miles, and is bounded south by Elie, west by Newburn and Largo, north by Ceres and Cameron, and east by Carnbee. Until the 15th May, 1892, the royal burgh of Earlsferry was in Kilconquhar parish, but the Boundary Commissioners then transferred a detached portion of Elie parish (consisting of Muircambus and part of Charleston estates) to Kilconquhar, and in exchange gave to Elie parish all the land formerly belonging to Kilconquhar to the south of Cockle Mill Burn and the North British railway. This area included the burgh of Earlsferry, which now forms part of Elie parish. Coal and lime are extensively worked in the parish. The chief seats in the parish are, Balcarres House, the seat of the Earl of Crawford, about one mile north of Colinsburgh, built in the Tudor style of architecture, and situated on a southern slope about 3 miles from the sea-coast; Kilconquhar House, the residence of the Earl of Lindsay; Charleton House, of Colonel John Anstruther-Thomson. The church has a fine square tower 80 feet high. Balcarres Craig, near Balcarres House, is a remarkable hill, rising abruptly 200 feet above the level of the land. At the lower end of the parish, close to the sea coast, the hill of Kincraig rises to a height of 200 feet above the level of the sea, and in its rocks are several large caves. Kilconquhar Loch is a fine sheet of water, three-quarters of a mile in length and nearly the same in breadth, and about 2 miles in circumference, with two small islands, which harbour swans and wild fowl. The Earls of Crawford and Lindsay, Col. John Anstruther-Thomson, William Baird esq. and David Adams esq. are the principal landowners. The area comprises about 6,000 acres; rateable value £12,893. The population in 1891 was 1,746, and in 1881, 1,767, in both cases excluding Earlsferry, but including 345 in 1891 and 350 in 1881 in the village of Kilconquhar.

KILMANY is a parish and village, the latter 5 miles north of Cupar, and 5 south-west of Newport. The parish, which is in the small debt court district of Cupar, extends 6 miles from north-east to south-west by a breadth varying from 1 to 3 miles; it is bounded north by Balmerino, north-east by Forgan, east by Logie, south by Cupar and west by Creich. Cupar is the nearest railway station for the south of the parish, and is on the North British main line; the nearest to Kilmany village is Wormit station. With the exception of a few acres which are chiefly woodland, the entire parish is in a high state of cultivation, being well watered and drained by numerous streams. In 1680, David Hackston, at that time proprietor of the estate of Rathillet and a bigoted leader of the Covenanters, was executed for complicity in the murder of Archbishop Sharpe, of St. Andrew's. David Gillespie, of Mountquharie, is the principal landowner. The area comprises 5,343 acres; rateable value, £7,204; the population in 1891 was 588, and in 1881, 634.

The Town Hall, which includes council, reading and amusement rooms, was erected and presented to the burgh by Stephen Williamson esq. and the representatives of the late Jas. Fowler esq. The representatives of the late Col. Anstruther, Walker Morrison esq. of Falfield, Sir Thomas Erskine bart. of Cambo, and Charles C. Bethune esq. of Rennyhill, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 3,776 acres; rateable value, £10,370. A branch of the Union Bank of Scotland Lim. is established here, and there are rope and twine and worsted and woollen factories. The town, although irregularly built and the streets narrow, contains some good houses. The population in 1891 was 2,007, and in 1881, 1,985.

KINGHORN is a seaport and a royal, parliamentary and police burgh, also a parish, 3 miles south from Kirkcaldy and 2½ east-by-north from Burntisland, and has a station on the Edinburgh, Thornton and Dundee section of the North British railway. The parish extends 4½ miles from north to south by about 4 wide; it is in the poor combination and small debt court district of Kirkcaldy, and is bounded south by Burntisland, west by Aberdour and Auchtertool, and north by Abbotshall and part of Kirkcaldy. Kinghorn was invested with the privileges of a royal burgh by King David I., and about that time was said to have been a royal residence. It is governed by a provost, two bailies, a treasurer, and six councillors. The burgh, in conjunction with those of Dysart, Kirkcaldy and Burntisland, returns one member to Parliament. There are two principal streets in the town, one running from east to west and the other from south to north. An elegant edifice answers the purpose of a town house. The school house contains school rooms and a library and museum. There is also a branch of the British Linen Company Bank established here. The harbour has fallen to decay, and the nearest now is about half a mile distant, at Petty-Cur, which for many years was the ferry place for Edinburgh, now transferred to Burntisland. In 1887 the municipal authorities purchased Links Park, adjoining the town, for public and recreation grounds, at a cost of £1,050, with £300 additional in laying out the golf course, bowling green and tennis court. About a mile to the eastward of Kinghorn is the Kirkcaldy Combination Poorhouse for the parishes of Kirkcaldy, Abbotshall, Burntisland and Kinghorn; it occupies a commanding situation near the coast. (Further particulars will be found in the account of Kirkcaldy.) We may also state for the curious, that this poorhouse was the first institution of the kind assessed for the poor rates in Scotland. The case arose in consequence of the other three parishes refusing to pay the rates assessed by the parish of Kinghorn, and after being brought before the Lord Ordinary, was, upon appeal, carried to the second division of the Court of Session, and a decree given in favour of Kinghorn, the expenses in the case, amounting to nearly £300, being defrayed by the parishes of Kirkcaldy, Abbotshall and Burntisland. The places of worship are a church of the Establishment, a Free church and a United Presbyterian church. The old Established church, which has occupied the site from time immemorial, has undergone restoration at an expense of £3,000. There are also commodious public schools situated in the centre of the town. About one mile from Kinghorn, on the Burntisland road, is a monument in the form of a Celtic cross, to commemorate the death of Alexander III., who was killed by falling from his horse in 1286. This monument was raised by public subscription, among the subscribers being H.M. the Queen. The inscription reads, "To the Illustrious Alexander III., the last of Scotland's Celtic Kings, who was accidentally killed near this spot, March 19th, MCCLXXXVI. Erected on the Sex-centenary of his death."

There is a strong battery at Inchkeith, which island forms part of the parish of Kinghorn, distant about three miles from Petty-Cur. It also has a large harbour, erected by government at a considerable cost, and a lighthouse with a revolving light on the highest point of land standing 235 feet above the sea level. Certain writers say Inchkeith was so called from an old noble family named Keith, while others connect it with Guidi. Here, they supposed, was raised the town or fortress of Guida, described by Bede, more than 1,100 years ago, as situated in the middle of the great arm of the sea which runs into Britain from the east. About the year 700 a church or monastery, founded by St. Adamnan, successor to St. Columba, in the abbacy of Iona, was erected on the island. Inchkeith was seized by the English in 1547, and a fort was built on it, which was taken by the French during the regency of Mary, queen of James V.

The area of the parish comprises 5,212 acres, and in 1891 had a population of 3,789; and in 1881, 3,650, of whom 2,036 in 1891 and 1,790 in 1881 were in the parliamentary and police burgh; and 1,569 in 1891 and 1,423 in 1881 in the royal burgh; the rateable value of the burgh is £2,023.

KIRKCALDY,

WITH ABBOTSHALL, CHAPEL, PATHHEAD, SINCLAIRTOWN AND GALLATOWN.

KIRKCALDY is a royal, parliamentary and police burgh, a seaport and head of a parish, of a poor combination and of a small debt court district; it has a station on the Edinburgh, Thornton and Ladybank section of the North British railway, 12 miles east of Dunfermline. The parish of Kirkcaldy is 3 miles in extent from north to south, by one mile wide, and bounded north and east by Dysart, south and west by Abbotshall, and north-west by Auchterderran, is situated on the northern shores of the Firth of Forth, stretching along the base of a range of rising ground to the extent of upwards of 3 miles. By an Act of Parliament the suburbs of Abbotshall, Pathhead, Gallatown and Sinclairtown are included within the boundaries of the burgh, including portions of the parishes of Kirkcaldy, Abbotshall, Kinghorn and Dysart, and the quoad sacra parishes of St. James, Invertiel, Raith and Pathhead. The civic government of the town, which was made a royal burgh by Charles I. is vested in a town council consisting of 27 members, of whom one is provost and admiral of the burgh and harbour, four bailies, one dean of guild, and one treasurer. The council are also commissioners of police under the General Police Act, and local authority under the Health Act. The management of the harbour is vested in a board of commissioners, fourteen in number, consisting of the provost and bailies and others. The burgh is conjoined with Kinghorn, Dysart and Burntisland in sending one member to Parliament. The sheriff holds a court every Wednesday for the disposal of ordinary debts recovery, and small debt cases. The justices of the peace also sit here for trial of offences within the Kirkcaldy district of county, and their licensing courts are also held here. The meetings of the County Council for the district also take place here. From a remote date the town of Kirkcaldy has sustained great vicissitudes and fluctuations in its commerce and prosperity. When Charles I. erected it anew into a royal burgh, it had, according to tradition, 100 ships belonging to it, and ranked as the sixth place of maritime importance in Scotland; but in 1673 the number of vessels in its possession had decreased considerably. On the return of peace in 1763, the trade of the port revived, and the number of shipping consequently increased and progressively augmented, so that in 1792 it boasted 26 vessels; from this period Kirkcaldy has gradually risen into repute, both as a port and a manufacturing town. The principal importations are flax, timber, grain &c.; the exports are floor cloth, linoleum, linen, yarn, machinery and coal. The number of vessels belonging to the port has for some years been on the decline again. Vessels from this port were employed in the Davis Straits whale fishery for many years, but this trade is now discontinued. A branch from the main line of railway traverses the entire length of the harbour—a great convenience to operations of loading and unloading vessels. The harbour is dry at low water, but at full tide is capable of admitting vessels of large burden. A harbour at Seafield, two miles west of the town, was in course of construction by the Caledonian Railway Co. but owing to the bill being thrown out the works were stopped, and the harbour, which was in an advanced state, abandoned, the North British Railway Company, who opposed the bill, having paid over £90,000 as compensation. In 1894, 21 vessels, aggregating 1,171 tons, were registered in this port, and 4 vessels, equal 1,072 tons, were built; the number of fishing boats registered at the port was 595, aggregating 7,776 tons, and employing 1,664 men and boys, and 1,037 extra hands; there were also 8 steam trawlers. The custom house, having control over a considerable line of coast, extending from Aberdour to Anstruther, has been removed to Burntisland. There is, however, an office here. The prominent trade of Kirkcaldy and neighbourhood bears an intimate affinity with that of Dundee, consisting of the spinning of flax, tow, jute, and the weaving of linen goods for home and foreign consumption; striped hollands, dowlas, ticks, checks, sailcloths &c. are amongst the fabrics produced, and in the manufacture of which there are several extensive power-loom factories in full operation; there are also several bleaching fields and dye works, and also china and earthenware factories, where a superior class of goods is made. Kirkcaldy is now the centre of the floor cloth and linoleum manufacture of the kingdom. The other branches include brass and iron founding, machine making, and a considerable corn, malt and meal trade. There are branches of five banking establishments, namely, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited (who have also each a branch at Pathhead), the Bank of Scotland, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, and the British Linen Company. There is also a branch of the Kirkcaldy Savings Bank. From the narrow dimensions of the site on which it stands, the inhabitants have from the first been necessitated to build their habitations in a continuous line along the shore, though without much regard to the regularity of their structure; and having thence elongated the town most disproportionately, the place from an early period has been styled "the lang toon o' Kirkcaldy," in familiar allusion to its appearance. Though formerly limited to this long street and a few narrow diverging lanes, houses were in time erected on the ascent behind, or near to the shore in front; and it now comprises many well-built cross streets and detached dwellings. The streets are well paved, and lighted with gas. In 1829 a building of large dimensions was completed to supersede the old town house; it contains a hall for burgh and district meetings, a burgh court and record room, an office for the town clerk, and other apartments. The Fife County Council have erected (at a cost of £6,000) in Whyte's causeway, a splendid suite of buildings, opened May, 1894. Here the sheriff holds a court every Wednesday. The district committee meetings of the County Council are also held here, and the Justice of Peace Court. There is a good hotel. Adam Smith, author of "The Wealth of Nations," was born here in the year 1723. A large Public Hall has been erected in St. Brycedale avenue; in the same pile of buildings is also the Beveridge Hall and Library, built with money left for this purpose by the late Michael Beveridge esq. of Beechwood, provost of Kirkcaldy. Provost Beveridge also gifted to the inhabitants a fine public park, some 100 acres in extent, with artificial lake in centre, which in winter is used as a skating pond. The Corn Exchange, in Cowan street, the first stone of which was laid with masonic honours in May, 1859, is now used only for public meetings, concerts &c. The Combination Poorhouse is a conspicuous building, beautifully situated on the lands of Abden, in the parish of Kinghorn, commanding an extensive view of the Firth of Forth. It was erected in 1849, and is for 130 inmates, and was opened May, 1850. The total cost considerably exceeded £5,000, and it is the joint property of the parishes of Kirkcaldy, Abbotshall, Burntisland and Kinghorn, nearly half being held by the parish of Kirkcaldy, and is vested in the hands of the Parish Council. The Swan Memorial, a building of red stone, has been erected at the bottom of Kirkwynd, and will serve as a memorial to the late Provost Swan, and supply a set of rooms for the Young Men's Christian Association, to whom the building belongs, having been erected by them with funds they had in hand, aided by an amount granted from the Provost Swan Fund given on condition of its being designated a memorial to him. Provost Swan was for upwards of half a century connected with the municipal life of the town, the latter half of which he was provost.

The historic parish church of Kirkcaldy stands on rising ground in the centre of the town, the principal feature of the building being the fine Norman tower, dating from the middle of the 13th century. This tower is part of the old church of St. Brisse, dedicated in A.D.1244: there is in the south porch a monument in marble commemorating the work of George Gillespie, one of the commissioners to the Westminster Assembly, and one of the most distinguished of its members. There are two very handsome stained windows, designed by Sir E. Burne-Jones, and executed by William Morris, of London. The present building was erected in 1807. St. James's church, built in 1841 as a chapel for the original seceders and sold by them in 1853, when Mr. James Drysdale and Mr. James Jamieson bought it and handed it over to the Church of Scotland. Opposite the Parish church is St. Brycedale Free church, the style of architecture being pure Gothic, and the cost of the building (exclusive of the site, which is valued at about £8,000), was fully £22,000. It contains many fine stained memorial windows, two of them being by Sir E. Burne-Jones bart. The other places of worship are the parish churches of Invertiel, Abbotshall, Raith, St. James, St. Clairtown and Pathhead, five Free churches, four United Presbyterian, one Episcopalian, one Original Secession, one Congregational, three Baptist, one Wesleyan, one Unitarian and one Roman Catholic. Bethelfield Congregation is among the oldest in the town, having celebrated its ter-jubilee in 1887; it is illustrious among other things as being the church in which the famous Rev. Robert Shirra ministered for many years. The principal educational establishments consist of four schools erected by the School Board of the burgh, at a cost of about £26,000, and capable of containing upwards of 2,700 pupils; the High School, built on the site of the old burgh school by M. B. Nairn esq. of Rankeilour, chairman of the Kirkcaldy School Board, under Dr. Scott and a large staff of assistants: pupils receive a thorough classical, scientific, musical and technical education, and are prepared for entering the universities (this school includes an elementary department); and four schools under the charge of the School Board of the parliamentary burgh of Dysart, for about 900 pupils. Until recently there were three schools which were established under the will of the late Robert Philp esq. of Edenshead, for instructing children of both sexes selected from amongst the poorest inhabitants, and the property bequeathed by this gentleman for erecting and sustaining schools in these places is estimated at nearly £70,000. These schools have been done away with, and arrangements made with the School Board by which children entitled to this benefaction are educated at the board schools, and receive clothing as before, free. A number of bursaries are also provided for the purpose of enabling the children of poor parents attending High School, or prosecuting their studies at the universities. There is also a charitable trust by John Thomson, for educating poor children, and for annuities for the support of poor inhabitants. Four newspapers are issued here, The Fife Free Press, Fifeshire Advertiser, Kirkcaldy Mail and Kirkcaldy Times. The market, which is a stock market for the sale of grain, is held on Saturday. Raith, a mansion with a lofty tower and fine grounds, is the residence of Ronald C. M. Ferguson esq. D.L., M.P. The area of the parish comprises 1,177 acres; rateable value, £52,749. The population of the entire parish in 1891 was 9,994, and in 1881, 8,528. The royal burgh had a total population in 1891 of 27,151, 9,887 of whom were in Kirkcaldy parish. The parliamentary burgh has a population in 1891 of 17,324.

Abbotshall, although a distinct parish, is now included in the burgh of Kirkcaldy, and in Kirkcaldy poor combination. Its principal street, called Links street (nearly a mile long), runs west in a direct line with the High street of Kirkcaldy. Here are dye works, an earthenware manufactory, and a large corn mill. The parish, the extent of which is about 2 miles either way, rises gradually from the coast northward into tolerably high ground. The present parish church was built in 1788 to replace the original church erected at the first disjunction of the parish in 1650. The small village of Chapel is in this parish. The area comprises 4,135 acres; the population in 1891 was 6,934 and in 1881, 6,435.

Invertiel is a quoad sacra parish formed from those of Abbotshall and Kinghorn. There is an Established church and also a Free church. Population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891, 2,246.

Pathhead, now included within the burgh, is in the parish of Dysart and is situated chiefly on the face of a hill, looking towards the Firth of Forth; it is joined by two other districts, respectively named Gallatown and Sinclairtown, also in the same burgh and parish. The manufacture of linen goods is briskly followed in these places. Dowlas, ticks, sheeting &c. are produced; flax spinning is also carried on to some extent. At Sinclairtown are three earthenware manufactories. At Pathhead are branches of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, and the National Bank of Scotland Limited. A cottage hospital was erected in 1890, in Nether street, at the expense of Michael B. Nairn esq. The places of worship are an Established church, two Free churches, and a Baptist chapel. A board school has been erected in Smeaton road and one each in Sinclairtown and Gallatown. The Earl of Rosslyn is chief landowner. The rateable value of the parish of Dysart, in which Pathhead &c. are included, was in 1894-5, gross £52,803; net £40,489; the population of portion of Kirkcaldy burgh, in Dysart parish, in 1891 was 9,839.
